ASSERTS OAKES SLAYER HAILED BY DE MARIGNY

Queries on Death Trial Disclosed.

NASSAU, Bahamas, Oct. 23 (AP).—The police lieutenant who guarded Alfred de Marigny during the investigation of the slaying of Harry Oakes quoted the accused man today as commenting that his wealthy father-in-law "should have been killed, anyhow."

John Campbell Douglas, assistant police superintendent, told a Bahamas Supreme court jury of a conversation with De Marigny after the British baronet's bludgeoned body was discovered in a bedroom of his country estate, Westbourne, July 8.

Speaking with a Scottish accent, Douglas said De Marigny described his strained relations with his father-in-law and blamed the situation on one of his two divorced wives.

Charges Wife Told Tales.

"Ruth caused the relations by telling tales," quoted the man who escorts the handsome defendant on his trips to and from his prison cell while the trial is in progress.

The conversation, Douglas continued, took place during an auto drive July 9 from De Marigny's chicken farm to Westbourne.

Once inside Westbourne, Douglas related, De Marigny observed:

"Harry, the old ——, should have been killed, anyhow."

A few feet from the witness stand, De Marigny lounged in the barred prisoner's dock while Douglas testified.

Douglas said he was detailed to watch De Marigny late the night following that on which Oakes was slain and spent the rest of the night at the latter's home. After dawn, he continued, they went to De Marigny's chicken farm.

De Marigny picked his teeth, watching Douglas closely, as the lieutenant continued his testimony.

Asks About Murder Trials.

They went from the chicken farm to Westbourne, the officer related, where he had instructions to take De Marigny.

While waiting for officers to call De Marigny, Douglas said he and the son-in-law talked.

"He asked me whether a man could be convicted in an English court if the murder weapon were not found," Douglas said.

"I said, 'Don't worry about it, Freddy'."

The prosecution never has indicated that the weapon with which Oakes was bludgeoned has been found.

Douglas continued:

"The accused asked me on the porch of Westbourne whether a man could be convicted on circumstantial evidence.

"I replied, 'Yes, I think so'."

The conversation took place about

NANCY, BARRED FROM COURT, SHOWS STRAIN OF DE MARIGNY TRIAL

NASSAU, Bahamas, Oct. 23 (AP).—Comely Nancy Oakes de Marigny, a 19 year old girl torn by the crosscurrents of a family tragedy which finds her husband on trial for the murder of her father, today began to show the strain of her bitter experience. Barred from the courtroom because she will testify later on behalf of her husband, Nancy has to wait outside in suspense during the first week's sensational hearings.

The young wife of Alfred de Marigny had a heartbreaking experience today when she failed to make connections with her mother, Mrs. Eunice Oakes, at the airport when the widow arrived from the United States. Mrs. Oakes will testify next week against the son-in-law she blames for the family's troubles. Nancy wept when she learned her mother, who had not expected her, had left by another door as she watched for her in a waiting room. Distressed by reports of an estrangement between them, she told of her great love for her mother.

The defendant's young wife passed up a party last night and disclosed she even has foregone luncheons at a Nassau hotel because "it caused criticism for me to lunch there and criticism hurts."

Aussies Rout Japs Fleeing to Seacoast

ALLIED HDQ. IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Oct. 24 [Sunday]—(AP).—Japanese forces seeking a line of escape to the sea from interior jungle positions have been thrown back in the vicinity of Katika, near the coast north of Finshhafen, New Guinea.

The reversal, announced today by headquarters, was the first to be reported since the enemy attempt was opened in considerable force earlier in the week. The setback quickly followed a pulverizing air blow in the sector which killed many troops.

The Japanese now have abandoned Katika, a short distance from Finschhafen's airdrome, and have left behind 510 dead.

Planes Force Retreat.

The setback at Katika added to the gravity of the enemy position farther inland at Sattelberg, which took the bulk of Thursday's aerial pounding aimed at reënforcements.

The Sattelberg Japanese have been seeking to cut thru elements of the Australian 9th division and contact their coastal forces.

The heavy air pressure—Liberators dropped 221 tons of bombs on troop concentrations Thursday—and ground pressure on the Australians have compelled the Japanese to withdraw 1,100 yards west of Katika.

In the air, Australian manned Kittyhawks pounded the Gasmata, New Britain, airdrome of the enemy 135 miles east of the New Guinea jungle front.

Fly 2,000 Miles to Celebes.

Liberators flew more than 2,000 miles round trip to strike Japan's nickel mining center of Pomelaa, Dutch Celebes. The raid was in daylight, a daring procedure since the Liberators must fly unescorted. Their 24 tons of bombs set fire to the leaching plant and smoke from it rose 7,000 feet. Buildings near the jetties also were set ablaze. All the Liberators returned safely.

Attack Supply Barges.

For the third straight day, allied air attention was given to the western tip of New Britain, which is nearest to MacArthur's positions on New Guinea. At Borgen Bay, where 30 supply barges were blasted in two previous raids, reconnaissance bombers attacked more of these craft.

Continued air support was given Australian troops now engaged in a slow jungle advance along the Ramu valley toward Madang, the next enemy coastal base of importance on beyond Finschhafen. Fighter patrols over main roads near Bogadjim, Madang's defense outpost, surprised a column of Japanese trucks and strafed them at low level.

MELITOPOL, KEY TO CRIMEA, WON IN REDS' DRIVE

LONDON, Oct. 24 [Sunday]—(AP).—The Russian army captured the key city of Melitopol after 11 days of street fighting and swept on southward today thru the flat, muddy plains toward the Crimea and the Black sea.

Moscow reports said soviet motorized columns swung out in pursuit of the Germans in a race to cut off the Crimea and its estimated 500,000 Nazi defenders at Perekop and Kherson after smashing the last-ditch enemy stand in Melitopol.

The Germans lost more than 20,000 men in their vain attempt to establish a winter line in the ravaged city.

The Germans had rushed infantry divisions, tanks, and artillery into the city, hoping to halt the Russians, but bitter hand-to-hand fighting forced back the defenders street by street.

Threaten Dnieper Nazis.

The Red triumph brought a new threat to the large German armies cornered approximately 50 miles to the northwest in the great bend of the Dnieper.

The soviet daily war bulletin, recorded by the soviet monitor, reported continuing advances both south and southeast of Kremenchug, where they last were reported only 15 miles from the ore center of Krivoi Rog, and south of Pereyaslav, where they began developing a new break-thru on Friday.

Still farther north, in the Richitsa area west of Gomel, the Russians made advances of several miles in some directions.

Free 50 Villages.

Below Kiev, swift tank spearheads smashed out from their bridgehead at Pereyaslav to lengthen the northern pincer arm around the Dnieper bend. More than 50 towns were liberated.

Kiev, the Ukrainian capital and principal German base along the middle Dnieper, is slowly being throttled in a Red army pincers movement, and Gomel, strategic enemy defense base, has been bypassed in the soviet offensive into White Russia.

Fall of these centers would mean an end to the German reign in the Ukraine, the Crimea, and even in all southern Russia.

Retreat to Sea Indicated.

Regardless of whether the Germans decide to stand in the Crimea or escape over the Perekop isthmus, it appeared the Nazi forces which had been entrenched along the Zaporozhe-Melitopol-Crimea railway will now have to fall back to the lower Dnieper river all the way to the Black sea at Kherson.

The town of Perekop, at the head of the narrow neck of the Crimean peninsula and now the Nazis' only land escape route from the Crimea, lies only 100 miles from where the Red army pounded thru Melitopol. The intervening country is the Prichernomorsk plain, which offers practically no natural barriers to the Russians and has no large, readily defensible towns.

The big port of Kherson itself, at the Black sea mouth of the Dnieper, is only 135 miles away.

Long Way to Victory: Eisenhower

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Gen. Eisenhower, speaking from Algiers on a war bond program, warned the people of the United States tonight that "it will be a long, long way to final victory over a rough, bitter road."

Gen. Eisenhower added: "This is a hard war, a bitter, bloody war. Make no mistake. Our men know it and are ready for it. But they want to be assured above all else that the home front is behind them."

The general said the success of the recent third war bond drive had cheered the soldiers on the fighting front, but added:

"I think my men would like me to be brutally honest and tell you that sometimes in the past they have worried about how you feel," Gen Eisenhower said. "They know that it is your war as much as theirs."

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. also spoke from Algiers on the same program.

ON THE VOLTURNO RIVER FRONT, Oct. 21 [Delayed]—(AP).—Gen. Eisenhower, visiting the 5th army for the second time since the beginning of the Italian campaign, came under shellfire today en route to forward positions along the Volturno river.

The commander in chief in the Mediterranean theater toured the left flank of the front and is preparing to visit the center and right sectors tomorrow.

German artillery shelled a road north of Grazzanise and one shell exploded in a field opposite Eisenhower's jeep. There were no known casualties.

Traveling in his own military plane, Eisenhower landed at one of the airports near the front where Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark, 5th army commander, met him. He lunched with Clark and Maj. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, Clark's chief of staff, and spent nearly an hour studying maps.

Eisenhower spent the night in a tent at the front line.

COULDN'T KEEP HER IDEA DOWN

Navy Mother Wins 15th Tribune Job Award.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

A mother who went to work in the Green River Ordnance plant at Dixon, Ill., because she had two sons in the navy and wanted to do something to help them, was assigned to inspect and wrap cartridges used to fire rifle grenades. The cartridges were packed in small boxes sealed with tape which included a paper tab that a soldier could jerk to open the box quickly.

It was a simple process; about the last that any one might have thought could be improved.

But Mrs. Vesta Stoudt, the mother with two navy sons noted that the paper tab tore away from the tape. This would compel a soldier to dig to open a box of cartridges.

How much better it would be if the tab were made of strong cloth, Mrs. Stoudt thought.

15th Winner of Award.

Because she had the initiative to convert her thought into action, Mrs. Stoudt today will receive the Chicago Tribune War Workers Award for September—the 15th person to get the award. Presentation of the diamond studded gold Victory pin symbolical of the award will be made by Maj. Charles S. Tolson of the ordnance department at an all-day war demonstration in Dixon today.

Mrs. Stoudt related that when she first mentioned her idea, fellow workers said:

"O, forget it. Don't be silly. You can't do anything about the government."

"Well, the government can make mistakes as well as anyone else," Mrs. Stoudt snapped back.

Whereupon Mrs. Stoudt wrote to President Roosevelt, saying:

"Now your son, my son and our neighbor's son must pull this tape off some way, perhaps with his teeth or his knife, if he is lucky enough to have one—nine chances out of ten he hasn't any. The enemy has had time to kill hundreds of our men, while they have been trying to open the box to get the cartridges.

Pleads for Quick Action.

"Please, Mr. President, do something about this at once; not tomorrow or soon, but now."

Mrs. Stoudt learned that the army's ordnance department works fast. In about two weeks she was informed by Col. S. R. Stribling of the office of chief of ordnance at Washington that her suggestion had been put into effect.

Mrs. Stoudt lives with her husband, Harry, at 1401 East 4th street, Sterling.

One son, Clarence D., aged 20, has seen action with the navy in the Atlantic. The other, Lowell D., 27, serves in the Pacific.

M'HENRY COUNTY G. O. P. PUTS BAN ON WILLKIE VOTE

With 21 of the 34 committeemen present, the McHenry county Republican committee at its meeting in the courthouse in Woodstock Friday night voted unanimously to indorse "any delegate to the national convention opposed to Wendell Willkie."

County Judge Henry L. Cowlin, chairman of the committee, said some committeemen went so far as to say that, if Willkie were nominated, they would not vote because "it would be one Democrat against another."

The committee voted unanimously to indorse the candidacies of Gov. Dwight H. Green, Lt. Gov. Hugh Cross, Atty. Gen. George F. Barrett, and State Auditor Arthur C. Lueder for reëlection and also approved unanimously Richard J. Lyons for United States senator and William G. Stratton for secretary of state.

WFA Lifts Restrictions on Civilian Turkey Sales

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—The war food administration announced today restrictions against the sale of turkeys to civilians will be lifted Monday. The restriction, which has been in effect since Aug. 2, was designed to enable the fighting forces to obtain turkeys for the holidays. The WFA said overseas military requirements had been met and a good share of the domestic military needs has been assured. The WFA said 445,000,000 pounds of turkeys will be available for civilians.

'HEAVEN' AWAITS AIR FORCE VETS

All the Luxury of Miami Beach Is Theirs.

BY MARTHA MURPHY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Miami Beach, Fla., Oct. 23.—A group of air force officers is leaving heaven today. "Heaven" is the first activated army air forces redistribution station—Station No. 2 in Miami Beach. The officers are the first air force personnel to be returned from overseas for reclassification.

During the last 12 days the men have poured their hopes and homesickness, eagerness and experiences into the human hopper which is the station. They have been interviewed by personnel officers and examined by doctors and psychiatrists.

In between times they have relaxed in the comforts which the air forces offer its homecoming heroes. For 75 cents a day they have lived in $50 a day ocean front hotel rooms, complete with peace time plush. Enlisted men who are to be included in the program will live there "on the house."

Feast on Steaks.

So many chicken and steak dinners have been served them that stew and chile are "treats."

This redistribution station is the first of four to become active. Operations have just started at station No. 1 in Atlantic City, N. J. A third, on the Pacific coast, and a fourth, in the middle west—possibly Chicago—are being planned.

All have the same purpose, the reassignment of officers and men being replaced overseas by fresh personnel under the army air forces rotation system. All are under the supervision of Brig. Gen. J. M. Bevans, assistant chief of air staff, personnel, and under the command of Col. Henry Bailey, stationed in Atlantic City.

The air forces start their welcoming work early. When the returning officer or enlisted man steps out of an air transport command plane at one of 14 debarkation points, a port liaison officer greets him with papers for a furlough of 20 days plus traveling time.

Rest Camps Set Up.

Jumpy nerves are being soothed with assignments to rest camps. Three such camps have been set up under the redistribution system. They are Lake Lure, N. C.; Camp Mystic, Tex., and Castle Hot Springs, Ariz.

Enlisted men with unusual aptitudes may be assigned to the officer candidate school, the aviation cadet program, or specialized training.

Altho no wounded are sent to the centers, physical disabilities discovered during examinations are treated with hospitalization. If necessary, men with serious mental or physical defects will be returned to civilian life.

GASOLINE SHIP BLOWS UP OFF FLORIDA; 28 SAVED

Explosions Heard on Shore; Both Blacked Out.

Palm Beach, Fla., Oct. 23 (AP).—Two blacked-out tankers collided off the Florida coast in the darkness Wednesday night and 88 men perished in the flames which spread from the explosion of one of the vessels laden with thousands of gallons of aviation gasoline.

The navy permitted announcement of the disaster today after investigating salvage possibilities.

Twenty-eight merchant crewmen and members of navy gun crews were saved, most of them leaping overboard as the flames whipped over the decks and spread out over the water.

Witnessed on Shore.

Persons ashore heard the explosion and saw the towering flames and gave the alarm which sent coast guard craft racing to the scene.

One of the ships, northbound and riding low in the water with the weight of the gasoline, had 43 crewmen aboard, including seven naval gunners, and only 7 men survived.

The other tanker, southbound in ballast, was manned by a crew of 73, including 25 gunners, and 21 reached safety.

Most of those on deck perished instantly.

Stay at Their Posts.

Christopher P. Finley, 28, of Miami, third assistant engineer aboard the empty tanker, was at his post at the time of the crash, at 10:50 p. m.

"I knew something terrible had happened," he declared, "but every hand in the engine room stayed at his post, and that saved a lot of lives.

"Two explosions followed immediately. I cut off the engines and rushed topside. Forward and amidships were a holocaust. The forward magazines and gun turrets were exploding. I knew the aft magazines would go any minute. I jumped into the sea off the fantail."

Sees Ship Approach.

Seaman Joseph S. O'Brien of 1212 East Washington street, Indianapolis, Ind., gunner aboard the northbound tanker, was on watch on the deck.

"Suddenly I spotted another ship bearing down from the north," he said. "It appeared to be about 75 yards away. It looked as tho it were going to pass us, but as the ship approached I saw it was going to be close.

"I turned and started for a telephone to report to the forward bridge. Before I got to the telephone there was a crash.

"A terrific explosion followed, and I was blown about 10 feet across the deck.

Races Thru Flames.

"Regaining my feet, I raced thru flames and jumped overboard off the stern. I guess I was the first one off the boat.

"I swam as fast as I could for a while, and thought I was safe. Then I stopped to look back.

"Waves of flame were coming toward me on the water, and they almost caught me. Burning gasoline covered a huge area.

"I could hear a lot of screaming and yelling from the direction of both ships and I knew a lot of the boys were trapped. It was awful!

"After I swam away from the flames I floated around until I found a lifeboat upside down. I crawled up on it and sat there until I was picked up by the coast guard."

Coast guard patrol boats which reached the scene within a few minutes circled dangerously close to the blazing vessels to pick up survivors.

A Lot of Screaming.

Walter Deutsch of Huntington, N. Y., a quartermaster, commanded the first rescue boat to arrive.

"We approached the empty tanker from windward," he said. "Only one man could be seen on deck. He refused to jump until we shouted we were going to leave. There was a lot of screaming."

The flaming hulls floated slowly northward in the gulf stream. The empty, less seriously damaged tanker ran aground. Salvage crews

20 FT. BENNING SOLDIERS DEAD IN PLANE CRASH

Fort Benning, Ga., Oct. 23 (AP).—Twenty officers and men were killed last night when an army transport plane crashed at Lawson field here while on a night parachute mission, the public relations office announced today.

The dead included two officers and three enlisted men of the army air corps and 15 enlisted men from the parachute troops here.

Plane Catches Fire.

The plane crashed shortly after taking off from Lawson field, public relations officers said. They reported it was on a routine flight to permit the paratroopers to make a night jump, now a part of their regular training. Fire broke out when the plane crashed, trapping all occupants.

The list of dead includes: Pvt. Frank J. Sloboda of East Chicago, Ind.; Pvt. Ralph D. Atwood of Alton, Ind.; Pvt. John F. Anderson, Jeffersonville, Ind., and Pvt. Kenneth C. Brayton of Livingston, Mich.

Fear 15 Killed.

Mountain Home, Idaho, Oct. 23 (AP).—Two heavy army bombers collided in the air and crashed five miles southwest of the Mountain Home air base today. The public relations office said all aboard were killed but disclosed no details. The number killed was not announced immediately, but reports from the scene indicated the toll might be 15 to 20 men. Names of the victims were withheld.

Mass Escape from Italian Prison Told

LONDON, Oct. 23 (AP).—While bonfires blazed on the hills around Bologna, allied prisoners in an Italian camp there made a pre-dawn break for freedom as the Germans took over in the confusion of Italy's armistice celebration, Godfrey H. P. Anderson, Associated Press correspondent taken captive in Libya, said in a letter received in London today.

"The end of our stay in Italy was quite exciting," he wrote on Sept. 17 from a transit camp at Moesburg in Bavaria, where he was taken from Italy.

Most Are Recaptured.

"First we heard of the armistice and thought we soon would be home. Church bells were ringing and bonfires were blazing on the hills around Bologna.

"We suspected the Germans might take over the camp, and we went to bed fully dressed and with light kits packed. About 4:30 a. m. the Germans came. Some of us escaped in the resulting confusion, but most were retaken."

Anderson did not say whether he was among those who escaped.

Two British officers who did get away from northern Italy about the same time have written to their families in Britain after reaching allied lines in the south.

Get Peasant Costumes.

They hid when the Germans came, later scaled a wall with a ladder, bartered chocolate and soap for Italian peasant costumes, and walked 125 miles south, passing as close as 20 yards to German patrols, and swimming a mined river.

Anderson said the Bavarian camp "is a strange place—an international medley of French, Russians, Poles, Americans, Jugo-Slavs, and other nationals. You see almost every kind of uniform and hear almost every kind of tongue on international avenue—the main road running thru the center of the camp. Russian officers work with their men, and I am told there is one tank brigadier who takes in laundry."

MOCK INVASION WILL STRIKE AT CHICAGO TODAY

Landing Force to Attack Near Foster Avenue.

Only four days remain in which to see the free "Back the Attack" navy show in Tribune Square. Today's big event, which will take place off the grounds, is the demonstration of invasion tactics to be put on by the coast guard, the army chemical warfare service, the navy and the marine corps, on the lake front just north of Foster avenue at 2 o'clock. The Navy pier band will give a concert on the show's Tribune Square grounds beginning at 7 p. m. A special one day exhibit, if weather conditions permit its arrival, will be an anti-submarine patrol vessel from the yards of the Defoe Shipbuilding company at Bay City, Mich.

An attempt to "take" Chicago by storm and to establish a beachhead from which the whole middle west could be overrun will be made on the lake front just north of Foster avenue at 2 o'clock today by the coast guard and the army chemical warfare service with the navy and the marine corps coöperating.

Invasion barges, accompanied by the great Water Buffalo, the newest amphibious tank, will roar shoreward under cover of smoke screens. Speedy anti-submarine patrol boats will dart about the area. Planes from the navy aircraft carriers Wolverine and Sable and from the Glenview Naval station will, if weather conditions permit, cover the landing and dive bomb the shore "defenses." The Wilmette, training ship of the 9th naval district, will stand by.

To Simulate Modern War.

As the invasion craft reach land fighting coast guards and marines will swarm out of them and close in mock battle with the "defenders." The rattle of rifle and machine gun fire will give the demonstration of the atmosphere of modern war.

The tactics used will be those which have been painstakingly developed by the coast guard, the army, the navy, and the marine corps for the kind of hard hitting, perfectly coördinated combined operation which has helped America to run up so impressive a string of victories in both the Pacific and the Afro-European war theaters.

The men who will operate the coast guard barges today have done the same thing under enemy fire. The army chemical warfare service equipment to be used is an up-to-the-minute combination of floating smoke pots, smoke generators, and smoke grenades.

Demonstration of Salerno Tactics.

The method of smoke concealment to be employed at Foster avenue today is similar to that used with tremendous effectiveness at the landings near Salerno, Italy, in mid-September.

At a ceremony to follow the "invasion," Mayor Kelly will speak and veterans of combat operations will be interviewed. Music is to be provided by the Navy pier band. The treasury department will have men and women on hand to sell war bonds to those wishing to buy.

The best place from which to see the demonstration is the point of land just north of Foster avenue.

The gala opening of the drive was celebrated yesterday in the studios of W-G-N, when 50 musicians from Great Lakes training station, under the direction of Lt. Comdr. Eddie Peabody, the banjo king, entertained the girls with a two hour musical show.

Seniors to Visit Propsects.

Younger Girl Scouts will distribute posters and run errands for the campaign, while the seniors make numerous calls on prospective WAVES in their neighborhoods. On Monday night, Nov. 1, senior Scouts able to bring prospects as guests will attend another program in the W-G-N studios.

At the conclusion of the drive, the Scout in each of the 20 participating troops who has turned in the most cards for WAVE recruits will win a free trip to the Great Lakes training station as guest of the WAVES.

Girl Scouts Visit Show.

The campaign was worked out after the mariners, a Sea Scout group, offered their services to the WAVES. Plans were mapped under the direction of Lt. [j. g.] Margaret H. Cecil, senior WAVE officer for the 9th naval district, Mrs. T. C. McClintock, executive director of Chicago Girl Scouts., Mrs. Snelling Robinson, program chairman, and Mrs. David Blank, war service chairman of the Chicago Girl Scout board.

At the conclusion of yesterday's show, senior Girl Scouts and WAVES visited the Tribune "Back the Attack" navy show.

NAVY SAYS IT HAS BROUGHT VICTORY OVER JAPS NEARER

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—The United States navy, greatest in world history, has "brought the beginnings of eventual victory over the Jap" since Navy day, 1942. This was reported today by the navy in a review of the war situation in the Pacific as another Navy day approaches Oct. 27.

"In the Pacific," he review asserted, "the time since Navy day, 1942, has been spent most profitably in getting into position, and in building up our own hitting strength in terms of both carrier and shorebased aircraft."

That strength still is increasing. Three super-aircraft carriers of 45,000 tons displacement are to be constructed promptly. Recent raids on Marcus Island in the Pacific, the navy said, provide "a glimpse into a promising future." Enemy shore installations were demolished in the attack on Marcus carried out by carrier based bombing planes.

FOREIGN GROUPS RAISE 50 PCT. OF CRUISER FUND

Chicago residents of foreign birth or descent have reached the half way mark in their drive to raise 35 million dollars thru war bond sales before Christmas for a new United States cruiser, the treasury department said yesterday. Twenty-six nationalities have joined in the project. The Greek group holds first place with bond sales of 6 millions. Austro-Hungarians are second with $3,400,000. At 4 p. m. today the Pan-Laconian society, men and women of Greek descent, will rally at the Ashland auditorium, 328 South Ashland avenue. They hope that a half million dollars will be pledged.

NAVY TO HONOR GENERAL WITH MERIT AWARD

Rear Adm. John Downes, head of the 9th naval district, will present the navy award for merit to Maj. Gen. H. S. Aurand, head of the 6th service command, at an unusual ceremony at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday in the army garage at 24th and Federal streets.

Lt. Comdr. Thomas J. McGuire, domestic transportation officer of the naval district, said the award will be presented for "unusual cooperation" which the army gave in repairing motorized equipment used in building the naval air station at Ottumwa, Ia. As a result, the navy avoided the expense of setting up its own garage.

Radio station W-G-N and newsreel cameramen will record the ceremony Tuesday, when uniformed corps will drive reconditioned navy trucks out of the army garage.

Legion to Name School Armistice Day Speakers

All schools in the public system will observe Nov. 10 with Armistice day assemblies, Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, said yesterday. Dr. Johnson issued a call to all principals to arrange the ceremonies. Speakers will be supplied by Ellidor M. Libonati, Americanism chairman for the American Legion, Dr. Johnson announced.

30 'MEN OF SAIL' FORM NAVY DAY PARADE FEATURE

Marching among the 12,000 navy men and women expected to take part in Chicago's Navy day parade Wednesday will be a distinguished group of 30 men who learned the ropes the hard way in an earlier era of navy training—on wooden sailing frigates.

They are known as "figure eight" men, who volunteered for naval training at the average age of 15 years, with consent of parents or guardians, and remained in service until the day before they became 21 years old.

"That," says Lee Florsheim, Chicago business man prominent in the Navy league, "made men of every one of them."

The sailing ship technique of naval training was abandoned about 1905, Florsheim recalled.

Wear Special Emblem.

The figure eight is an emblem these old timers are entitled to wear on coat lapels. It was a term which indicated that the young tars, having completed training, were eligible for assignment to service above deck—or posts eight in line from the ship's commander, Florsheim explained.

Most of the old training ships were full rigged, with about 240 apprentice seamen to the ship. The ships were lighted with candles or kerosene lamps.

After boot training the youngsters would be assigned to one of them for a cruise of four to 10 months, Florsheim said, and after the cruise, if they passed examinations, they would become first class apprentices, and their pay would rise from $9 to $21 a month.

Recalls Old Vessels.

Among the training ships that Florsheim recalled were the U. S. S. Monongahela, Hartford, Essex, Alliance, Portsmouth, Jamestown, Richmond, Annapolis, Topeka, and the Adams.

"Figure eight" men in important navy posts in this area, expected to be in the Navy day parade, include:

Comdr. L. W. Gumz, who made his cruise on the Monongahela in 1900. He is personnel officer at the Great Lakes naval training station. He was in command of the ship that sank the German submarine U-53 at Lands End, England, in the World war.

Comdr. Leo A. Ketterer, also a Monongahela veteran, now in charge of navy clothing supplies for the 9th naval district.

Comdr. Michael Burke, senior officer in charge of service schools of the 9th naval district, stationed at Great Lakes. He cruised on the Monongahela in 1902.

Lt. Comdr. R. S. Kaiser, in charge of the gunnery school at Great Lakes. He also was on the Monongahela cruise in 1902.

Chief Warrant Officer H. W. Honek of the Great Lakes service school, who cruised on the Essex in 1900.

J. P. Taylor, chief warrant radio gunner in the service school, Great Lakes, trained on the Monongahela also.

Navy Day Speaker

Rear Adm. George D. Murray.

Rear Adm. George D. Murray, former commanding officer of the aircraft carrier Enterprise, will address the Union League club at a Navy day luncheon Wednesday noon, in the club's headquarters, 65 West Jackson boulevard.

Adm. Murray is now chief of the naval air intermediate training command and commandant of the Pensacola, Fla., naval air training center.

George I. Haight, club president, will introduce Adm. Murray, whose talk, "Naval Aviation in the Present War," will be broadcast over W-G-N from 1:15 to 1:45 p. m.

'BIG 5' RAILROAD UNIONS APPROVE STRIKE BALLOT

Operating Brotherhoods Rap 4c an Hour Raise.

The "Big Five" railroad operating brotherhoods at a meeting in the Morrison hotel yesterday unanimously approved the taking of a strike vote of their 350,000 members because of their dissatisfaction with the 4 cents an hour wage increase granted them in September. They had asked a 30 per cent increase, with a minimum of $3 a day.

Heads of the "Big Five" met with their general chairmen from the individual roads in the morning, when resolutions covering the wage problem were adopted unanimously. The chief executives of the unions are to appoint a committee of three members from each union to coöperate with the officers in the preparation and distribution of strike ballots.

Vote to Require 30 Days.

Officials attending the meeting said it would take at least 30 days to complete a strike vote because each local unit on the individual roads will have to be polled. All the leading American railroads are involved in the dispute.

Altho a strike vote has been authorized, Chicago railroad circles doubt that the men will walk out. It is recalled that there has been no major walkout in 50 years, altho strike threats have been voiced on several occasions. The last was the setting of a strike for Dec. 7, 1941, but this walkout was called off when they were granted a wage increase before the attack on Pearl Harbor. Should there be a real threat in the present instance, it is expected that Presidential intervention would keep the nation's major transportation system from being disrupted.

The resolutions adopted yesterday said that altho the brotherhoods had presented "convincing evidence that the wages of the men are as a rule comparatively low," the emergency board hearing their plea had recommended an increase of only 32 cents a day, or 4 cents an hour. In the face of this small increase, they said, the men are confronted with an increase in the cost of living since Jan. 1, 1941, of slightly less than 25 per cent, with the increase for food alone being 40 per cent.

Issue Put Up to Members.

"Therefore be it resolved that the increase in wages recommended by the emergency board be rejected," was the formal pronouncement by the board, "and the subject matter be referred to our respective membership in the form of a strike ballot for their review and consideration of the findings of the emergency board, and their recommendations for further procedure in an attempt to obtain a satisfactory settlement of our wage demands."

Heads of the unions taking part in the meeting yesterday were: Alvanley Johnston, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; H. W. Fraser, Order of Railway Conductors; D. B. Robertson, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; A. F. Whitney, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and T. C. Cashen, Switchmen's Union of North America. About 500 delegates attended the session.

WOMAN, 77, HIT BY TROLLEY.

Mrs. Caroline Wittenborn, 77 years old, 5306 North Paulina street, was struck by a street car at Clark street and Berwyn avenue yesterday and suffered shock and a possible skull fracture. She was taken to the Swedish Covenant hospital.

Flames spread thru a tanker off the Florida coast after it collided with another tanker Wednesday night. Fire, started by the crash, engulfed the vessel, and 88 on board died in the flames or in the water. As the tanker settled it grounded on a freighter sunk early in the war by a submarine. In the picture the mast of the freighter (arrow) is seen beyond the blazing ship. Both ships involved in the crash were blacked out as precaution against submarine attack.

Ships Collide Off Florida Coast.

floated the vessel and towed it to port, with the dead still aboard.

The navy said it will be repaired, and will carry war goods again.

Drifts Almost 20 Miles.

The laden tanker drifted almost 20 miles, burning so fiercely that it could not be approached. It struck bottom almost atop the hulk of a freighter sunk by enemy subs early in the war.

The masters of both ships, and all except one of the navy commissioned officers assigned to the gun crews, were lost, the navy reported.

Edward Hethington, 28, of Charleston, second assistant engineer, aboard the empty tanker, said all lifeboats were burned and fell into the sea.

Emerging from the engine room, he related, "we had to run over a mass of charred bodies which almost blocked the port companionway."

Coast Guardsmen who first boarded one of the tankers found only one living thing—a tiny mongrel dog.

The dog was slightly burned, but later contracted pneumonia. Coast Guardsmen called in a veterinarian in an effort to save the pup's life.

All Survivors Injured.

Four of the survivors were taken to a Palm Beach hospital and the other 24 were taken to the Morrison field army air base. All had injuries.

Survivors said they believe a spark generated when the two metal hulls clashed set off the explosion.

William D. Greencorn, 76, of Franklin, Mass., a seaman for 60 years and a survivor of five previous shipwrecks, came thru again, but his 19 year old son, Calvin making his first trip as an apprentice seaman, was lost.

"This is the end for me," the sorrowing father said. "I'm not going back to sea."

The exact cause of the collision may never be known since all navigation officers on both ships died. The points of impact were the bow of the southbound ship and the port fore quarter of the northbound tanker.

Among the survivors was Joseph Sylvester O'Brien, seaman 1st class, of Indianapolis, Ind. He was a member of the navy gun crew aboard one of the vessels.

ABUNDANT GARB MORE EXCITING, 'EXPERT' SAYS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—A representative of the New England Watch and Ward society declared at a postoffice department hearing today he believed the "abundant" clothes worn by women in the 1890s tended to excite the curiosity of their escorts to a greater extent than does the skimpier attire of young women of today.

Louis J. Croteau of Burlington, Mass., secretary of the privately supported society, made this statement when asked whether he considered "indecent" a cartoon in Esquire magazine of a transparently clad slave girl.

The postoffice department is holding hearings to determine whether Esquire's second class mailing privilege should be revoked because of pictures and articles appearing in it which postoffice counsel described as "indecent."

"Would you say the fewer clothes a woman has on, the less attractive she becames to a man?" asked Calvin Hassell, postoffice counsel.

"That's right," Croteau replied.

UNION SEEKS TO END WALKOUT OF 150 AT PULLMAN SHIP PLANT

Union officials and police were endeavoring last night to insure the return to work tonight of more than 150 employes of the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing company, 130th street and Stony Island avenue, who refused to report for work Friday in what was said to be a protest against delays in the negotiation of a new wage contract.

Officials of the company, which is engaged in a ship building program for the navy, said the men represented only a fraction of the night shift. The entire day crew was at work yesterday, they said. The strikers included welders, pipefitters, and other types of shipyard labor.

Lt. George Barnes of the police labor detail met yesterday with officials of the United Steel Workers' union [CIO] and was promised that every effort would be made to pacify the men and have them at their jobs tonight.

U. S. BUILDS VAST STORAGE AREA FOR LEND-LEASE

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 23 (AP).—Twelve huge warehouses and 41 miles of railroad sidings will be completed soon near Auburn, Wash., to store lend-lease supplies and war material for foreign shipments. The war department announced today details of the vast installations—half a mile wide and two and a half miles long. Known as a holding and reconsignment center, the depot will be one of the largest of nine in the United States. Its stored supplies will be held for shipment thru the ports of Seattle, Tacoma, and Portland. The rail sidings will be able to accommodate approximately 1,400 cars.

BOY EVANGELIST SEIZED BY FBI AS EXTORTIONER

Accused of Threatening Steel Executive.

A former boy evangelist of the Tennessee hills yesterday was in custody of the federal bureau of investigation at the Lake county jail in Crown Point, Ind., for allegedly attempting extortion against a steel mill executive in Gary.

The prisoner is Preston James V. Burris Jr., 29 years old, Negro, who according to Don Hostetter, head of the FBI office in Indianapolis, once served a five year sentence for extortion. His intended victim was Stephen M. Jenks, 7th avenue and Jackson street, Gary, general superintendent of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation in Gary. Burris has been employed at the mills for the last five months.

Demands $500 "or Else."

On Aug. 16, Jenks received a letter demanding $500 with the alternative of harm to "some one near and dear" to him. Jenks and his wife, who have two adopted children, a boy 1 year old, and a girl eight months old, notified the FBI.

On three nights FBI men hid near a Gary church where the money was to have been left, but no one showed up.

By chance, however, the investigators ran across Burris. On Oct. 10 Burris snatched two bundles of newspapers in Gary and was arrested. Burris' fingerprints, sent to Washington, D. C., for comparison with those in FBI files, showed that in 1931 he had been sentenced at Tulsa, Okla., to a five year term for extortion, and that he was released from the federal reformatory at Terre Haute, Ind., last April.

FBI Reports Confession.

Chief Agent Hostetter sent samples of his handwriting to Washington, where they were analyzed as corresponding with the handwriting in the extortion note. Confronted with this evidence Friday night, Burris broke down and confessed, Hostetter said.

Federal records show that Burris was questioned in connection with the murder of Mrs. Paul Galvin and her maid in Evanston a year ago.

Burris was born in McKinnon, Tenn. At 12, he was preaching as a roaming evangelist. He attended Western Baptist college, Kansas City, Mo., and is said to hold a degree from that school. He is being held in bond of $10,000.

THIEF GETS WOMAN'S $110.

Miss Estelle Roos, of 5506 Winthrop avenue, a clerk, reported to police yesterday that her purse containing $110, her ration book and glasses, was stolen from under a counter in a loop store where she is employed. Later the empty pocketbook was found at 46th and State streets.

NAZIS DIG IN; BLOCK ALLIES' ROAD TO ROME

Fifth Army Hurls Back Counter-Attack.

ALLIED HDQ., Algiers, Oct. 23 (AP).—Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesserling's forces, altho thrown back by the 5th army after launching a fierce tank led counter-attack in the Alife region, dug in firmly today in their new positions on the Massico ridge-Mount Matese line solidly blocking the road to Rome.

The counter-attack was one of the sharpest the Germans have put in since their attempt to drive the 5th army back into the sea four days after landing on the beach at Salerno.

A number of Nazi tanks were knocked out by American artillery, but the fury with which the attack was launched indicated the Germans' determination to defend their new line stubbornly.

The 8th army also frustrated a counter-attack near Montecilfone and then advanced two miles, taking Lupara, which dominates high ground in central Italy.

Yanks "Exploit" Gains.

An allied war bulletin detailing yesterday's land developments hinted further action was in progress on the 5th army's front by saying that the gain made in taking a commanding height in an unidentified area was being "exploited."

The Germans now are solidly entrenched in their mountain positions and "there is no question now that the Germans are firmly established in a number of strongly held positions all along the front," an allied officer said.

On the whole, fighting yesterday was not on a large scale and both sides were preparing for the next phase of the campaign.

Allied aviation ranged the battle area attacking gun positions, troop concentrations, and motor transport. Other bombers of the northwest African air force hit rail communications at Grosseto, 90 miles north of Rome, and Orvieto, 60 miles north. The Elevsis airfield near Athens also was hit hard by medium bombers escorted by Lightnings.

Bomb Rhodes Airfield.

The R. A. F. middle east command also announced that Maritza airfield on the island of Rhodes was bombed Thursday night for the third successive night and shipping and harbor installations were attacked on Maxos and Syros islands. These islands are part of the Cyclades group which the Germans occupied after the fall of Greece and used as the main springboard for the air invasion of Crete.

In addition to the land and air action, light units of both the British and American navies sank, captured or damaged five enemy-controled vessels. Swift United States motor torpedo boats sped far up the northwest coast of Italy to make raids near Leghorn.

The Germans' use of tanks in their counterblow against the 5th army was mainly for the terrifying effect of these rumbling steel monsters on infantry. Armor is otherwise not very effective in the rugged terrain in which the fighting now is taking place.

Yanks Sink Lighter.

Operating at night off Leghorn, American motor torpedo patrol boats torpedoed a Nazi "F" lighter in convoy and probably hit a convoy loaded with tanks the night of Oct. 19-20, headquarters announced, while the next night in the same area these craft torpedoed another "F" lighter. In both attacks the American craft beat off German escort fire and came off unscathed. The "F" lighters were described as heavily armed ships similar to allied landing ship tanks [LSTs].

In the Adriatic British destroyers off the Albanian coast sank an ex-Jugo-Slav trawler carrying a German armed guard on the night of Oct. 20-21 and the next night captured an enemy merchant vessel.

Another tardy navy announcement gave details of a daring landing made 25 miles behind the German lines at the little port of Vibo Valentia Marina Sept. 8. It was hoped to make the landing unopposed, but when a small British task force arrived it found the Germans just passing the port in their retreat ahead of the 8th army up the toe of Italy.

The account told how one of the landing ship tanks commanded by Lt. Comdr. Leslie John Smith, of the royal navy reserve, was hit more than 40 times, but managed to reach the beach and unload its cargo despite heavy casualties.

GRACIE FIELDS SCOLDED; QUIT 8TH ARMY TOUR

Soldier Paper Rips All Entertainers.

BY JOHN THOMPSON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ALLIED HDQ., Algiers, Oct. 23.—Gracie Fields, British comedienne and songstress, was criticized bitterly today in the British 8th army weekly, The Crusader, for welching on her promise to remain with the 8th army until the war's end. The paper declared Gracie ran off to fulfill commitments in the United States.

The Crusader's editor, Sgt. D. H. Martin, who wrote the criticism of Miss Fields in an open letter, complained that few other British entertainers had appeared in the war theaters and said they should have been drafted at the start of the war. His letter to Miss Fields said in part:

"Dear Gracie. So, you didn't stay with us very long after all. You told The Crusader that you thought the 8th army had saved England. You said if you had your way you would follow us to the end, entertaining us whenever conditions permitted.

Had Permission to Stay.

"Army headquarters said all facilities would be given for you to stay with us as long as you liked. You received that signal. But you didn't stay. You had contracts to consider. You were due back in America. You had all sorts of commitments. Your time was not your own. But your will is still your own.

"You are a great act, but you would have been a greater trouper if you would have forgotten your contracts and commitments and stayed with us a little longer.

"The men whose lives you would have brightened have had to break much more sacred contracts and commitments. We thought you were sincere when you said it was the duty of every star to give his or her services to the fighting soldier.

"Then you went back. Most of the people who are at the top of your profession never left England. You said many of them fought shy of giving a show in isolated parts of Britain because of the discomforts and because they couldn't be guaranteed a large audience.

Urged Draft of Entertainers.

"That's why we say again that every man Jack and girl Jill of you should have been placed in khaki at the start of the war. The men and women whose job it was to entertain should not have been allowed to apply the paint or wear the pretty clothes unless entertaining an audience of service men and service women.

"You and the rest of the topliners have let the fighting soldier down. Blame it on ENSA [Entertainments National Service association]. Most of you do. But ENSA didn't make the rest stay at home all these years for the benefit of themselves.

[In Hollywood last night Miss Fields said her sponsor did not force her to return from Europe. She said her tour was aranged by ENSA, British equivalent of U. S. O., which provided for her to return at a certain time, so her radio work in the United States could be resumed.]

FASCISM IS NOT DEAD IN SOUTH ITALY—SFORZA

Its 'Passive Resistance' Held Dangerous.

BARI, Italy, Oct. 22 [Delayed]—(AP).—Count Carlo Sforza, returning from an American exile to his liberated native land, today charged that "Fascist passive resistance still goes on" in southern Italy.

The aged statesman, who as yet has been given no post in Marshal Pietro Badoglio's government, said that "what still makes the Fascists dangerous is that the nation is not sure that everywhere there is an honest will to oust, punish, and destroy them, altho I'm personally sure Badoglio loathes them."

"I know dozens of men who have ripened under fascism in jail and under persecution and could be excellent leaders," he said.

Sees Badoglio Briefly.

Sforza, who is staying here at the home of a prominent publisher and had only a brief contact this week with Badoglio, admitted the Italian people at first glance seem to be "without hope or inspiration." But he added:

"Do not forget the Italians have come out of two tragic trials. First, fascism with its long tale of lies and frauds; secondly, the bewildering weeks after Mussolini's fall. The Italians look now like a nation struck by an earthquake but they will soon be ready under true leadership to show how they love Italy."

Queried about his reported demand for an Italian army of liberation on the Cromwellian model, Sforza said:

"An army needs—in order to be an army and not a mob—to have a soul and an ideal. It is this new soul that must be molded in spite of certain Fascist passive resistance which still goes on."

Calls for Unity.

Then he added:

"The end of the European war depends upon the results of the present Moscow conference. If the Germans realize they cannot hope any more for division between the allies, the war might come to an end much sooner than we believe. But we must act as if we were sure it would be a long war, for such a state of mind is the surest way to break German morale."

He described the "anti-Russian feeling" as "one of the most disgesting dangerous tricks of Fascist propaganda."

"The truth is, Russia seeks for tomorrow a long peace in which to develop the resources of the country," he said.

ARGENTINA ACTS TO END STUDENT STRIKES ON FOREIGN POLICY

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Oct. 23 (AP).—Argentine officials sought to control students striking against the government's foreign policy by sending police today to quell a demonstration in Rosario, outlawing the student university federation, and closing La Plata university 15 days before the normal date.

[A Buenos Aires dispatch said a government bulletin branded the Argentine student federation as subversive and having "communist connections." The government said it was prepared to take "extremely severe measures" to prevent any disturbance.]

The number of Argentine refugees to Uruguay was steadily increasing as Gen. Pedro Ramirez's government took strong measures against opposition.

HINT MARSHALL TRIP TO ENGLAND DELAYED TO 1944

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—The Army and Navy Register, unofficial service journal, today stated that Gen. George C. Marshall may not go to England to become supreme commander of Anglo-American forces until after the first of the year. There has been speculation, the Register said, that the chief of staff would go "some time this autumn."

Marshall's arrival in Britain early next year, the Register declared, would be in accordance with predictions that the western offensive on Europe probably will not be launched before late spring or early summer.

Some persons, the Register said, have concluded that a delay in the announcement of plans to send Marshall to England meant that his proposed appointment as supreme commander had been abandoned. But, the publication added, "informed sources" do not agree with this.

Leaflets Tell of Plot to Oust Hitler, Nazis Say

LONDON, Oct. 23 (AP). — Hans Fritsche, chief of the German radio propaganda service, said tonight that leaflets warning of a movement to overthrow Adolf Hitler are being circulated in Germany by the allies. Urging the home front population to "protect themselves against the leaflet poison by voluntary discipline," Fritsche said the leaflets bore as purported backers of the movement the names of Nazi leaders.

PARTISAN ARMY FIGHTS NAZIS ON ALBANIA BORDER

Serb Guerrillas Capture 4 Mountain Hamlets.

LONDON, Oct. 23 (AP).—Jugo-Slav partisans under the young lawyer-general, Petar Dabcevis, today were involved in heavy fighting with Nazi motorized units in the vicinity of Mount Chakor on the Montenegran-Albanian frontier, while other patriots captured four villages in southwest Slovenia.

A war bulletin of the Jugo-Slav liberation army reported the fall of the four strategic Slovenian hamlets, which are important because they command lines of communication in a difficult mountainous area.

Strike Along Railroad.

The partisans also struck successfully along the railroad line serving the territory between the Sava and Danube rivers in eastern Croatia, said a war bulletin broadcast by the Free Jugo-Slav radio. German motorized and tank forces also were attacked in the Croatian province of Lika. The partisans also sank a German ship off the Dalmatian coast.

The bulletin reported that two enemy tanks were destroyed in the fighting on the Montenegran frontier. Gen. Dabcevis' command there consists of units of the 2d corps. The youthful general won a military reputation fighting in the republican army in the Spanish civil war.

On the southeastern Balkan front the Germans claimed they occupied Stampalia, another in the Dodecanese island group 28 miles southwest of Kos, freeing a large number of German prisoners held there by the British since late September.

Aegean Stepping Stone.

Claims of the island's capture lacked allied confirmation, but if the German propaganda account is true it would appear the Nazis have wrested back another of several important island stepping stones on Aegean invasion route.

It was disclosed that representatives of three Jugo-Slav organizations in London had adopted resolutions charging that the Cairo government of King Peter does not really represent the people of the country and that it had failed to inform the public in allied countries about the triumphs of the peoples' liberation movement.

LAYCOCK NAMED AS NEW LEADER OF COMMANDOS

LONDON, Oct. 23 (AP).—Brig. R. E. [Lucky] Laycock, 36 years old, who once came within an ace of capturing Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, has been named as Britain's new chief of combined operations, the Commandos. Laycock succeeds Adm. Louis Mountbatten, now allied chief in southeast Asia.

Laycock, who received the acting rank of major general in 1941, sought to capture Rommel in his Libyan headquarters. While he remained at a beachhead with reserve rations and ammunition, his Commandos struck at the desert fox's headquarters, killing many high Nazi officers. Rommel, unfortunately, was not at home. Laycock eventually made his way back to his base across the desert, arriving on Christmas, 41 days later.

While covering the main evacuation of British troops from Crete, he was ambushed by the Germans, but he jumped into a tank and chased them away. He received the distinguished service order for gallantry in Sicily.

HOW JAPS TOOK TOLL IN BOMBING OF U. S. HOSPITAL

Pledged No More Raids, Then Turned Loose!

(This is the fourth of a series of articles relating to atrocities which the Japanese military machine has inflicted on American civilians and fighting men in defiance of civilized rules of warfare.)

BY WALTER SIMMONS.

The Japanese were extremely apologetic when their flyers bombed an American army field hospital on Bataan March 30, 1942.

By short wave Tokio assured the world it was "accidental" and wouldn't happen again. Their flyers, as a matter of fact, were instructed never to fly over a hospital—much less bomb it!

So said the bland voice from Tokio.

Promise Soon Broken.

American physicians and nurses on Bataan were relieved, but they strewed additional huge Red Cross emblems about the grounds, where 1,600 beds, makeshift and otherwise, were clustered.

At 10 o'clock on Easter morning the bombers came back. What happened has been described in the curt language of official communiques from Corregidor. Col. Carlos P. Romulo, aide to Gen. MacArthur, has told the story and so has Lt. Juanita Redmond, army nurse.

The first wave of planes caught the hospital staff by surprise. As the explosions ended corpsmen ran out with litters and dazed nurses, including Lt. Redmond, began salvaging precious medicines which were dripping to the ground from broken dressing carts.

Second Raid on Hospital.

Then the second wave was sighted.

Nurses dashed into the wards and began cutting traction ropes so patients with broken arms and legs could roll under their beds for protection. The Rev. William Thomas Cummings, a Maryknoll priest who had coined the phrase, "There are no atheists in fox holes," stood where all could see him and repeated the Lord's prayer.

The second load of bombs was dumped on the hospital. Father Cummings' prayer was drowned by the explosions, the rip of splintering wood, and the screams of stricken men.

The planes turned and came back again.

This time a thousand pound bomb struck in the middle of the wards. The iron beds were snapped apart like match sticks. Father Cummings was wounded by flying shrapnel. Mangled bodies were hidden in the wreckage. A bloody hand protruded from a pile of scrap; everywhere there were torn arms and legs which had been flung about by the bomb blast.

Many of the mangled bodies were impossible to identify. An attendant who had escaped uninjured climbed a tree to recover a body which had been hurled into the top branches.

Nurses wiped the blood from their faces and dug into the mass of wreckage to save the wounded men who had not been torn to pieces. Lt. Rita Palmer had had a miraculous experience—she had escaped with cuts, altho her skirt and shirt had been blown off. The pharmacy had been hit and most of the drugs were gone. Only 65 beds were left standing.

Japs Take Pictures.

Dazed physicians and nurses were too battered to care when some one warned the planes were coming back. But it wasn't the bombers—it was Photo Joe in his reconnaissance plane, taking pictures of the target.

Planes strafed the hospital all afternoon, making rescue work dangerous. Wounded men were placed in near-by fox holes while more dead and wounded were dug out of the ruins. Men worked all night digging graves in the jungle.

The Tokio radio had no apologies to make this time.

Additional details of Japanese brutalities in the Philippines were given by Samuel Roberts, 26 year old navy machinist's mate who was captured by the Japanese soon after the outbreak of the war.

Maimed Doctors and Nurses.

Placed in a concentration camp, he escaped and made his way to the American lines. Later he was evacuated. His chronicle was carried by the Associated Press May 24, 1942.

Roberts said he saw the bodies of physicians, their clothing removed, their hands chopped off, and their ears slashed from their heads. Bodies of American nurses, he said, showed signs of worse treatment.

"Bodies of two nurses and four doctors were found in one place," he said.

In her recent book, "Half a World Away," Frances Long, the daughter of a United States consular official, tells what happened to American civilians in Manila after the fall of Corregidor.

Penned Up Like Pigs.

Men and women were crowded like pigs into detention camps. The food, served twice a day, consisted mainly of a bowl of rice and occasionally some fish. Many of the internes became ill on this diet, but they were given no medical attention. No beds or chairs were provided. The Americans sat on the floor, ate on the floor, and slept on the floor.

Malnutrition bloated some of the prisoners. Others suffered with constant headaches, indigestion, and constipation.

Miss Long was fortunate. She was transferred to Shanghai and later returned to the United States on an exchange ship. But hundreds of Americans still remain at Manila.

ICKES' DEFERRED AID, ABE FORTAS, TO BE INDUCTED

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—Undersecretary Abe Fortas of the interior department will report next week for military service as an apprentice seaman. The 33 year old assistant to Secretary Harold L. Ickes was sworn in at Fort Myer yesterday.

Altho he had been deferred by his draft board until Nov. 15, Fortas requested voluntary induction. He had been deferred previously at the request of the interior department—an action which brought congressional criticism.

GERMAN LINES IN RUSSIA STILL STRONG—LANZA

Analyzes Effects of Seven Thrusts by Reds.

BY COL. CONRAD H. LANZA.

[A regular contributor to the Field Artillery Journal and recognized as an authority on military matters.]

Two weeks have elapsed since the Russians began seriously to attack the latest German defense line. Starting at the north, this extended along the Pronya, Sozh and Dnieper rivers as far as Zaporozhe, whence it cut across country on the far side of the Dnieper to the Sea of Azov. The Pronya and Sozh are small rivers parallel to the Dnieper and about 30 miles east thereof.

The Russians started their great attack on Oct. 6. The first day was mainly devoted to artillery fire intended to blast openings in the enemy's defenses. On the following day the Russian infantry and armor advanced against the sectors which had been "softened" for their advance. There were seven major attacks and they will be considered in turn.

Germans Get Reserves.

The first and most northerly was against Nevel. This little town and railroad junction is covered by numerous swamps, forests, and lakes. The few roads were strongly guarded, but the Russians attacked these and thereby attracted German attention. Fortunately for the Germans they at once sent for reserves.

The real Russian attack went quietly thru an unguarded forest swamp. Engineers working night and day built a road over which guns and tanks were sent forward. Then a day afterward the Russians suddenly burst out of the forest right into Nevel and captured it. The Germans had to give up this section, but reserves arrived in time to prevent the Russians going further.

The second, third, and fourth Russian attacks were over the Dnieper where bridgeheads were made at the junction of the Sozh and Dnieper rivers; at the junction of the Pripet and Dnieper rivers; and quite a ways further down the Dnieper. None of these have had any substantial success.

Reds Spring Surprise.

Most important was the fifth attack southeast from Kremenchug. The Germans had expected that the main Russian efforts would be way up north, or way down south. They were reasonably prepared in these sectors. They were surprised at Kremenchug, and had insufficient reserves to meet this situation.

In the following week the Russians moved 20 divisions across the Dnieper. On Oct. 16 these attacked southwards toward the mineral region of Krivoi Rog, and in the rear of Dnepropetrovsk. At date of writing this attack is still progressing.

The sixth and seventh Russian attacks were to eliminate the German line in the south which was east of the Dnieper. The plan was to make one attack against Zaporozhe at the north end, and another against Melitopol at the south end. If the German ends were broken in, the Russians were then to turn inwards, and wipe out the Germans in the center.

Serious Blows for Nazis.

These attacks were delayed until the necessary artillery, armor, and air forces could be assembled. At Zaporozhe there was a fierce battle in the air and on the ground. After two days' fighting the advantage was with the Russians, and the Germans fled across the river at night. This part of the Russian plan, altho behind time, was about as planned.

In the attack on Melitopol three days were required to reach that small city. Instead of the Germans withdrawing, they brought up reserves and fought back desperately, and for 11 days the Russians were pinned down in that area before Melitopol fell.

Taking the situation along the entire Russian front as a whole, the result of most intense fighting for two weeks is this:

With the exception of the break-thru near Kremenchug and the loss of Melitopol the German river line, altho dented at some places, has held. The break-thru near Kremenchug and Melitopol's capture are serious blows for the Germans.

Former French Deputies Form Parliamentary Unit

ALGIERS, Algiers, Oct. 23 (AP).—Members of the old French chamber of deputies who reside in unoccupied territories today announced the formation of the "fighting French parliamentary group," and adopted a resolution expressing confidence that the allied nations will allow France "to be present henceforth as a sovereign nation in all inter-allied councils." The group voted confidence in the committee of national liberation.

CHURCHILL AIMS TO PUT CABINET ON PEACE BASIS

Junior Members to Be Promoted.

LONDON, Oct. 23 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill apparently intends to reshuffle his cabinet along with the introduction in commons of a comprehensive post-war legislative program.

Churchill is expected before the post-war election to capitalize on the country's intense interest in the future, and the expected cabinet changes might serve as the beginning in the creation of a post-war national government, for which he has expressed a desire. The Daily Herald predicted today that the cabinet changes would be made before the opening of the new session of parliament.

It is understood the contemplated legislative program will be intended to satisfy exponents of William H. Beveridge's social security plan and to lay the ground work for a very large part of Churchill's own extensive program of educational, health, agricultural and industrial reform.

Grigg to be Replaced.

The expected cabinet changes would call for the replacement of James Grigg, secretary for war, whose curt civil service demeanor is said to have irked some members of parliament, and probably of William Jowitt, minister in charge of post-war planning. The changes will involve promotion of a number of junior ministers.

Named to his post Feb. 23, 1942, Grigg was the first regular British civil servant to be shifted to ministerial rank. If he leaves the war office he is expected to receive a top non-ministerial position.

Herbert Stanley Morrison, minister of home affairs and a powerful Laborite, may succeed Jowitt with greatly increased authority over the entire field of post-war problems.

Legal Men to Retire.

It was indicated that Jowitt, former attorney general and solicitor general, may return to the legal side of the government. One or more of the present legal officers—Lord Chancellor Simon, Donald Somervell, attorney general, and Maxwell Fyfe, solicitor general—are expected to retire.

Among young men slated for promotion are Arthur Henderson, undersecretary in the war office; Philip Noel-Baker, parliamentary secretary in the ministry of supply, and Osbert Peake, undersecretary in the home office.

REPORT MUSSOLINI'S SECRETARY OF NAVY SLAIN BY OFFICERS

BERNE, Switzerland, Oct. 23 (AP).—Swiss-Italian frontier reports said today that Adm. Antonio Legnani, secretary of the navy in Benito Mussolini's republican Fascist regime, was killed by two Italian naval officers because of his adherence to the Nazi puppet government.

Dispatches from the frontier town of Chiasso said earlier in the week that Legnani was injured fatally in an automobile accident while traveling from Venice to Verona. Today's reports said that the two Italians who killed Legnani were being hunted by the Gestapo.

Another report from Milan said that two Gestapo agents had been executed there for stealing jewels from their superiors.

HULL CONFERS WITH MOLOTOV AND CHINA ENVOY

U. S. Is Informed Why Eden Met Stalin.

MOSCOW, Oct. 23 (AP).—The foreign affairs executives of the United States, Britain and Russia held their fifth meeting today.

The United States has been fully informed over why Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden of Britain saw Premier Josef Stalin Thursday and later Russian Commissar of Foreign Affairs Vyacheslav Molotov.

Hull, Molotov Confer.

Hull conferred for the second time this week with Chinese Ambassador Fu Ping Sang before today's meeting. He also has seen the Mexican ambassador, the Australian charge d'affaires, and Canadian minister.

Hull also conferred with Molotov separately before the meeting and an American source said it was a "very friendly talk." The two exchanged views about "the way we see some things." it was said. "We are all in the same boat and have the same problem of getting to shore, which means victory and a better world."

Bright and Warm Day.

The conference lasted only two hours and 20 minutes today. The delegates will convene again tomorrow afternoon.

Moscow had as bright and warm an October day as any one remembers in many years, but Hull stuck to his work and turned down invitations to go walking near Spasso house, the American embassy. He rose early as usual and immediately tackled a big stack of work. Hull was feeling fine and had not caught cold, as he feared. He still carries his topcoat to meetings, however.

RUSS DEMANDS FORCING U.S. INTO ERSATZ SHOES

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—An increased use of substitute materials for the manuafcture of civilian shoes was indicated in new orders booked by makers at the shoe show here this week.

New business was small and there were predictions similarly slender orders would be placed at the show opening in Chicago Nov. 1.

The necessity for substitute materials for civilians was emphasized by government agency buying in the past 10 days of large supplies of heavy sole leather for export to Russia.

R. A. F. BOMBERS HIT A TRIPLE IN BIG NIGHT RAIDS

Kassel, Frankfurt, and Cologne Areas Struck.

LONDON, Oct. 23 (AP). — A great fleet of British four engined bombers penetrated a heavy screen of fighters and murky weather last night and dropped 1,500 long tons of bombs on the German armament city of Kassel. The mission cost 44 bombers.

Another force hit Frankfurt and and the small, swift plywood Mosquito bombers raided the Cologne area.

The R. A. F.'s losses at Kassel raised the October total to 163 in the nine major operations, but the air ministry described the blow as highly effective. Returning crews brought back photographs showing huge fires burning under a pall of smoke more than three miles high.

Many Nazi Fighters Out.

The Nazis threw up an unusually heavy fighter force to check the bombardment, but the British were out in "very great strength" and the tonnage equaled or exceeded the 1,500 long tons dropped the last time the city was hit, on Oct. 3.

The 44 planes represented the heaviest British loss since the Aug. 31 raid on Berlin, when 47 aircraft were missing, but the number was under the R. A. F. record loss of 58.

Kassel, a city of 200,000, is 70 miles east of the Ruhr and is important for its locomotive, armament, and aircraft plants, and as a railway center.

The Germans rushed up a strong fighter force and numerous battles developed, with one group alone shooting down five planes. The official report said simply that "many night fighters were encountered and several were destroyed by our bombers."

Nazis Admit Much Damage.

The new attack on Frankfurt, which is about 100 miles south of Kassel, was the third of the month for this city of half a million population, a big chemical, rubber, and electrical center.

The German radio said considerable damage was done at Kassel and Frankfurt.

While the R. A. F. bombers were out, German raiders bombed London. Twelve persons were killed in one area.

Continuing the aerial offensive by daylight, R. A. F. bombers damaged several locomotives in France, hit three destroyers at St. Malo, blew up a small tanker, and destroyed two enemy planes.

Late tonight German planes caused the eighth successive night alarm in London, but were driven off apparently without dropping bombs. Other raiders dropped a few bombs on a southeast coast area.

ALLIED BOMBERS STEP UP RAIDS ON BURMA JAPS

NEW DELHI, India, Oct. 23 (AP).—In improved weather, American and British bombers and fighters ranged the length of Japanese occupied Burma Thursday, Friday, and Saturday "in increased operations on a large scale," United States and British bulletins announced today.

Irrawaddy river port cities, railway yards, river traffic and enemy airport installations were pounded. Liberators scored direct hits on the station, tracks, and railway yard buildings at Myingyan, central Irrawaddy port city, and river shipping facilities, the jetty, and near-by buildings were damaged. American planes also dumped high explosives on the air field at Myitkyina, northern Irrawaddy city.

Adm. Louis Mountbatten, supreme allied commander in southeast Asia, returned to New Delhi today after a five day visit in Chungking with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, and other allied officers.

WOMAN, 90, DIES IN HOME.

Mrs. Mary Hornick, 90 years old, died yesterday in her home at 5555 Cortland street.

'Super Race' Protested by 1,400 Swedish Doctors

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 23 (AP).—In an action obviously directed against Nazi philosophy, more than 1,400 Swedish doctors have signed an appeal to the war belligerents not to teach "that any race or any people have the right to dominate other people in life and property." Such teachings, said the appeal, "are not supported by science and counter thousands of years of historical experience which say that evolution of humanity is built, not by force, but by coöperation between individuals and nations."

'COUGHIN' COFFIN' IS COMING HOME WITH A PRAYER

Veteran Bomber Still Has Penciled Inscription.

BY JOHN THOMPSON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ALLIED HDQ., Algiers, Oct. 23.—Coughin' Coffin, a flak riddled veteran of 50 bombing missions from Tunisia to Sicily, is going home proudly bearing this penciled prayer scrawled on her nose many months ago by a factory mechanic:

"God bless the crew of this plane. I will say a prayer for your safe return."

"The Old Coffin," as her crew refers to her affectionately, has always brought her men back without a nick, altho three times she has limped in on one engine. Today she is flying on her third complete set of engines.

Once the crew counted 200 flak holes in the Coffin and she has had her tail surfaces, rudder, elevators, stabilizers, rudder cable, and hydraulics knocked out. After her last trip, the raid on Milo and Trapani airdromes in Sicily on July 11, the old Coffin was scheduled for the scrapheap. One engine was shot out over the target and she had only one landing wheel. Her pilot, Maj. William R. Pritchard of Mobile, Ala., brought the Coffin in and then as her lone wheel touched, she spun around and turned over on one side.

Crew Makes Her Fly Again.

Experts said the Coffin was dead, but her crew had other ideas. They felt pretty strongly about the Coffin and her prayer, so they hunted up parts. Now she has a new right wing, a complete new tail assembly, and two new engines. In a few weeks she will be flying over the Atlantic and landing once again in the United States.

It was just a year ago, when she looked like a hoodoo ship, that the B-26 Martin Marauder medium bomber got her name at Baer field, Fort Wayne, Ind. While leaving the Omaha depot to fly the plane to Fort Wayne, the bomber turned over on its back in the air. The pilot righted her, but the bomber turned over again before he finally got her straightened out.

"You just don't do that with a B-26," said her co-pilot, Maj. Joseph R. Klein of Paradise, Tex. "Her young pilot said later that those on the field must have thought he was really hot."

At Baer field Pritchard and his crew tried for four days to get their plane into the air, but she wouldn't fly. It became embarrassing for her crew chief, Master Sgt. Alfred L. Helmly of Texas City, Tex.

Pilot Keeps Plane.

"Every one wanted to get rid of her except Maj. Pritchard,," said Helmly. "I don't know why he wanted to keep her."

"I had been talking to an old master sergeant who told me he had seen lots of these babies act ugly on the ground and then be beauties in the air," Pritchard said. "Once we got her up, we never had another minute of trouble with her."

But the ground troubles at Baer field led to her being named by Lt. David Healion of New Jersey, then her co-pilot, who was later killed in a nonair accident. It was while looking for a place to write "Coughin' Coffin" that Helmly first noticed the penciled prayer.

"It was written, not printed," said Helmly. "We finally made out the signature as J. Reagan and the army has tried to find him. Whoever he is, he's sure got a lot of lifelong friends in the men who've ridden in the old Coffin."

Crew Completes 40 Missions.

Most of the original crew have gone home, having finished their 40 missions—40 for medium bomber men, who have a more rugged life than Flying Fortresses crews.

So to send the old Coffin home in style, they picked other warriors to fly with Pritchard and Helmly. These include Maj. Klein, Capt. Clarence W. Sanders of New Orleans, navigator; Staff Sgt. H. F. Young of Wapato, Wash., waist gunner; Tech. Sgt. Herman S. Pacheco of Fall River, Mass., turret gunner, and Staff Sgt. Howard D. Snedeger of Lewisville, Ind., tail gunner.

Pritchard and Klein have 40 missions, Sanders, 37; Snedeger, 27; Young, 38, and Pacheco, 31. Pritchard and Pacheco wear the distinguished flying cross and Klein, the silver star.

British Cruiser Is Sunk in Channel Fight: Germany

LONDON, Oct. 23 (AP).—A British cruiser was sunk and a destroyer set afire in a clash with light German naval formations near the channel islands off the French coast last night, German broadcasts said today. The German claim said the cruiser was hit by three to four torpedoes and blew up. The German craft was escorting a convoy when sighted by the British 60 miles southwest of the channel islands, the broadcast said. There was no British confirmation.

FOOD SHORTAGE IN INDIA MADE POLITICAL ISSUE

Ministry Puts Blame on Predecessor.

BY ALEX SMALL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CALCUTTA, India, Oct. 22 [Delayed].—The Bengal food shortage, the cause of thousands of deaths, became a political football today.

The present food ministry is trying to put the blame on the ministry which was ousted six months ago, while the latter is retorting thru its spokesman, Fazlul Huy, that the present ministry is to blame.

Hindus Loud in Criticism.

Mixed with it is the eternal communal question. The present ministry is being led by the All-India Moslem league and all Hindus are, of course, loud in their criticism.

One of the most debated issues in this ministry was its action in giving monopoly privileges for government purchase of grains to the three Ispahani brothers, who make up a Moslem firm.

This proceeding has provoked a howl from the Hindu and All-India Congress party-minded press. These newspapers are accusing the Ispahani brothers and their associates of squeezing huge profits out of human misery.

Defended by Government.

Government spokesmen and the Moslem press replied that such accusations are occasioned only by jealousy because Hindus have lost a chance to do wholesale profiteering. They add that the Ispahani brothers, far from profiteering, have lost huge sums in their zeal to buy up rice most advantageously for the public interest.

American comment here places emphasis on the statement that Bengal's food situation was caused by the loss of Burma's rice—in reality a negligible factor. The prize could be awarded to the gorgeously inept conclusion credited here to one Chicago newspaper that Bengal's plight proves the necessity for the reconquest of Burma for the British.

'Independent' India at War with Allies: Tokio

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The Tokio radio said yesterday that the Japanese sponsored government of "independent" India had declared war on Great Britain and the United States. Tokio announced yesterday that Japan had recognized the "independence" of India under a government organized at Singapore by Subhas Chandra Bose, anti-British faction leader.

THIEF TAKES FRENCH HORN.

Miss Ruth Balitz of 1106 Lillian street, Hobart, Ind., reported to police yesterday that while she made a telephone call from a booth in a loop store her French horn, valued at $250, which she had placed on the floor, was stolen.

WOMAN ROBBED OF PURSE.

A Negro robbed her of her purse containing her ration book and $2 while she was walking in front of her home, Mrs. Ann Davis, 447 East 80th street, told police yesterday.

WAVELL TO SIFT FAMINE DEATHS AT CALCUTTA

NEW DELHI, India, Oct. 23 (AP).—Marshal Wavell, inducted as viceroy of India three days ago, announced today that he is going to Calcutta to investigate at first hand the famine in Bengal which is willing thousands of destitute Indians.

Cholera is spreading, and Calcutta's four burning ghats [large tower crematories] are operating around the clock. Latest official statistics show 203 starving persons were admitted to Calcutta hospitals Thursday. Eighty-three died in hospitals that day. The figures do not include persons found dead on streets.

Wavell is likely to ascertain for himself whether the Bengal government has set up machinery to take over the whole December rice crop, estimated at about 9 million tons. If it has not, the central government may take charge to distribute it.

New Zealand's '43 Wheat Yield Best in Decade

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Oct. 23.—The 1943 wheat yield was the third largest in this century and unexceeded for a decade, New Zealanders learned today. The ministry of supply said the high yield resulted from growers' expanded efforts. Wheat and flour stocks held here are ample for national needs.

PILOT WRITES MOTHER ON DAY HE DIES IN CRASH

Second Lt. Alfred A. Arnold, 22 years old, pilot of a P-38 fighter plane in the army air force, was killed Oct. 14 when his plane crashed in Iceland, his mother, Mrs. Alfred Arnold, 4053 North Laramie avenue, said yesterday. She was informed of her son's death by the war department. Lt. Arnold wrote his mother on Oct. 14, she said, that he did not think there would be flying that day because it was too foggy to see the end of the runways at the air field where he was stationed. Lt. Arnold was graduated from Lane Technical High school in 1938 and was employed by R. R. Donnelley & Sons Co., as an engraver before he entered the air forces May 17, 1942. He received his commission April 12, 1943, at Williams field, Arizona, and went overseas in July.

Lt. Alfred A. Arnold.

LOG OF HELENA: IN 13 SCRAPS, HIT 15 WARSHIPS

Cruiser Known to Japs as 'Secret Weapon.'

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—She was "one of the fightingest men o'war that ever scoured the seas."

With that accolade the navy today told the story of the "brief, hell roaring life" of the cruiser Helena, sunk in the battle of Kula gulf.

She proved her might in 13 fire filled engagements in which she blasted, helped destroy or damage 15 Japanese warships.

The Japanese had given her an accolade, too. In a propaganda broadcast, the Japanese reported the United States navy had "a new secret weapon—a 6 inch machine gun." But it wasn't a machine gun—it was the rapid fire of the Helena's gun crews.

Hit at Pearl Harbor.

She was in Pearl Harbor when the Japanese struck on Dec. 7, 1941. Her anti-aircraft batteries accounted for at least six enemy planes. The Helena was hit, but repairs were made promptly.

She escorted the aircraft carrier Hornet. She was with the Wasp when that carrier was torpedoed Sept. 15, 1942. As Wasp survivors were picked up by the Helena, her men turned over all their clothing except one pair of shoes and a pair of dungarees each.

The Helena's first big engagement came shortly thereafter, in the night battle of Cape Esperance, where four Japanese destroyers, four cruisers, and a transport were sent down.

Just 98 seconds after the battle was joined, the Helena's guns had fired and sunk a Japanese destroyer. Then her big guns swung on a cruiser. Four and a half minutes later the cruiser went down.

A Japanese cruiser and another United States cruiser were swapping punches. The Helena moved in, turned her batteries on the enemy, and the Japanese cruiser quickly went down.

Flees Too Late.

An enemy destroyer sneaked in to fire a torpedo, but the Helena dodged. The destroyer tried to flee—too late. It already had been fired upon by another American ship. The Helena's guns finished the job.

The Helena's biggest day came later.

Japanese shore batteries had opened fire on American transports unloading troops at Guadalcanal, and the Helena was ordered to silence them. She did. Then the Japanese sent in bomber and fighter planes. Nine enemy bombers were shot down by American fire, four of them officially credited to the Helena's anti-plane batteries.

That night came the battle of Guadalcanal, a desperate effort by the Japanese to regain control of the Solomons. They failed, turned back crushed and beaten.

The Helena was the first to sight the enemy off Savo Island. She held her fire until she had steamed into the enemy fleet. Then a Japanese searchlight found the Helena.

Her main battery, first to fire in the battle, struck with a full salvo on the enemy cruiser from which the searchlight beamed. The enemy burst into flames lighting the battle area while American destroyers rushed in to loose their torpedos. Fire was maintained on the Japanese cruiser. She went down.

The Helena's main battery slowed down. But the secondary hammered a destroyer into the sea.

Six enemy ships sought to flee. The Helena chased them. One was a big cruiser which, it was learned later, had hurled the shells that tore the bridge from the San Francisco, killing Rear Adm. Daniel J. Callaghan, task force commander, and other officers.

The enemy cruiser was sunk. The Helena's secondary battery got another destroyer. Lighter guns poured shells into the bridge of another Japanese ship.

Still another enemy ship, lined up in the fleeing force, was set afire. The secondary battery got another destroyer.

The Japanese fleet scattered in confusion.

Came the battle of Kula gulf on July 5 and 6, when the Japanese lost 9 to 11 cruisers and destroyers. The United States lost one—the Helena.

When the action began, the Helena's main battery immediately sank an enemy ship. The secondary downed two destroyers in one-two order.

Sunk by Torpedoes.

Both batteries then shifted to new targets and had heavily damaged two more ships when enemy destroyers closed in. Their torpedoes crashed into the Helena, and she went down 20 minutes later.

Her men swam thru the oil covered water, floated on rafts. By the following morning all except 166 of her survivors had been picked up.

Those still in the water made their way to Vella Lavella. There, aided by friendly natives, they lived in a camp hidden under giant banyan trees.

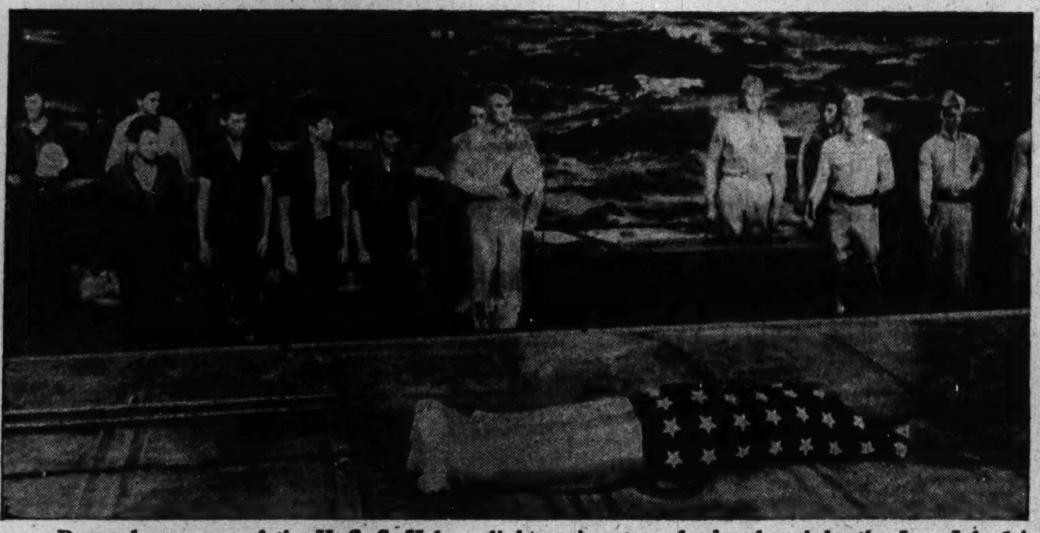
Japanese troops were on the island, and once a patrol approached close to the Helena's survivors. But natives disposed of the patrol.

Finally communication was established with United States naval forces on Tulagi Island.

Ten ships made the rescue, steaming thru uncharted waters constantly menaced by Japanese shore batteries and enemy warships cruising near-by.

Now, says the navy, "snatched from the sea and the steaming Jap infested South Pacific jungle, nearly 1,000 men of the Helena today stand fit and ready to fight again."

Helena Survivors in Last Tribute to Comrade



Rescued crewmen of the U. S. S. Helena, light cruiser torpedoed and sunk by the Japs July 6 in Kula gulf, pay respects to the memory of a comrade. The flag draped body lies in state aboard a sister ship of the Helena. This and the accompanying photograph have just been released by the navy department.

Smeared with oil, testimony to their battle for life in oil covered waters, two sailors from the Helena check in on a rescuing sister ship.

FORMER CHICAGO PASTOR KILLED IN SWEDISH PLANE

Dr. T. C. Hume on Craft Shot Down at Sea.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 23 (AP).—Sweden, disturbed by yesterday's attack on a civilian air liner, presumably by a German fighter plane, prepared to work out new plans for its air lines, and tonight there were hints that if Germany would not coöperate the Nazi courier plane traffic over Sweden might be halted.

Dr. T. C. Hume.

The plane, shot down off Sweden's west coast 50 miles north of Goeteborg, was smashed to bits, killing 13 persons, including Dr. T. C. Hume of Claremont, Cal., formerly a Chicago Congregational pastor. One crew member and one passenger were rescued. Other passengers included two Russian women and two children, two officers of the Swedish merchant navy, a British insurance agent, and a Swedish woman. The plane was en route from Britain to Sweden.

Air Lines Suspend Flights.

Swedish air lines immediately suspended their flights to Britain, but the newspaper Nya Dagligt Allehanda said the government would try to work out some kind of safe conduct plan like that for ocean shipping with both Germany and Britain.

It was the second Swedish transport plane lost under similar circumstances in 15 months' service. One of the survivors said the plane was pursued by a fighter plane of unidentified nationality. In a 10 minute interval it poured in three cannon and machine gun blasts. Passengers were preparing for a water landing when the second engine quit and the plane crashed.

[A New York Times Stockholm dispatch said the Germans shot down the plane because they believed Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, was on board on his way to Russia. The Gestapo believed the announcement of Eden's arrival in Moscow previously was a ruse. Germany was said in this dispatch to have been willing to pay $1,000,000 for information which would lead them to kill Eden and United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull.]

CHICAGO PASTOR TEN YEARS.

Dr. Theodore C. Hume is well remembered in Chicago, where he took a leading part in religious affairs of the city for ten years. One of Dr. Hume's first pastorates following his graduation from the Union Theological seminary in New York was that of the Summerdale Congregational church, Paulina street and Farragut avenue. He headed this church from 1930 until 1932, when he became minister of the New England Congregational church, Delaware place and Dearborn street.

Dr. Hume was a leader in Chinese relief and other foreign missions and relief movements of the church.

Dr. Hume had taken the plane from England to Stockholm in connection with his work as a secretary of the world council of churches in the department of reconstruction and rehabilitation. He was concerned with post-war rehabilitation of the destroyed churches.

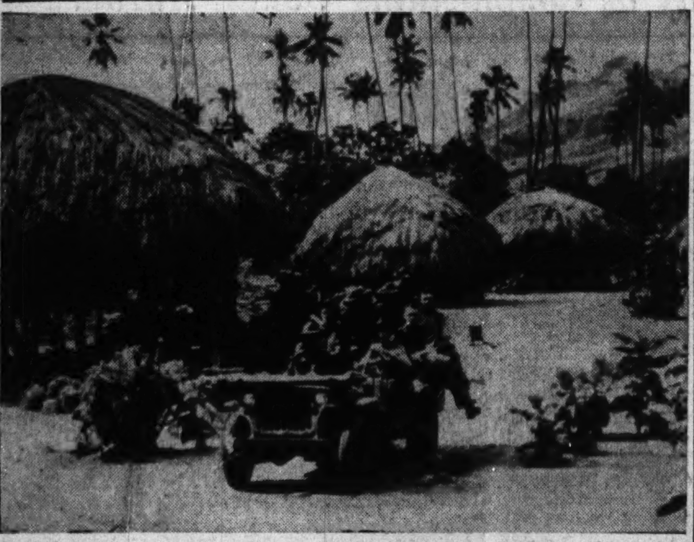
Was Born in India.

A Rhodes scholar and a Congregational minister for 13 years, Dr. Hume was born in India, where his father, Dr. Edward H. Hume, was then a medical missionary. He grew up in China and at the age of 14 was brought to America.

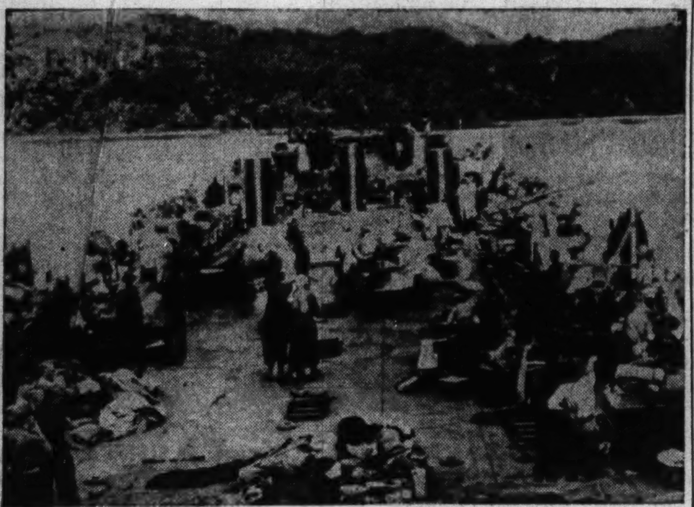
He was graduated from Yale university in 1925, studied at the Sorbonne in Paris and was a Rhodes scholar at Oxford from 1926 to 1929, where he won first honors.

He is survived by his father, his widow, Gertrude Baldwin Hume, now of New York, and five children, the eldest 13.

Allies Press Attack on Japs



The seven passenger civilian limousine has nothing on this seven passenger jeep, on which allied soldiers ride down what passes for a street in Kapit, New Guinea, after taking the village from the Japs.



[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Allied troops stand ready for landing as barge nears beach from which successful drive was launched against Japs at Finschhafen, New Guinea. Reports yesterday said Japs were thrown back again in attempt to reach sea from jungle positions.

DREAMS SELF INTO HARBOR; SAVED.

Sven Gunner Kronfelt, 45 years old, 728 Briar place, was rescued by two passersby yesterday when he leaped into Belmont harbor. He told his rescuers he had had a bad dream.

FIGHTERS' NEEDS SLASH CIVILIAN CIGARET SUPPLY

Cigaret manufacturers have begun to restrict deliveries to distributors, and in some instances have made general percentage reductions in filling orders, Chicago wholesalers and retailers reported yesterday.

Store managers for one retail tobacco chain were notified last week that their allotments would be reduced immediately 20 per cent below standing orders. Some other retailers said their supplies of one brand had been reduced about 30 per cent, and of another approximately 10 per cent.

Makers of some other brands have refused to accept increased orders. One wholesaler said that he received only 16 cases of one brand last week on a standing order for 30.

MARIGNY UPHELD KILLER OF OAKES, SAYS HIS GUARD

Court Is Told of Queries About Death Trials.

eight hours before De Marigny's arrest.

Assistant Prosecutor A. F. Adderley, a native Bahaman, asked what was taking place at Westbourne.

Cottage Mate "Excited."

"People were being questioned," Douglas replied.

Douglas said Marquis Georges de Visdelou, who shared De Marigny's cottage, spoke to the defendant "in a very excited manner."

"I didn't hear what was said," he added. "The marquis then went back into the living room where the questioning was in progress."

Adderley asked whether De Marigny left the living room at any time during the questioning.

"He did," said Douglas. "He went upstairs with Capt. Melchen [E. W. Melchen of the Miami police] and remained three-quarters of an hour."

Other witnesses have said De Marigny went upstairs at Westbourne about noon. Douglas' testimony corrobated their version.

W. E. A. Callender, associate defense counsel, turned quickly on cross-examination to the conversation at Westbourne.

He asked whether Douglas and De Marigny had not been discussing another case just before the latter asked the question about circumstantial evidence.

"I don't remember," said Douglas. "But I don't deny it."

The same question about the weapon conversation drew the same reply.

"Didn't the accused ask you if you had found the weapon in another case?" demanded Callender.

"I believe he did."

"Under the circumstances, was it unusual for Mr. De Marigny to ask those questions?"

"There was nothing unusual."

Draws Laugh from Audience.

The court audience laughed when Callender asked Douglas: "Didn't you say en route to Westbourne, 'Freddy, you are giving me a lot of trouble. Last night was my night off and I had to spend it guarding you'?"

"I might have," Douglas returned.

He denied, however, that he had commented: "All this fuss over Harry just because he had dough."

Callender asked whether it were Douglas, and not De Marigny, who remarked that Oakes "should have been killed, anyhow."

"I deny that," the witness came back. "The accused said it."

Tells of Missing Shirt.

The day's first witness, Maj. Herbert Pemberton of the Nassau police, had reported a search of the chicken farm and De Marigny's other Nassau property had failed to produce a missing shirt the defendant said he wore the night of the slaying.

Other clothing worn by De Marigny that night is in the court as evidence, but prosecution witnesses have sworn he could not account for the shirt.

As Pemberton testified about the shirt, the defendant leaned against the bars of the prisoner's dock. Again he was dressed in a white linen suit.

His chief defense counsel, Godfrey Higgs, in his questioning of Pemberton brought out that even the outhouse at De Marigny's chicken farm had been dug up by officers in their quest for the shirt.

Employes Threatened.

Pemberton admitted he had threatened to hold employes at the farm as accomplices in the slaying if police found any hidden evidence there.

Telling of the search of the farm, a small house, and a garage, Higgs asked:

"Was this done without notice to the accused and without a search warrant?"

"Yes," replied the witness, "except for the chicken farm, and defense counsel was there at the time."

The prosecution has stressed the significance of the missing shirt. The crown has made the point that the clothing of Oakes' slayer likely would have bloodstains or burns.

Pemberton displayed a slightly bloodstained towel and then told about bloodstained doors in the bedroom where Oakes was attacked and in the room where Harold G. Christie, his close friend who discovered the body, said he spent the night.

Quiz Turns to Christie.

"Were these stains analyzed?" asked Higgs.

"No."

"Why not?"

"I don't know, sir."

Atty. Gen. Eric Hallinan asked:

"Could Mr. Christie's bed have been slept in?"

"Yes, sir. It could have."

Yesterday Pemberton said there was an indentation in the pillow on the bed in Christie's room, but the sheets were hardly disturbed.

Altho Christie has sworn he slept all night at Westbourne, both prosecution and defense have referred to a statement by Capt. Edward Sears of the Nassau police, who said he saw a man he recognized as Christie in a station wagon downtown during the night.

Mrs. Oakes Arrives.

As court was adjourned until Monday De Marigny smiled broadly, then grew serious and gazed at the ceiling.

Mrs. Eunice Oakes, the widow, whose testimony will be a high point of the case next week, flew in today from Miami. With her was Walter W. Foskett, Oakes' Palm Beach attorney.

At a preliminary hearing, Mrs. Oakes told of unfriendliness between her husband and De Marigny which grew out of the twice divorced defendant's surprise marriage to Nancy, the eldest Oakes daughter.

GIRL, 15; BOY, 17, KILLED AS CARS COLLIDE IN FOG

Miss Dorothy Martin, 15 years old, and Richard H. Russell, 17, both of Wilmington, were killed yesterday when their automobile crashed head-on with a 12 ton truck on route 113, near Coal City, Grundy county. State police said that the two were driving in a heavy fog, and that the accident occurred as they came out of the fog. Leo F. Waldvogel of New Lenox, Will county, the truck driver, was not hurt. He said that the oncoming car was on his side of the highway and he had no chance to veer over to avoid the collision.

Lawrence J. Kiernan, 55, postmaster at Genoa, De Kalb county for the last 10 years, died in Geneva hospital of injuries incurred last Tuesday when his auto struck a bridge on route 47, two miles north of Lily lake.

BROWDER SAYS MOSCOW WANTS BULLITT TO LOSE

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 23 (AP).—Earl Browder, national secretary of the Communist party, says the election of William C. Bullitt, Democratic candidate for mayor of Philadelphia, would be "resented" by the soviet government at Moscow.

Declaring that Bullitt, former ambassador to France and Russia, urged recently that the United States "stop all material assistance to the soviet union pending negotiation of an entirely new political agreement," Browder told a meeting in Town hall last night:

"Clearly such expressions of policy toward our soviet ally on the part of an official of the United States government could have but one result — to seriously prejudice our relationships and embarrass our own officials in the conduct of the war."

PICK VIRGINIAN TO HEAD STATE UNIVERSITIES

John L. Newcomb, president of the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va., yesterday was elected president of the National Association of State Universities. Newcomb succeeded Herman B. Wells, president of Indiana university, Bloomington, Ind. Others elected were Frederick A. Middlebush, president of the University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo., vice president, and Deane W. Malott, chancellor of the University of Kansas at Lawrence, secretary-treasurer.

Robert W. De Voe of Lincoln, Neb., was elected president of the Association of Governing Boards of State Universities and Allied institutions. Others who were elected were L. L. Rummel, Cincinnati, O., first vice president; J. J. Herbert, Manistique, Mich., second vice president, and Ora L. Wildermuth, Gary, Ind., secretary-treasurer.

2 SUE F. J. LEWIS, FORMER RESERVE BANK CHAIRMAN

Frank J. Lewis, former chairman of the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago, yesterday was named defendant in two suits, each asking $100,000 damages and charging malicious prosecution and libel, filed by Joseph Dickoff, real estate agent, and E. B. Donnell, attorney, both of West Palm Beach, Fla.

The suit by Donnell charges that Lewis and his wife maliciously conspired to injure him in connection with charges brought by Lewis in midsummer alleging mail fraud in a Florida real estate deal. Dickoff's suit does not mention Mrs. Lewis.

Both Dickoff and Donnell were discharged in court by direction of Federal Judge John P. Barnes, who termed the charges "the thinnest mail fraud case I ever heard of—and that goes a long way."

GLORY PASSES UP THE YANKS WHO KEEP 'EM FLYING

Work 72 Hours Straight, Get Time Off as Bonus.

BY E. R. NODERER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

AT AN 8TH AIR FORCE SERVICE COMMAND BASE, Somewhere in England, Oct. 22.—This is a story about the boys who never get any medals or glory, but to whom "Keep 'Em Flying" is plenty more than just a slogan.

It's up to the thousands of men of the 8th air force service command to get battle damaged bombers back in the air as soon as possible, to modify planes upon their arrival here, to keep a steady flow of bombs rolling to scores of airdromes, to train personnel in technical schools and to do uncounted other jobs which never hit the headlines.

Biggest Command Here.

To accomplish all this takes personnel which explains why this outfit is the biggest command in this theater.

Bombers which return too heavily damaged to be moved are taken over by mobile repair units, some of which are on the road for a month at a time. Often temporary repairs enable the bombers to be flown to this base. It is nothing for men of this command to work day and night to get a job finished.

"Twelve of us once worked 72 hours straight without hitting our bunks," said Sgt. Russell J. Olson of Trent, S. D., a sheet metal specialist. "We got a 48 hour leave as bonus, but we needed it."

When these boys don't have the proper tools, they make them. Two machinists worked three days to make a special tool when a particular type of rivet arrived without the necessary gun. They were Sergeants Alfred G. Dannull of Denver, Colo., and Henry Bennett of Genoa, Ill.

"We made the tool with pieces of steel that were kicking around the machine shop," Bennett explained.

Add Battle Gadgets.

Much of the work here consists in making changes in planes suggested by their combat crews whose battle experience gives them ideas overlooked by the designers. Among the Chicagoans who have spent long hours in the shops here are Corporals John C. O'Hara, 3430 Belmont avenue, and Robert W. Shavy, 2645 North Racine avenue.

In the sheet metal shop, Sgt. George C. Budka, whose wife, Eulalia, lives at 2179 South 17th street, Milwaukee, was repairing a hole chewed in a Flying Fortress wing by anti-aircraft fire. He explained how the damaged section is cut out and replaced with great care by a patch which must be set flush with the surface.

Hours often are spent tearing a wing apart to replace even slight damage to its interior caused by the penetration of a piece of flak. In the same shop was Pvt. Thomas C. Bridges of Rantoul, Ill.

Make Office Furniture.

Both the north and south sides of Chicago were represented in the woodworking shop where furniture for the base offices is constructed. Sgt. Adam Klaus, 1514 North Honore street, who spent 12 years in the retail clothing business, is now a skilled woodworker. Representing the other side of the city was Sgt. Adolph Teska, 5951 South Seeley avenue, who said there is never a dull moment in this department.

When not rushed, the men of the service command work 8½ hours a day with one 24 hour and one 48 hour pass a month. Much of the time they work on planes parked on the airdromes, frequently in the cold British rain, but rarely are there any complaints.

"The men are too busy to gripe," said Capt. Robert Carnish of River Falls, Wis., base adjutant.

Visits Sister

Lt. Col. Louis de Loriol, of British army general staff, chats with sister, Mrs. Frederick Hiller, during visit to her Evanston home.

Admiration for American military training facilities was expressed yesterday by Lt. Col. Louis de Loriol of the British army, who has completed a tour of middle western, southern and west coast training centers and is spending the weekend with his sister, Mrs. Frederick Hiller, 1218 Forest avenue, Evanston.

He arrived in America Sept. 25 on a confidential mission and expects to return to England early in November.

CHICAGOAN TO BE SANTA AT YANK PARTY IN BRITAIN

Hundreds of Children Will Be Guests.

BY E. R. NODERER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH 8TH AIR FORCE SERVICE COMMAND IN ENGLAND, Oct. 23.—A thousand British children are going to have a happier Christmas than usual this year, thanks to a company of signalmen commanded by Lt. H. B. Raff of Rock Island, Ill.

It all began when Raff and his men decided they would like to do something in return for the hospitality of the British families in the towns around their base. Each man sent a letter to a pastor or club in his home town suggesting that it might be possible to send a few inexpensive toys or hard candies for a Christmas party being planned for the children in these parts. Toys or holiday knick knacks are not available here.

"The response has been so great that what started out to be a small party is going to be the best of parties," Raff said.

Chicagoan to Be Santa.

Sgt. John Gardner, 2015 Howe street, Chicago, is going to be Santa Claus. He's in charge of the huge box into which the gifts are being stored.

One of the responses came from Dr. W. R. Hodgson, pastor of the First Congregational church of Moline, Ill., who had been written by Corp. Leonard Hughes of Moline. Dr. Hodgson said he had spread the word around at several women's clubs and expected a couple hundred gifts to be sent. The men of this company, who are hard working radio specialists, are looking forward to the party as much as the children, Raff said.

It's the job of this particular outfit, many of whom are from Chicagoland, to repair or rebuild the battle damaged radio and communications system of American bombers. The job does not win them any medals but it is an important link in the chain of hard work which keeps the bombers in the air.

The damaged radios are removed from the planes and replaced immediately with a serviceable set. So far no planes have been grounded for the lack of communications equipment.

Many of the radio men were "hams" in peace time and have such an intense interest in their work it is hard to make them knock off, Raff said. Among the best are Sgt. John Reith of Kokomo, Ind., and Sgt. Albert A. Johnson, 138 Interocean avenue, South Chicago Heights.

When I asked Raff if the men ever worked long shifts on rush jobs he said, "No; never more than 18 or 20 hours at a stretch. Then they get five or six hours' sleep. A radio man loses efficiency if he tries to work more than 20 hours."

On several occasions the men have crawled out of bed at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning and returned to the shop to work on a problem troubling them.

"When they get so they can't think about anything else, we give them a couple days furlough," Raff said.

Bases Kept in Touch.

Much of the trouble to the planes' intercommunication systems is caused by the crews who get tired of pressing a button on the instrument when they want to speak to somebody else in the bomber.

"They spit on the button and at 40 degrees below zero freeze it down," Raff explained. "That burns the system out."

This company also operates the base telephone system and the teletypes which connect a number of bases. Pvt. Thomas J. Heck, 5222 Carmen avenue, and Pvt. Harold J. Wesa, 4016 St. Louis avenue, both of Chicago, are telephone linemen. Pvt. Edwin Leibelt of Sheboygan, Wis., is the switchboard operator.

In the message center Corp. Michael E. Hruby Jr., 1547 South Oak Park avenue, Berwyn, Ill., operates the teleprinter. Corp. John J. Karnick, 5520 West 24th place, and Pvt. Louis P. Kuda, 4352 West Walton street, Chicago, also are in this department.

As mascots the outfit has four kittens born in Raff's office. Their names are Junior, Rebel, Nig, and Black Mike. All have the rank of master sergeant except Black Mike, who was broken to a private for committing an indiscretion.

ROBBED OF PURSE AND $15.

Police made a search last night for a young man who robbed Mrs. Patrick McMahon, 501 West 60th place, of her purse and $15 at 69th and Normal boulevard.

POULTRY PRICES REDUCED; ERASE DRIED FRUIT LIST

Weekly Ceiling on Green Goods Increased.

Reductions of 1 to 3 cents a pound in retail poultry prices, effective Tuesday, were announced last night by Michael F. Mulcahy, Chicago area office of price administration director. Cutup chicken was added to the community ceiling price list for the first time. Prices for ducks and geese were unchanged.

For fresh drawn chickens, prices are lowered 1 and 1½ cents a pound, and for quick frozen, eviscerated fowl, 2½ and 3 cents. Prices for fresh dressed and frozen chicken are raised 1 and 1½ cents a pound on the new list.

In addition to the chicken price revision, the new OPA order removed all packaged and dried fruits from the community ceiling price list, and limited the area subject to community prices for bread to Cook, Du Page and Lake counties in Illinois and Lake county in Indiana.

Set at Wholesale Level.

Mulcahy explained that packaged and dried fruits were removed from the list because new prices for the 1943 pack have been established at the wholesale level. Prices for bread in Kane and McHenry counties—the two other counties in the Chicago OPA area—are to be determined in accordance with the general maximum price regulation, he said.

Several increases and two decreases were announced in the weekly community ceiling price list for the most common fruits and vegetables.

Prices of green and wax beans, home grown carrots with tops, dry white onions, potatoes, home grown spinach, and California and New York tomatoes were raised 1 to 4 cents per selling unit. Carrots without tops and Washington spinach were reduced.

Grapes, lemons, oranges, cabbage, western carrots, lettuce, dry medium size onions, peas, hothouse tomatoes, and eggs were unchanged.

Herring Brought Under Control.

Great Lakes herring was brought under price control yesterday with the fixing of ceilings at approximately the level of 1942 season averages. Fixed markups determine the retail price. The new maximums are effective immediately, except at the wholesale level, where they are effective Oct. 30. The prices are set for the period Oct. 1 to Dec. 15, when the herring run takes place.

Assurances that gasoline rations will not be reduced before the end of the year, and that there will be no coupon rationing of coal this winter, were given yesterday by Raymond S. McKeough, Chicago regional OPA administrator.

JELLY 'FREEZE' BOOSTS HONEY AND SIRUP SALES

Retailers reported yesterday that sales of citrus marmalades, honey, and sirup increased briskly after an OPA order suspended retail sales of jams, jellies, preserves, and fruit butters, preliminary to rationing beginning next Sunday. Citrus marmalades are not covered by the rationing order, altho they will be included in the program with a point value of zero.

Most customers accepted the latest rationing edict without complaint. Complaints came chiefly from mothers with several children, or women who packed lunches for members of their families. They asserted the new rationing will mean a hardship because they had been using jams and jellies to stretch butter, meat, and cheese.

Grocery clerks said many housewives wanted to buy larger quantities of non-rationed spreads than the stores permitted under self-imposed restrictions. The limit generally is two or three jars per customer.

BURGLARS STEAL WHISKY.

Harry Matias, a tavernkeeper at 935 West 18th street, reported to police yesterday that thieves stole $260 worth of liquor and $20 in a burglary Friday night.

INEPT OFFICIALS HELD CAUSE OF JELLY RATIONING

Food Institute Chief Sees No Relief.

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Blaming necessity for jam and jelly rationing on lack of "real farsightedness in Washington," Gordon C. Corbaley, president of the American Institute of Food Distribution, said today "there is a grave danger of this shortage continuing until final ending of the war."

His prepared statement said "government officials knew late in 1942 that strawberry acreage was being materially reduced as a result of fears among growers that they would not have help available for a crop that requires a large amount of hand labor."

Need of Control Ignored.

"Neither the war food administration nor the OPA did anything at all about establishing controls which would put away berries and fruits that consumers so seriously need during winter and spring months."

"This shortsightedness is partially responsible for the present shortage of canned fruits and is entirely to blame for our not having on hand the comparatively small quantities of jam material that would have provided almost unlimited consumption for civilian populations," the statement said.

Corbaley said the shortage of jams and jellies was due partially to reduced fruit production in 1943, because manufacturers were unable to get authority from OPA to have their representatives accumulate raw materials, and because processors had no assurance from OPA that they would be permitted price increases to cover higher cost of securing berries and fruits in competition with the fresh market.

Growers to Cut Acreage.

Predicting the shortage would last until the war's end, Corbaley said:

"Present intentions of strawberry growers is to cut their acreage another 20 per cent. Fear of continued labor shortages is responsible for that. The condition threatens other berries, peaches, and apricots because the larger part of raw materials for this manufacturing comes from Pacific coast states, where the labor situation is worse than in any other part of the country."

American Color Slide Salon to Open on Dec. 6

The first annual American color slide salon will be held in the Art center, 32 West Randolph street, from Dec. 6 to Dec. 18, under auspices of the color division of the Photographic Society of America. Closing date for entries is Nov. 29.

PRESIDENT HAS GRIPPE, WITH ONE DEGREE OF FEVER

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—The White House said today that President Roosevelt has a case of grippe with one degree of fever.

Sec. Stephen Early said the chief executive's physician, Rear Adm. Ross T. McIntire, navy surgeon general, had ordered the President to remain in his room again today and to cancel all appointments.

The President was reported yesterday to be suffering from a head cold, with some body aches, but had no temperature.

FALL FATAL TO DISHWASHER.

George Chiakalos, 51 years old, 2132 Warren avenue, died in County hospital yesterday of injuries incurred in a fall down the stairs at a restaurant at 2000 Madison street, where he was a dishwasher.

35 Penalized by Ration Boards on Speed Count

The names of 35 persons penalized by their local rationing boards for speeding were announced yesterday by Michael F. Mulcahy, Chicago area office of price administration director. The heaviest penalties: John Kudla, 3609 South Wood street, whose B gasoline ration book was revoked for the duration of the war, and his A book for 60 days; William Paris of Melrose Park, whose A book was suspended for three months.

FATALLY INJURED IN FALL.

Christensen Brandt, 63 years old, 2926 Palmer square, was injured fatally Friday when a ladder broke while he was washing the walls at St. Sylvester's Catholic church, 2157 Humboldt boulevard and he fell 20 feet.

WOOLTON SEES WORLD SHORT OF FOOD IN A YEAR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Food Minister Woolton in an address at Dumfries today warned that a world food shortage will soon begin to make itself felt in Britain. He told land army girls that "we are running into a world shortage of food. Some people thought only ships were necessary, but that isn't true."

He added that in 12 months from today "we shall be fortunate if we can still have our present meat ration. In the same way there will be a shortage of milk and eggs unless there can be an increase of the growth of stocks."

He asserted that the country must depend more and more on British agriculture.

BLAMES SUBSIDY POLICY FOR FOOD SHORTAGE CRISIS

Rep. Landis Cites Waste Under New Deal.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—The recent spoilage of 475 carloads of potatoes is just one indication of things to come "if we do not immediately reverse the administration's trend toward socialism," Rep. Gerald W. Landis [R., Ind.] warned tonight.

Gerald W. Landis.

In an address prepared for delivery over the radio, Rep. Landis placed the blame for food shortages on New Deal methods. Calling for a policy of fair prices to replace the subsidy policy, he asserted that if the administration "insists on the subsidy program and the hold-the-line order, we can expect serious shortages and more rationing this winter."

"The bungling burocrats must assume the full responsibility for food shortages," he said. ". . . The sad fact remains that the same inexperienced New Deal burocrats who wasted money and man power on boondoggling projects have wasted food produced by patriotic farmers."

Praises Private Traders.

The American farmer, processor, and distributor need take no blame for shortages of foodstuffs, Landis said. He reminded his listeners that "private traders have done their best within the limitations set up by the Washington know-it-alls."

"Right now," he added, "many cities are without oranges; many more are short of butter; some are rationing fluid milk, and a number of our citizens are doing without foods that they should have.

"Why? The whole blame can be located in one small area of our nation—Washington, D. C."

Added to the natural hazards of frosts, floods, and droughts, Landis said, are artificial factors causing food shortages. He listed them as:

"Low price ceilings, the New Deal philosophy of scarcity, dumping and wasting of food, scarcity of farm labor, farm machinery shortages, too much regulation and red tape from Washington, subsidies instead of fair prices, and the administration's lack of confidence in the patriotism of food producers, processors, and distributors."

Tells of Potato Dumping.

Landis told of the dumping of 22 carloads of potatoes at Vincennes, Ind., which he himself observed and reported to War Food Administrator Marvin Jones.

"I saw potatoes loaded into army trucks and hauled off to the city dump," he said. "I immediately made a trip to the city dump and watched them in the process of dumping. The man in charge said that he was making money letting people pick out good potatoes at 25 cents a bushel, or he himself would have them washed for one dollar a bushel. . . ."

After Jones had been notified, Landis said, the dumping was stopped and stacks were erected to sort the remaining carloads.

Admit 475 Carloads Lost.

"The good potatoes were sent to Indianapolis to be processed," he said. "The balance either went down the sewer or was dumped at night. The New Dealers tried to whitewash this blunder by giving out a release that there were only one and one-half carloads lost, but the war food administration finally reported this week that there were 22 carloads lost at Vincennes. According to the testimony of the food administrator before the banking and currency committee, federal officials purchased 9,000 carloads of potatoes and lost 475 carloads."

The Indiana congressman cited other examples of food waste thru spoilage, including 19 carloads of beans, 18 million cases of condensed milk, and 1,900,000 pounds of rolled oats, to prove his contention that the potato waste was not an isolated incident.

"How long this can continue no one can say," he said. "The New Dealers think the nation can stand it indefinitely, but the taxpayers are beginning to doubt it. It is impossible for the government to be as efficient in handling the entire economy of the country as it is for millions of American citizens to manage their own business. A private owner would not let 475 carloads of potatoes rot and would not throw them away half bad and half good, because it would be his own money, not the money of a few million taxpayers whom he would never have to face.

"The efforts of millions of victory gardeners would not be booted down the sewer in one kick. . . . I know the New Dealers will tell you that a few million dollars' worth of potatoes, a few million cases of condensed milk, a few million dozen eggs, and a few million dollars' worth of fruits and vegetables don't amount to much. But you people who are paying the 20 per cent withholding tax will have to pay the bill."

Mexico to Provide Cash for New Pacific Highway

MAZATLAN, Mexico, Oct. 23 (AP).—President Avila Camacho announced last night that funds would be included in next year's budget for work on the international highway running from Nogales, Ariz., south along the Pacific coast. He said money would be appropriated for paving the completed part of the highway and that damage done by storms would be repaired.

GENERAL DENIES WASTE CHARGES ON ARSENAL JOB

Maj. Gen. William N. Porter, chief of the army's chemical warfare service, asserted here yesterday that the army will welcome an investigation by the Truman committee of the United States senate into charges of waste in disposing of construction material at the army arsenal at Pine Bluff, Ark.

"Results are what count and we have got them," the general who was in Chicago briefly between trains, stated crisply. "I hope the committee sends its investigators to Pine Bluff. Among other things they will find is that we are making millions of incendiary bombs which are burning up the German cities today. The Germans don't like it. The arsenal is doing its job speedily and efficiently."

Report Costly Junk.

The general's remarks were inspired by reports from Washington that an inquiry into waste at the Pine Bluff arsenal has been undertaken by the Truman committee as a result of charges published in a Little Rock, Ark., newspaper that materials obtained as scrap from the arsenal were being offered for sale by a junk dealer at 500 per cent profit.

Thirty elevated cars from New York City, the newspaper said, were among the material disposed of as junk. Other material was said to include 600,000 board feet of lumber, quantities of pipe, window frames, and concrete reinforcing rods, piles of cables and cable clamps, valves and conduits, and quantities of bolts and nails.

The demand for an inquiry was said to have been supported by Sen. Hattie W. Caraway [D., Ark.], who was quoted as having stated that she would ask the war department to look into the matter.

Explains Car Sale.

"When the Pine Bluff arsenal was built, it was 10 miles from transportation," Gen. Porter explained. "Rubber and gas were scarce. We were advised that the New York elevated cars could be used to get the men to their jobs. That was two years ago, right after Pearl Harbor. We obtained the 30 cars from New York.

"When we got them out here, we found bus transportation would do the job better and faster. Therefore, we did the proper thing, discarded them. They were sold as junk to the the highest bidder under government rules. There was no scandal in that.

"The other material, concerning the sale of which Mrs. Caraway complains, was left by the constructors who built the arsenal. When its usefulness was over, it was sold under government regulations to the the highest bidder. There was no scandal in that.

"If a few hundred dollars was spent inadvisedly, I am sorry but not too sorry because in a project of this size, built and operated as rapidly as this one was, the big thing was to get the job done and get the incendiary bombs rolling toward Hitler's cities. This has been done and done well."

FARMER LEARNS HE CANNOT USE OWN EQUIPMENT

Ration Board to Handle His Combine.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 23 [Special].—An Illinois farmer today was under restraint of an unusual federal court order issued to prevent him from using a harvesting combine that is his own property. Instead, the head of his county rationing board was directed to take charge of the machine and operate it for the benefit of other farmers.

"It certainly looks like virtual confiscation of property," the defendant, Floyd A. Link of Media, Ill., declared after he was served with the order by a United States deputy marshal.

Link operates a farm implement business in the village of Media and a 110 acre farm in Henderson county in the northwest section of the state.

Named in Complaint.

Needing a combine to harvest the bean and oat crops on his farm, Link last July asked the ration board to issue him a priority to use the combine he had purchased as an implement dealer, the only one he was able to buy this year.

When the board refused his request, Link went ahead and used the combine without the required certificate. W. L. Forgey, chairman of the board, filed a complaint against him, alleging that the board's authority would be nullified if Link were permitted to continue withholding the combine from other farmers who assertedly had a prior claim to it thru applications made with the board.

On the basis of these representations, Judge J. Leroy Adair in the federal District court here issued a temporary injunction on Thursday restraining Link from using the combine and appointing Forgey as receiver to take it over and operate it for others unable to harvest their crops without it.

Bought and Paid For.

"I don't see how they can do this to me with property I bought and paid for," Link said. "They haven't taken it away from me yet and I don't feel that I should let them."

Link said that when he applied to the ration board's farm machinery committee for a certificate to use his own machine, he was told he should sell it to another farmer, Earl Bricker, whom he described as an AAA committeeman.

"At the time they told me I must sell the combine to Bricker," Link continued, "he had fewer acres to harvest than I did. Furthermore, he owns a combine which I sold him two years ago. And it's not a matter of there being no other combines in the county. I've been selling them here for 11 years.

Charges Favoritism.

"It looks to me like it is a matter of favors being shown when the board insisted that I sell my only combine to a man who already had one."

Link said today that the temporary restraining order requires him to appear in federal court at Peoria Nov. 1 to show cause why the restraint should not be made permanent. He has retained an attorney, he said, and will protest the order at that time.

MENTAL STRAIN OF THIS WAR NOT LIKE 1917 BRAND

Men Facing Machine Age Crackups.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 23 (AP).—The mental breakdowns of American soldiers, largest and costliest item of our present losses, are different from those of World War I. and require high morale as a cure.

This report was made to the Association of Military Surgeons of the United States today by Dr. Edward A. Strecker, consultant in psychiatry to the secretary of war, the navy, and the army air forces.

Under Great Strain.

In World War I. the common mental breakdowns were due to the hysterias. These brought on blindness in perfectly good eyes, paralysis in entirely healthy legs. They were due to shock and fear in battle. They were not deliberate, Dr. Strecker explained, but were caused by the personality trying camouflage to protect itself.

In the present war the men are under great strain for long periods, for they are fighting with complicated machinery that not only protects them but also takes more out of them to operate. The long continued worry breaks their minds.

In fact, said Dr. Strecker, stout fellows who would not have been expected to crack in previous wars, break in this one now and then. The reason seems to be that human endurance is reaching its limit.

"Increasingly deeper layers of the protective veneer are being stripped from the human psyche," he explained, "and greater depths of horror are being uncovered."

High Morale Best Remedy.

To meet the strain of long continued anxiety, Dr. Strecker said, high morale, both at home and in the troops, is the best preventive and remedy.

The men in this war preferably are treated right in the combat area instead of being sent home. Their medicines are rest, good food, sedatives, and the opportunity, while in twilight consciousness, to talk about their battle experiences and so get rid of the worst fears. If they have to be brought home, the best treatment is in groups, in hospitals, in recreation camps, and in retraining centers.

MONTANA SUGGESTS SENDING HORSE MEAT TO STARVING EUROPE

Bozeman, Mont., Oct. 23 (AP). — Montana today offered 50 million pounds of horse meat to help feed Europe's starving peoples upon their liberation.

A committee assembled here to recommend Montana live stock production goals for 1945 said 75,000 to 100,000 roaming horses are available for slaughter. The war food administration will be asked to pass the information along to the director of foreign relief and rehabilitation, Herbert H. Lehman, a committee spokesman said.

Elimination of the horses would provide forage for 125,000 more cattle or 400,000 more sheep in Montana, the group estimated.

PLANE CRASH CAUSE MYSTERY.

Naval flight officers at the Glenview air training station told a coroner's jury yesterday that they had been unable to determine the cause of the crash of a plane near Libertyville Friday in which Ensign Howard W. Dibbens, Garden City, Kas., was killed.

OPA INCREASES PENALTY FIXED ON DEALER 400%

John Limbrunner, owner of a meat market at 31 South Genesee street, Waukegan, was ordered to suspend sales of rationed goods for 10 days, starting Nov. 8, in an order entered yesterday by W. M. McFarland, chief hearing commissioner of the Chicago area for the office of price administration. Charges of violating OPA rules, filed against Limbrunner, were heard Sept. 3 in Waukegan by Minard E. Hulse, hearing commissioner, who recommended two days' suspension. McFarland, in his review of the decision, held the penalty was inadequate. Limbrunner's defense was that he sold meat without collecting ration coupons to keep it from spoiling.

OPA Gasoline Specialist Named to Executive Post

David Clint, former office manager for Montgomery Ward & Co., and gasoline specialist for the office of price administrationfi Friday was named acting executive officer of the OPA area office here by Michael F. Mulcahy, area director. He succeeds R. Emmet Stritch, who resigned to become administrative officer of the federal housing administration.

"I'M ON MY OWN"

Hush!
Shhh!
This is the jungle!

The trees ... the shape of the leaves ... vines snaking along branches ... even the pattern of sunlight and shadow are strange.

No birds sing. No squirrels leap from limb to limb. No sound—except the unheard sound, the felt sound of watching, waiting, listening things.

I'm alone ... on my own.

And somewhere up the trail, I can tell, a Jap sniper's waiting for me. Hung in a net ... his gun cocked ... his finger tight on the trigger ... waiting for me to move into the line of his sights. Like I'm waiting for him.

This time the chips are down! Nobody's going to split this pot. It's winner take all. And the winner's the one who gets in the first shot. At the end of this trail there's going to be one more dead Jap—or a Marine who isn't coming home.

Waiting him out, and thinking back, I can see where I was wrong. I thought when I enlisted along with the other kids, that maybe I'd given up the very thing I wanted most—the liberty I'd always known. But I was wrong. In this war they teach you to think and plan and act on your own ...

And now out here alone, matching my wits and my guts against the cunning and courage of madmen—that's what's going to get me through. That's what's going to bring me home!

Home to my folks. Home to my girl. Home to my future. Home to the land that was built by and for men who thought and planned and acted on their own. My land, my America, my country where there will always be new and better things ... where there will always be equality for all ... where there will always be freedom unlimited ... as long as men are free to stand alone.

That's what I want when I come home! That's what I'm fighting for! The opportunity to go ahead ... on my own!

Keep it for me until I come back

For we believe there can be no peace without Victory ... but we believe we can and must win this war soon ... help bring our sons and brothers back again to their jobs and homes and even better futures than they had before. And, together, turn to peaceful things—to the building of an even finer Kelvinator, an even greater Nash.

THE STAKE.

As the time approaches for consideration in the senate of a resolution defining the relations of America to foreign nations after the war, the people of this country are wondering whether American rights and welfare are going to be protected. There is reason for anxiety. The speeches of some of the senators sound as if they didn't belong to an American assembly but rather were spokesmen for principals abroad.

It is common knowledge that the internationalists wish to take from congress the right to fix tariffs. Likewise, American business men are to be deprived in greater or less degree of the right to seek foreign markets; the control of foreign trade is to pass to some kind of an international authority. This arrangement seems to have found some support among great corporations because they think they'll get whatever export business is to be had and the little fellows will be squeezed out.

The plan for world currency management is already well advanced. The control of the dollar will pass from the hands of congress to some kind of international banking authority in which Americans will have only a minority voice tho they will put up most of the money and therefore take most of the risks. No doubt the American representatives will be, as the saying goes, internationally minded, a circumstance that will work to the disadvantage of all other American bankers.

Congress is also to lose the right to declare war and maintain an army. That is the true meaning of the various proposals to establish an international army as an alleged instrument for keeping the peace. We are to go to war even when our people don't feel called upon to do so and, because the international force must be stronger than any national force that might oppose it, we are to be allowed no more of an army than can easily be overcome by an international army composed of professional cutthroats.

Since these charges have been made often, and never denied by the internationalists, we regard them as proved. We can only hope that the patriotic members of congress will succeed in smoking out the seditious ones in the coming debates.

ON GIVING THE COMMIES A HELPING HAND.

The exposure by the American Mercury that the publication, In Fact, and its editor, George Seldes, have adhered zealously to the Communist party line will occasion no surprise among adult Americans who have seen the paper. There may be a few liberals, as they miscall themselves, who are so innocent and so unperceptive that they can't spot such publications almost at a glance, but brighter persons can and do. Most American publishers and most of the members of congress know what's cooking when they pick up papers like In Fact or read what the Rev. Mr. Birkhead has to say.

Some publications, notably the New York Herald-Tribune, consciously go along with the slimy people for reasons hostile to America. Others, thru indifference or a desire not to hurt anybody's feelings, have allowed those who are seeking to destroy the Republic to go unexposed and unanswered.

It is because of this neglect that further abuses occur, such as the appointment of a Communist propagandist to teach American soldiers about life in Russia at the special army training school at Cornell. The infiltration of the OCD by Communist sympathizers is another evidence of the same sort. The presence of Communists and their sympathizers in scores of government offices tells the same story.

These people are not just cranks; indeed, they are not cranks at all in the sense that a crank is a harmless individual with a monomania for some reform within the constitutional framework. The goal of their activity is to create a dictatorship in America, and that means the destruction of everybody's liberties and the seizure of everybody's productive property. The fact that some of them are soft spoken men ought not to conceal from anybody the obvious fact that their program implies endless strife and bloodshed.

It is almost incredible that any men of intelligence can allow the Communist propaganda and intrigue to go unchallenged. Maybe it hasn't occurred to the editors and congressmen who are flirting with communism that they will be among the first to be destroyed.

THE CIRCUS HAS COME TO TOWN.

Sometimes we almost feel that we should apologize to our readers for devoting as much attention as we do to the affairs of the Cook county government. While its administration of the courts, the tax collection system, and public charities touches the lives and fortunes of every citizen hereabouts, the county is, after all, small fry, fiscally speaking, beside the city government and school system of Chicago, and scarcely more important to the taxpayer's pocket than the park or sanitary district.

The county is the bitters in the cocktail. Whenever we fear that we may be getting overenthusiastic about the perfectibility of mankind or the progress of human enlightenment, we have only to cast a glance at the county building to be brought back to the proper plane of pessimistic indignation. For whenever there is a way of doing something wrong, the county can be depended upon to find that way.

At the moment, the Circuit judges are starting their annual task of fixing the number of employes to be allowed the county fee offices. Seldom has distaste for an unwelcome, altho constitutional, job been more clearly reflected in lackadaisical performance than in the recent sessions of the fee job committee of the judges. For several years past the county has been moving steadily toward bankruptcy. The legislature at this year's session came to the rescue by granting permission for the financial heresy of selling bonds to pay debts contracted for current operations.

In such circumstances, the judges could have performed a real public service by trimming the grossly overloaded county pay rolls. This they have failed to do. Usually they consider that they have done their duty by the taxpayers if they have restrained the greed of the ward leaders holding the fee offices for additions to their staffs of precinct captains and doorbell pushers.

Some of the judges have even sought to excuse themselves by the plea that, since they are judges, the fixing of the number of fee jobs is a judicial function, and that, therefore, if an office holder says he needs an additional employe, and no one proves that he doesn't, the judges are bound to award him the job by default, as it were.

That is rubbish. The essence of a trial is that there be two parties in controversy, and that is not true of the job hearings. They are an administrative task, not a judicial one. When the drafters of the state constitution unwisely assigned the duty to the Circuit judges, the only plausible reason they could have had for doing so was their expectation that the judges would be an impartial body, politically independent yet familiar with the needs of the county government, who would see that county offices were adequately staffed, yet still protect the taxpayers against excessive spending.

The facts no longer accord with this theory, but that does not change the duty that lies on the judges. They should be censors, curbing the waste of tax money to provide political patronage. Even tho the public has been disappointed in the past, it has the right to expect that this year the judges will recognize this duty and perform it.

LETTER FROM ABROAD.

A London resident, who describes himself as a "patriotic Britisher," takes THE TRIBUNE to task in another column on this page for editorial comment made following Mr. Churchill's "common citizenship" speech at Harvard university.

Part of a paragraph from THE TRIBUNE editorial was relayed to London by the New York correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph. It read: "Regardless of who actually gives orders in the field, the British are to start wars and we are to fight them. England gets the benefit of our victories."

In the original editorial this quotation was prefaced by the sentence: "He [Mr. Churchill] has the right idea from his point of view." Whether this sentence was deleted in the transmission to London or our correspondent just neglected to quote it is, perhaps, immaterial.

America has much admiration for the British. We admire the national spirit of their government. We admire the integrity and ability of their leader, Mr. Churchill, and have often expressed regret that his equal has not come forward to be the strong voice for America that our nation so sadly needs.

But we do not admire the moral delusion of superiority which afflicts many Britishers in addition to Mr. Sinclair. He finds it easy to believe that America is of use to the world only to the extent that its people are of British stock and that its men and its wealth are placed at the service of England. In his eyes, Americans ought to have the sense to realize that their highest mission is to safeguard England. That, to him, is a self-evident fact. He can even persuade himself that we owe service to the empire because the empire maintains a navy for our protection. He seems actually to believe that the British navy in the early years of the war was concerned as much to safeguard us as Britain.

If this self-righteousness were a mere personal aberration it would scarcely deserve comment. Unfortunately, the sentiments which Mr. Sinclair has expressed are widely held not only in England but by Anglophile Americans eager for social recognition in English country houses. We regard it a service to a good understanding between the two countries to emphasize that America is an independent nation, and that far from our being under obligations to Britain, Britain is heavily indebted to us in every sense of the word. It is simply a fact that we rescued Britain in the last war and are repeating the process today.

Perhaps one further observation may be justified. Mr. Sinclair pretends that the British "did not ask America to come in but were very glad when she did so. . . ." That isn't the way we heard it from the mouth of Winston Churchill himself. In his great speech on Feb. 15, 1942, shortly after we entered the war, he said:

"When I survey and compute the power of the United States and its vast resources and feel that now they are in it with us . . . I cannot believe there is any other fact in the whole world that can compare with that. That is what I have dreamed of, aimed at, and worked for, and now it has come to pass."

Mr. Churchill's candid appraisal is recommended as a model to his countrymen.

BUT DIDN'T WE?

[Daily Oklahoman, Oklahoma City.]

Let none of us be too quick in hurling the contumelious stone at the credulous foreigners who actually believe that the United States is going to rebuild their cities, restore their factories, and replenish their commissaries, at no cost to the foreigners aforesaid. Are they any more credulous than we were when we were led to believe that unlimited boondoggling would never cost us anything—that we would pay us?

BEN FRANKLIN'S WARNING

[Following is the address delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, on the Chicago Theater of the Air, over W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.]

BY COL. ROBERT R. M'CORMICK.

Last week I spoke of Benjamin Franklin's life down to the outbreak of the Revolution.

Returning from his 10 years' stay in England, he arrived in Philadelphia six weeks after the battles of Lexington, Long Bridge, and Concord.

The Pennsylvania assembly immediately elected him representative in the continental congress, and also elected James Wilson, who, 23 years later, was to invent the office of President of the United States.

Franklin was chosen to serve on 10 committees, among them that which reported the Declaration of Independence. The document itself, as every one knows, was written by Jefferson. Franklin assisted in shortening it somewhat.

Franklin now proposed that congress should invite Canada, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Florida, the British islands off North America, and Ireland into the Union.

Altho at that time revolutionary doctrines predominated in Bermuda and the Bahama Islands, his colleagues thought his ideas too grandiloquent, but named him one of three commissioners to go to Montreal, then in American hands, to invite Canada into the Union.

Hardly had he returned to Philadelphia when the brothers, Adm. Howe and Gen. Howe, arrived in New York harbor with a large fleet and a well appointed army.

Adm. Howe, who was authorized to negotiate a settlement with the states, was disposed, from his point of view, to a very liberal settlement. His first approach to congress was rebuffed, but after his brother had won the battle of Long Island and affairs were looking up for the royal government and down for the United States, he politely repeated his advances.

In consequence a committee composed of Franklin, John Adams, and Edward Rutledge waited upon the admiral at Staten Island. The two sides found themselves hopelessly apart.

British successes continued. The defeat of White Plains succeeded that of Long Island and was followed by the fall of Fort Washington, and the American army was constrained to retreat across New Jersey. The consequent deep depression of the Union cause was relieved in September, even before the victories of Trenton and Princeton had restored the prestige of American armies, by the arrival of a long letter from one Dr. Dubourg telling of favorable public opinion in France.

Congress now created an important embassy to France, composed of Franklin, Silas Deane of Connecticut, and Thomas Jefferson of Virginia. The last being unable to serve, Arthur Lee of Virginia was named in his place. Deane and Lee were already abroad. Franklin, in his 71st year, sailed to join them.

Franklin arrived in France with greater prestige as a scientist and a philosopher than as commissioner from rebellious states apparently being subdued.

Bad news continued to follow him. First was Arnold's defeat in the naval battle of Lake Champlain, then Washington's defeat at Brandywine, and his evacuation of Philadelphia; then the fall of Fort Ticonderoga.

In spite of these discouragements, Franklin obtained some assistance from the French government and established that ascendancy over French opinion of all ranks which eventually brought France into the war.

At last a messenger from the Massachusetts assembly arrived with news of the favorable battle of Germantown, the evacuation of Philadelphia by the British, and the capture of Gen. Burgoyne and his army at Saratoga.

The entire picture was changed. From conquering invaders, the British were reduced to beleaguered garrisons on Staten, Manhattan, and Long Islands.

Franklin immediately moved for a treaty with France, which was signed subject to the approval of congress. While the treaty was on the ocean the British government sent anonymous emissaries to Franklin to suggest concessions short of independence, and bribes in the form of titles for Washington and other revolutionary leaders.

Parliament now repealed all the acts that had brought on the revolution and sent commissioners to treat with congress for the return of the states into the empire. Congress refused to treat with them.

Gen. Cornwallis then embarked upon the campaign which ended in his surrender at Yorktown. Franklin's contribution to this decisive victory was, of course, the French fleet, which prevented Cornwallis' escape by sea.

Independence now became inevitable, but Franklin obtained much more than independence in the treaty of peace. He obtained that part of Canada which had been occupied by Gen. George Rogers Clark of Virginia and from which have been created the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and two-thirds of Minnesota; also the territory that was to become Kentucky, Tennessee, and northern Mississippi.

We may observe here that Florida was seized in 1819, the so-called Red River country was ceded by Great Britain in 1818, and the Oregon country in 1846, from which were formed two-thirds of North Dakota, parts of South Dakota, Wyoming, and Montana, and the states of Idaho, Oregon, and Washington.

Lands which were Canada's when Franklin spoke in 1776 support a population of 40 millions, a third of our nation, as great a population as is now contained in what were the original 13 states.

The United States is now in military occupation of all of the British islands off the American coast; has a garrison in Northern Ireland, while most of that island is now an independent country called the Irish Free State.

What appeared to smaller minds to be grandiloquence in 1776 turned out to be the prophecy of a great intellect.

After Franklin's return from France, Pennsylvania sent him to the constitutional convention. In that body he was the author of our representation in the senate by states, and in the house by population, and that tax bills should originate in the house. His views prevailed as to the powers of the houses of congress.

Franklin supported the proposal that the Presidential term be fixed at seven years and that the President be ineligible for reëlection, and the clause giving congress the right to impeach the President. He successfully opposed giving the President an absolute veto. He approved the article limiting treason to conviction of an overt act by the testimony of not less than two witnesses. He prevented a clause limiting the franchise to freeholders. He opposed slavery but accepted the compromise as necessary to the adoption of the Constitution by the southern states.

When the document was completed he made an eloquent speech urging all the delegates to sign it. One authority says that it was only because of affection for Franklin and fear of Washington's "awful personality" that the Constitution was adopted.

As he left the convention hall a friend asked Franklin: "What kind of a government have you formed?" "A republic," he replied, "if you can keep it."

Let us leave Franklin at the height of his glory, a great scientist, philosopher, writer, diplomat, and statesman, second only to Washington in securing the independence of his country. At 81 he had taken a leading part in perfecting the form of government he had conceived 33 years before, by far the best government ever formed—the Constitution of the United States—A REPUBLIC IF WE CAN KEEP IT.

THIS FEARFUL LIFE.

FEAR is our greatest destroyer of happiness. Now and then it may be warranted but, as a rule, it is unjustified. We think of phobias as due to lack of experience. When elevators were first installed, many preferred to climb the stairs. The new contraptions were just too much to contemplate.

In like fashion, some are afraid of closed spaces. They do not choose to find themselves within the four walls of a room. Others are panicky about walking down the street where lofty structures crowd in upon them. The dread of thunder, particularly if planted in childhood, may become a real obsession, so much so that it will injure health. We may recall the child who said to her nurse, after having cut her finger severely, "Look, my finger is covered with red jam." It was only when the attendant screamed that the child burst into long, loud wails.

Physicians frequently encounter persons who are not in good health, yet no organic difficulty can be found. The most critical inventory reveals nothing wrong with the heart, the lungs, kidneys, liver, or other vital structures. Nevertheless, the victim will be fatigued and complain of sleeplessness or other upsets characterized by jittery behavior.

Further questioning may elicit the fact that there is a hidden apprehension which is responsible. Just the other day one of our leading psychiatrists told me of the increasing numbers of fathers and mothers, more of the latter perhaps, who were visiting his office seeking consolation relative to their lads who are in service.

Apparently all they wish is reassurance that all is well. While they do not come right out and make this statement, as soon as the doctor says "I'm sure that your son is getting along nicely, is perfectly happy, and is doing a wonderful job for his country," tension seems to be relieved. A fast pulse, observed when the patient first enters the consulting room, may quiet down to normal.

Encouragement on the part of the medical man, however, can be carried only a short way. In other words, it is not within his power to state that the boy will be safe, because he may not be. The best thing to be done with these worriers is to try to stimulate in them the same degree of patriotic fervor which the fighting forces are exhibiting on the battlefront.

Insomnia likewise may be ascribed to a blue funk. A certain individual may be timid about going to sleep because he is so concerned over what may happen. Others who are accustomed to nightmares dread slumber. Many a restful night has been destroyed because of the possibility that the alarm clock will not be heard. Fortunately, the bugaboo of death, common in young people, fades gradually with advancing years.

Why should we shun fear? Because the face blanches, the capillaries contract, and the cistern of circulation within the abdomen fills to overflowing. The heart beats rapidly, adrenalin pours out from its depots, blood pressure rises after a momentary fall, and there is a general widespread disturbance of the nervous system.

NERVE WASTING.

R. W. P. writes: What causes atrophy of a nerve?

REPLY.

Injury, pressure, or some lesion involving the spinal cord or the adjacent depot [ganglion].

SHOCKED.

H. A. writes: I am an electrician and, in the course of my work, get minor shocks frequently. Is this harmful?

REPLY.

No. But don't become careless. A sizable charge can wreak havoc.

GLOOMINESS.

D. M. H. writes: Will you please define "anxiety neurosis"?

REPLY.

A functional disorder wherein apprehensions, worry, etc., warp thoughts and behavior.

NO FILIP.

Why do I get no emotional reaction from cocktails? In other words, I remain dead sober.

REPLY.

Your nervous system refuses obeisance to John Barleycorn. The answer lies in slow absorption and rapid digestion. In the body, alcohol is converted to carbon dioxide and water but it usually gets in a few licks before this takes place.

CLEAN AND AIR.

N. B. writes: After a case of scarlet fever, should drapes, furniture, etc., in the home be fumigated?

REPLY.

No. Use soap and water, wash the walls, ceilings, floors, and all wood and metal furniture. Expose fabrics of all sorts, carpets, bedding, etc., to direct sunlight and fresh air. Do this on two or three bright days and safety will be insured.

CONJUNCTIVITIS.

F. G. writes: Is there such a thing as catarrh of the eyes?

REPLY.

Yes, in the sense that inflammation is followed by a discharge.

A BRITISHER LOOKS US OVER.

LONDON, Eng., Sept. 11.—The New York correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph reports that your journal, commenting on Mr. Churchill's Harvard speech, printed the following: "Regardless of who actually gives orders in the field, the British are to start wars and we are to fight them. England gets the benefit of our victories." As I have no reason to believe that this is an invention or distortion of what you printed, because the correspondent commented on the fact that your journal ran true to form, I should like, as a patriotic Britisher and one who has respect for your great President and for the predominant Anglo-Saxon element in the United States, to remind you of something else that Mr. Churchill said on another important occasion: "What sort of people do they think we are?" Only this was directed to our enemies, the Nazis, and not to our supposed friends in the middle west.

Now, sir, to use a term familiar to you, your remarks are boloney and you know it, otherwise you would not be fit to conduct your journal. What your ideas may be in voicing such opinions it is impossible for us, the potential aggressor nation of your forecast, to assess, altho they are, no doubt, of considerable use to the Nazi and Japanese propaganda machines. You must know quite well that both your statement and the conclusions you draw therefrom are entirely false, but then, of course, you are in the middle west where what you know of Europe is what you may remember or have been told by your parents. Well, sir, your suggestion that if Mr. Churchill's plea for an alliance be accepted, the British are to start wars and you are to fight them also shows that you do not understand the very essentials of a military alliance, namely, that neither party can start a war without consulting the other, and that the benefits of victories are mutual.

Don't you think that it is about time that people of your mentality ceased to brag that you come into wars to win them for other nations? And, in particular, after the latter have borne all the brunt of superior numbers of enemy forces? I would remind you [if you have not heard about it yet] that we "held the fort" all alone during the most critical period of this war, fought our own victories for some 12 months and suffered what you people only know of by hearsay. And your own statesmen have indicated what would have happened to the United States, and incidentally to the middle west, also, if we had been overthrown and our fleet, the Atlantic defense of America, had been liquidated. We did not ask America to come in, but were very glad when she did so after our enemies had taught you people the lesson that you would not learn from your administration. And, when you sent your troops, we did not start throwing aspersions on them, even when they were too green to win victories immediately.

You are, unfortunately for the United States, too cosmopolitan in the middle west to appreciate what it means to fight for an ideal, because you have not yet thrown off the political dishonesties of your relatives in the continent of Europe. You are political playboys, where the game is "My Party Right or Wrong" and to hell with all else, President and administration included. Your politicians let your President down after the last war, to say nothing of Great Britain, France, and the rest of your allies, thereby preparing a fruitful soil for the present war. In the last war it took the insulting U-boat offensive of the kaiser's government to shake up you middle west people, self-centered racially and politically and "isolated" from Anglo-Saxon America.

In this war it required the insult, shock, and surprise of Pearl Harbor [and weren't you caught napping!] to stop your political frivolities and feuds. But apparently you non-Anglo-Saxons have not yet learned your lesson. Pity you cannot hear what the doughboys on this side say of people of your kidney. I think that most of them feel that what would have done their country the best service would have been a few "honorable bombs" from the "boys of the fried egg flag" dropped on the mongrel part of the States. You, there, would then have appreciated some of the realities of total war as we have had to over here, and would probably have directed your abuse to the Japanese and to your German, Italian, and Irish cousins, instead of to your country's allies.

Well, sir, perhaps Anglo-Saxon America will realize, after this war, "what sort of people" she has been opening her doors to in the past; and she may see that it would be profitable to her to give some of them and of their descendants return tickets to the continent and to Ireland, where they could then freely and quickly return to type.

V. SINCLAIR.

FROM A RHODES SCHOLAR'S WIDOW.

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 19.—When will the CHICAGO TRIBUNE come of age and achieve something that resembles a mature and catholic viewpoint, becoming a truly metropolitan newspaper?

I refer to the latest series of tirades —and finally to today's inexcusable cartoon—against Rhodes scholars. Over a period of 23 years I have watched the canker sore of prejudice and hatred of all things British spread and infect the paper's once fair and fearless editorial policy. Since the United States got caught up in the world maelstrom, this Anglophobia has assumed the proportions of a deadly disease.

As the widow of one of the most outstanding Rhodes scholars who ever returned to his country to give it of his best for 30 years, in both academic and business circles, I speak with feeling and deep resentment. I also speak at the earnest instigation of some of his ardent admirers and friends here in Chicago.

Of what, exactly, is THE TRIBUNE attempting to accuse the members of this particular group? Of being spies, or renegades, or at least of wielding subversive influences? Or merely of having profited by their opportunities and exposures to emulate certain things in the British character and political setup well worthy of our consideration? And does it follow that these men have been such weaklings that they have failed to leave their marks in the numerous colleges and quadrangles of Oxford, and on many a field of sport thruout England?

To induce greater comity between England and the several nations from which Rhodes scholars were to be chosen was Cecil Rhodes' great and primary idea. What finer way to attempt reaching this goal than thru outstanding representatives of the young manhood of these nations?

We have right here in Chicago, and suburbs, at least a dozen men whose names grace highly respected and responsible positions—not one of which happens to be political, by the way. These men would all be too proud, and too absorbed with more important work, to attempt self-defense.

CLARE PUTNAM BRADDOCK.

HIS BACK ACHES, TOO.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—I am sure it would be of interest to all the people in Chicago if some one would compile figures showing the valuation of the product obtained out of the so-called victory gardens, against the cost of seed, rakes, hoes, spades, fertilizer, insecticide, and all the other gadgets, not forgetting sunburn lotions, to reap the two messes of snap beans and the 18 radishes and 10 beets that grew big enough to eat.

Of course, we have eaten tomatoes until we are red in the face—raw, sliced, in salads, stewed, and that left over, well, why not can? So, back to the hardware store, where we first spent our dollars to plant the garden, to buy jars, etc., to put up those 12 quarts, half of which perhaps will blow the top off before we get a chance to eat them.

All the victory gardens in Chicago did not reduce one penny the exorbitant prices we paid all summer, and are still paying, for all kinds of vegetables but it sure made business good in selling all the necessary implements to garden with, and the demand so great, and the supply so limited—so that the price of the $1.50 spade actually was more than the value of all the products harvested.

THE ONLY WAY.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—If you are one of those people who would like to see the American form of government and system of free enterprise preserved, get into your Republican ward organization and help make politics and good government synonymous terms. Remember any action we wish to take must be taken politically. There is no other way except revolution, which God forbid.

The integrity of the United States government can be preserved if only four or five persons can be found in each precinct or political unit, interested enough in good government to give a little of their time to political matters; and if the voters themselves will financially support their party instead of leaving it to special privilege or those with selfish purposes.

The majority of our voters want to be right, and they will follow sound, wholesome leadership. I know 10 women acting as Republican precinct captains who can testify that this is true.

Remember, it is not enough to vote. A few people must give a little of their time, and all of us must make a small financial contribution. It is the only way the American people can remain truly free.

A PRECINCT CAPTAIN.

THE BALTIC STATES.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—Communistic Pravda's comparison of the status of the Baltic states [Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania] with the status of California is audacious and improper.

California could be compared to those Russian provinces which Russia acquired from Lithuania and Poland in 1772 and which are recognized by her neighbors and by the world as an integral part of Russia, just as California is recognized by the world as an integral part of the United States. The Baltic countries [Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania] were sovereign and independent states before the Russians occupied them in 1940, and later the Germans occupied in 1941. Their status does not differ in any way from the status of Czecho-Slovakia, Belgium, Holland, or other Nazi occupied countries.

Lithuanians, Latvians, Esthonians are not Russians. They have their own language, history, culture, and traditions. They have no legal or national relationship with either the German or Russian nations. They do not want to be under Germany, and they do not want to be under Russia. They desire and demand their freedom and independence and, under natural and international law, they have the right to be free and independent.

POST-WAR PROSPECTS.

Marquette, Mich., Oct. 17.—The late William James, psychologist, said that a person never did nor never could use all his physical and mental powers, unless under extraordinary stress of the emotions. And he cited actual cases of miraculous exhibitions of strength in demonstration of his thesis. And America, spurred on by war's grim necessity has risen to incredible heights in war production—things thought impossible before we accomplished them.

Just because of what we have done, we can continue to do along the ways of peace. If great motor car companies can change over to war production, so can they, after victory has come, change back to tremendous production for all kinds of goods that serve the purposes of peace. And just because we can do these things, we will do them, and find new markets for our products. And a new surge of prosperity will come our way, if those at the head of our government exercise good judgment. What we will need above all other things is good leadership, so that the ship of state will sail triumphantly in smooth waters.

U. S. CHOW PUTS GLOW IN CHEEKS OF PRISONERS

Hollow Spots Fill Out; Zest in Mess.

BY FRANK CIPRIANI.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Crossville, Tenn., Oct. 23—German war prisoners at Camp Crossville, and Italian prisoners of war at Camp Atterbury, Ind., visibly show the results of a good and nourishing American diet. Like the Italian prisoners at Camps Clark and Weingarten in Missouri, they were lean and hungry looking on arrival, but since have filled out the hollow spots and their cheeks glow with good food and clean living.

In faultless English, a Nazi submarine officer assured Maj. R. O. Brendel, executive officer, and Capt. R. A. Burton, intelligence officer, that the food is excellent. One of Rommel's tank commanders echoed sincere agreement. And Col. Harry E. Dudley, Crossville camp commander, said he has not heard one complaint. This, indeed, is proof positive because the Germans know fully and definitely their rights as prisoners of war, and are not shy in asserting them.

Camp Crossville lies on the sparsely inhabited Cumberland plateau, 2,000 feet above sea level, one county away from the home of Sgt. Alvin York of World War I. fame, and adjacent to the home country of Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Italian Groups Moved.

Until recently Crossville also held Italian prisoners, including some whose names are world known, but after the collapse of Mussolini, and then of Italy, the army moved the Italians elsewhere. The two groups didn't like each other much, anyway, altho they observed the courtesies, and in competitive sports exchanged gifts as tokens of esteem. But during games they didn't mind breaking each other's legs.

Germans at Crossville are evenly divided between officers and men. They're still Nazis, and they still salute with clicking heels, bodies rigidly inclined forward, and arms stiffly thrust out. They display an outer geniality which does not always conceal a shade of what may be called arrogance or pride, depending upon the viewpoint.

But at the mess tables, the Germans again become simple mortals, like other people. They like food. They enjoy the American chow. They do not vary the American menus as much as the Italians do, but like the Italians they want more bread; unlike them, they want also more potatoes.

Insure Good Treatment.

Undoubtedly they eat better than the average rationed American, but in this the army is obeying international law, wanting to insure fair treatment of Yanks held prisoner in Germany.

If you were a German war prisoner at Crossville, you would sit down to a Monday menu like this: Breakfast, stewed prunes, dry cereal, fresh milk, fried eggs, fried potatoes, toast, butter, and coffee; dinner, boiled ham, boiled potatoes, glazed carrots, pickled beets, bread, butter, rice pudding, and cocoa; supper, frankfurters with creole sauce, au gratin potatoes, sauerkraut, celery, bread, butter, mincemeat pies, and coffee.

The Sunday menu would feature a dinner of roast chicken and gravy, canned corn, apple raisin salad, hot rolls, butter, ice cream, and tea, to be followed by a supper of chili con carne, mixed vegetable salad, bread, butter, peanut butter, apricot cobbler, and coffee. The breakfast earlier would consist of oranges, dry cereal, fresh milk, scrambled eggs, biscuits, butter, marmalade, and coffee.

Germans Not Hired Out.

Because half the prisoners are officers, and the other half are employed as their orderlies, or for camp labor, and because no local labor shortage exists around Crossville, German prisoners are not hired out.

Far up in Indiana, at Camp Atterbury, where only Italians are quarantined, the food situation is the same, but the labor situation is not. Camp Atterbury proper and the prisoners' camp are considered models. Col. Welton Modisette is commander. Lt. Col. J. L. Gammell, Capt. Harry S. Decker, and Lt. George P. Wacker are immediately responsible for the prison compound.

The Italians eat well, show it and admit it. Like their compatriots in other camps they prepare their food in Italian style. All have gained weight, and not flabby weight. Their physical well-being is apparent. Well balanced diets are primarily responsible. Here are two sample menus:

Get Fried Salami.

Friday: Breakfast, bread, dry cereal, coffee, and fresh milk; dinner, salmon salad with onions, boiled beans, noodles, baked potatoes, fruit salad, bread, coffee, and milk; supper, beef stew, baked beans, noodles, lettuce salad, canned peaches, chocolate drink, and bread.

Sunday: Breakfast, bread, dry cereal, fresh milk and coffee; dinner, roast lamb, mashed potatoes, lettuce and tomato salad, apples and oranges, boiled cabbage, bread, coffee, fresh milk; supper, fried salami, spaghetti, beans, cheese, lettuce and tomato salad, bread, fruit, and coffee.

Some of this they have produced themselves, growing 150,000 pounds of tomatoes, 630 bushels of string beans, and 47,616 ears of corn, valued at $8,645.09.

The Italians have been used widely for outside labor, mainly farm and cannery work. In June they earned $3,303.58; in July, $6,469.05; in August, $10,582.60, and in September approximately $60,000, for a net total of more than $80,000.

The Italians at Atterbury and the Germans at Crossville have set up handicraft shops, both marvels in their ways. Where the Italians have put forth their best efforts in constructing church chapels, the Germans have excelled in fitting out officer club rooms, including beer bars.

WHY FEEL LIKE HALF A MAN AS HEARING FADES?

It is hard to believe when hearing leaves you, hard to make the thousand adjustments required by the loss. You find yourself becoming less communicative, less ready to talk because less ready to hear. You grow touchy on the subject of hearing, easily annoyed with those who don't talk "distinctly."

But take heart! Wonderful strides have been made in hearing aids. One of the most remarkable is OTARION, which brings back the world of sound (or most of it) so naturally that your sense of loss is eased if not erased.

Otarion was perfected by a man who is himself deprived of normal hearing! Knowing the pain, the discomforts that come as hearing fades, he spent many years in study and research to provide himself and others with a lightweight, ultra sensitive hearing aid. The thousands who use Otarions do so with thanksgiving.

We invite you to come in for a test of Otarion. If you have hesitated and delayed, come soon and let your own ears tell you that blessed relief is now available.

LLOYD GEORGE'S SECRETARY, 55, WEDS HIM AT 80

'Blonde Bewilderment' His Aid for 30 Years.

LONDON, Oct. 23 (AP).—David Lloyd George, 80 years old, prime minister of Britain in the first world war, today married Miss Frances Stevenson, his secretary for 30 years and the "glamor girl" of the Versailles peace conference in 1919.

The quiet ceremony took place at the Guildford registry office near Lloyd George's farm at Churt, Surrey, where the elder statesman lives in semi-retirement.

Miss Stevenson, 55, has shared more of his life than any other woman except his first wife, with whom Lloyd George said he "lived in perfect harmony" for 53 years. His first wife, Dame Margaret Lloyd George, whom he married in 1888 when he was an unknown lawyer of 25, died in 1941.

Met Her in 1911.

The bride first met Lloyd George in 1911 when she was a schoolmistress and one of her pupils, Megan Lloyd George, now a member of parliament, brought her home for a visit.

"Miss Stevenson was the first woman secretary appointed by a minister," Lloyd George wrote in his "war memories." Lloyd George hired her in 1913 when he was chancellor of the exchequer, and for 30 years she controled his affairs. Scarcely any one ever spoke to him without first satisfying her that his business was important.

"Blonde Bewilderment."

At the peace conference, Miss Stevenson was known as "the blonde bewilderment of Versailles" because statesmen could not understand why such a beautiful woman should choose a secretarial career. She is described by acquaintances as still a woman of great charm.

Today after the wedding the newlyweds remained in the country with Maj. and Mrs. Gwilym Lloyd George, the former premier's son, who is minister of fuel, and his daughter-in-law.

YANKS SHARING A LONE TRIBUNE FEEL AT HOME

The avid manner in which a group of American soldiers in the Mediterranean theater pounced on a copy of THE TRIBUNE which had found its way to them was described recently by Pvt. Allen A. Stieber of Racine, Wis., in a letter to his sister, Mrs. Joseph C. Mann, 1401 South 57th avenue, Cicero.

"As busy as we are, we still have time to read," the letter said. "Recently we got hold of a copy of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and believe me it was a welcome paper. We divided it into as many sections as we possibly could. Even the ad section was very interesting. Nothing would make me happier than to have a copy of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. Of course the daily paper would be welcomed, but that would be asking too much. Remember how I used to get in the corner with THE TRIBUNE? It would make me feel right at home and keep me posted with the greatest country in the world, America."

Pvt. Stieber is a native of Clinton, Ind. He is 30 years old. Before he went into the army in March, 1941, he worked as a machinist.

ENGAGING BILL ADDS COLOR TO BALLET SEASON

Stars Shine Brightly at Matinee.

BY CLAUDIA CASSIDY.

One of the most persuasive things about a ballet season is that it almost invariably improves as it goes along, so that however disappointed you may be at the beginning, you bid it farewell, not with recriminations but with fond gestures of all is forgiven, please hurry back. Yesterday's matinee at the Civic Opera house sustained the rising tide of Ballet Russe performance with an altogether engaging bill in which the stars shone and the corps de ballet turned in some clean and creditable work. If today's shows keep up this sort of dancing the troupe will leave us to great wailing and gnashing of balletic teeth.

Nothing of the afternoon's bill was new to the complete balletomane, but "Igrouchki" and "Beau Danube" had eluded me at previous performances this season. "Igrouchki" was agreeably revived, with Danilova as an enchanting goose girl and Goudovitch well cast as her bumpkin lover who falls in a well out of disappointment in love and has to be pumped dry for the finale. It retains the stamp of Fokine's master hand, and Gontcharova's decor is wittily gay — tho it must still surprise Rimsky-Korsakoff's wandering shade to hear the use made of his Fantasy for Violin and Orchestra.

Recovers Its Sparkle.

"Beau Danube" was rather more than just agreeable, for this most enchanting of Massine ballets has recovered a great deal of its lost sparkle. Waltzes, waltzes, and more waltzes, it has infinite variety in the Straussian strain, but it demands personalities as well as dancers. Yesterday, Frederic Franklin had captured the crisp style for Massine's old role of the hussar, while Leon Danielian had the oblique flair for the king of the dandies, Nathalie Krassovska was lighter than ever before as the ingenue of the blithe love story, and Ruthanna Boris twirled the crackling fouettes of the seamstress on holiday.

Headily Lovely Thing.

All this, plus the gaiety of the troupe and the merriment of the orchestra, was a pyramid to display the matchless Danilova in her famous, and one of her greatest, roles as the street dancer, piquant, unforgettably beautiful in the glowing velvet ballet dress that is one of the major inspirations of costume design. While she danced, so lightly, so gaily and so richly, with a jewel sparkle and yet with the imperious command of full emotional range, ballet was again the headily lovely thing it has a right to be.

Both the other ballets of the afternoon were exceptionally well danced, with Krassovska, Youskevitch, and Tallchief repeating their success in "The Snow Maiden," and with Balanchine's "Serenade" vastly improved in clarity and brilliance of line, and aided by good accompaniment in which Franz Allers and the orchestra captured and projected the strong and sensitive line that means good Tschaikowsky for dancing as well as listening purposes.

A fourth term for President Roosevelt has been indorsed by the Chicago Industrial Union council, central body of the CIO in the Chicago area, it was announced yesterday by Michael Mann, council secretary. The indorsement was voted by 200 delegates, representing 250,000 workers, at a meeting in the Hamilton hotel. The CIO said of the President that he is "the outstanding figure around whom the American people can rally." The council also indorsed Henry A. Wallace for another term as vice president.

MOVE TO SLASH RESERVE STOCK OF NEWSPRINT

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—Adopting recommendations of the newspaper advisory committee, the printing and publishing division of the war production board announced today it had prepared an amendment which would reduce publishers' newsprint inventories about 10 per cent in November.

The amendment would apply to a newspaper limitation order affecting inventory restrictions on newsprint.

Still subject to final approval by top WPB officials, the amendment would draw 20,000 tons of newsprint out of newspapers' reserves and diminish new purchase orders to that extent. This will cover about half the estimated 40,000 ton newsprint deficiency for the month; the remaining 20,000 tons, it is hoped, will be gained thru voluntary additional reduction in purchases by the larger publishers only.

The action is expected to eliminate the need for a proposed new cut in the rate of consumption, a proposal which the newspaper industry advisory committee opposed at its meeting here earlier this week.

VIVIEN KELLEMS TO ADDRESS G.O.P. WOMEN'S CLUB

Miss Vivien Kellems, Connecticut manufacturer and arch critic of the New Deal, will be the principal speaker at the meeting of the Women's National Republican club in the La Salle hotel Thursday at 12:15 p. m.

Miss Kellems, one of three women members of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, was the unsuccessful opponent of Clare Boothe Luce in the 1942 Republican primary race for congress in the 4th Connecticut district. Previous public appearances before Chicago audiences have given her the reputation of a forceful speaker.

Mrs. Bertha Baur, Republican national committeewoman for Illinois and president of the club, announced that John D. M. Hamilton, former Republican national chairman, also will address the club members at this meeting.

2 WOMEN SEEK LIBERTY ON BAIL IN HAUPT TRIAL

Atty. Paul A. F. Warnholtz filed motions in federal District court yesterday on behalf of Mrs. Lucille Froehling and Mrs. Kate Martha Wergin, two of the six defendants in the Haupt treason case, for modification of an order on which they are held in the county jail without bail, awaiting trial. The women seek their release from custody of the United States marshal either on their own recognizance or on bail in moderate amounts.

The women are destitute, Warnholtz said, and the motions were filed in the form of paupers' appeals. If the motions are denied, the women ask prompt and separate new trials. Mrs. Froehling, who has been in jail since July, 1942, is the mother of two children, Esther, 11, and Richard, 7, who are living with grandparents.

Mr. and Mrs. Hans Max Haupt, parents of an executed spy; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Froehling, and Mr. and Mrs. Otto Richard Wergin were found guilty of treason in a decision later reversed and remanded to the federal courts for retrial. J. Albert Woll, United States district attorney, said yesterday he will oppose the release of the defendants. He is leaving for Washington tomorrow.

ZENITH DOES NO AUDIOMETER TESTING

There are cases in which deficient hearing is caused by a progressive disease and a hearing aid may do harm by giving a false sense of security. Therefore, we recommend that you consult your otologist or ear doctor to make sure that your hearing deficiency is the type that can be benefited by the use of a hearing aid.

Zenith Radio Corporation
CHICAGO

OFFICE OF
E. F. McDONALD, JR.
PRESIDENT

To: Manpower Authorities, Employers, Physicians,
Parents, Teachers and Hard of Hearing.

Our country's manpower crisis calls for everyone's maximum efficiency. Since I lost the hearing of one ear in an accident twenty years ago, I have been acutely conscious of the handicaps of the hard of hearing.

While pioneering in radio I have for some years directed Zenith's research toward development of the best wearable hearing aid that science could produce.

My own company has spent millions, the radio industry tens of millions for research. This research has been paid for by scores of millions of purchasers of radio sets.

We, with this technical knowledge and engineering skill, now bring to the hard of hearing a new precision aid -- the ZENITH RADIONIC; an instrument of the highest quality.

A hearing aid is essentially a part of a radio receiver. It wires the human body for sound. It is composed of a crystal microphone and parts of radio receiver set reduced to miniature size and manufactured with watch-like precision. For many years it has seemed to me incredible that the public could buy a complete radio receiver for $29 or less with which they could hear the words whispered in Europe, Asia, or South America, but people with deficient hearing have paid $100 to $200 for a comparably good hearing aid to hear the human voice across the room.

Zenith's facilities and methods for precision mass production of radio sets, Radionic devices, etc., enable it to bring this superb hearing aid within the reach of all.

Eye-glasses, like hearing aids today, were once the luxury of the few. What the optical companies have done to make the finest spectacles available to everybody at low cost, Zenith is now prepared to do for the hard of hearing -- to bring with the aid of modern radionic science a highly perfected hearing aid within the reach of the masses.

ZENITH RADIONIC -- low cost battery upkeep wearable hearing aid -- complete with miniature radio tubes, crystal microphone and batteries -- will sell for $40 -- about one-quarter of the price of the better vacuum tube instruments of today. Hereafter no one, child or adult, need be without a hearing aid because it is too high-priced. There are ten million people, of whom over three million are children in our schools, who are hard of hearing.

Even if Zenith never makes a dollar at this low price, it is willing to take its pay in the good will of the hard of hearing, their families and their friends. Thus begins a revolution in hearing aids -- a revolution to "lower the cost of hearing" within the reach of all.

An Invitation TO ATTEND THE FIRST DEMONSTRATION

If you have deficient hearing—if you have friends, relatives, children who are hard of hearing, who because of high price have been deterred from owning a modern hearing aid—come to 680 North Michigan Avenue, southwest corner of Huron—today.

Here you may inspect this amazing new Radionic development in comfortable surroundings and at your leisure. Try it on, listen with it. Our own staff will assist you. You need not buy—nor will you be urged to do so. The new Zenith Radionic Hearing Aid is so inexpensive, there will probably be a real shortage. But you owe it to yourself or your hard-of-hearing friends to come in and be informed on this startling new development.

The development of this instrument has been going on in our laboratories for five and a half years. Distribution was scheduled for post war, but its bearing on the acute manpower problem has brought Government priorities which permit making the radionic hearing aid available to the public now.

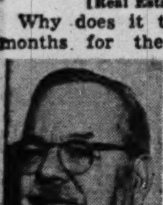
BUILDERS QUERY WHY FHA DELAYS WORK ON HOMES

System in Milwaukee Is Much Faster.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]



Carroll F. Sweet.

Why does it take five or more months for the federal housing administration in Chicago to process priorities and financial commitments for war homes, when it takes 19 days in Milwaukee? And why does the Chicago FHA insist on extras which have raised the price of home building at least $350, altho other cities ignore certain Washington regulations to speed up building?

These questions have been asked repeatedly by Chicago builders who are struggling with FHA red tape and delays and continuous changes in specifications for war homes they wish to build and can't.

Builders Become Angry.

Annoyance, and in some cases anger, on the part of the builders owing to their inability to get started building much needed war homes, rose to the boiling point when they read in this department last Sunday the comment by the Bell Savings and Loan association that "utilization of home building priority quotas assigned to metropolitan Chicago has not been as rapid as was expected."

"No one seems to be able to explain this lag," the article commented. "There was a big rush by builders to get priorities as rapidly as FHA made them available, but they were not all put to use at once, despite the fact that building groups for months have urged the national housing agency to apportion more priorities to this area."

Sweet Seeks Explanation.

Carroll F. Sweet, managing director of the Metropolitan Chicago Home Builders' association, said yesterday that he too seeks an explanation for the delay in the Chicago area.

"A cross-section survey of the dates on the builders' copies of their applications for priorities and financing approval shows that it has taken 155 days on the average to complete the processing of these forms by the federal agencies." Sweet said.

"The first 1943 quota of 3,000 units was opened for applications on March 22, and 155 days carries to Aug. 24. Remember, this is 155 days average, and all applications could not be received on the opening day. It's now 60 days since Aug. 24.

Red Tape vs. Action.

"If red tape and burocracy require over 5 months [5 months of building weather] to complete their contribution to needed war housing, is it fair to condemn the builders for not having the houses ready for occupancy in 2 months?

"Discouraged by seemingly insurmountable obstacles of changing directives, by frequent and unexpected interjection of novel ideas in architecture and land planning by governmental superminds which force building costs above legally fixed maximum sales and rental prices, many of the builders have joined the CB's; others have taken jobs in war plants.

Asks Chance to Coöperate.

"For those few builders who are left who are straining every nerve and resource to find bathtubs and refrigerators, and even lumber with which to build; who are bucking the shortage of man power, who are still trying to plow thru governmental red tape; for those builders I say to those erstwhile 'servants of the people' now 'in the seats of the mighty'—give us a chance to coöperate with you, with stability and reasonableness of ideas, with efficiency of organization, with mutual consideration and good will.

"Together we can even yet build these war houses and do our part to speed the end of this damnable war."

Sweet said that coöperation of builders and federal agencies in Milwaukee was responsible for speeding up war housing there. He added that it averages only 19 days from the time a builder applies for priorities until he breaks ground.

"Not over one week in FHA; not over two days in war production board for priorities approval; not over 10 days for FHA commitments, is the rule, not the exception," he asserted.

One prominent builder in Chicago said he was still struggling with FHA obstacles and red tape and new requirements on homes he obtained priorities for on June 1. In these five months, he pointed out, he could have had the homes completed and occupied long before this except for the FHA handicaps.

Extra Costs Pile Up.

He said that extras costing the builder $350 had been piled up by the Chicago FHA as "musts," altho Detroit, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, and other cities temporarily ignore these in order to speed war home building. In addition, this builder pointed out, building costs are now materially higher. All of these handicaps have made the $6,000 federal ceiling on war home projects a hard limit to stay under and still make any profit, he said.

FHA officials indicated that the delay in Chicago's war housing program was in their own offices when they stated that every priority allotted to this area had been promptly applied for by builders. Many disappointed contractors were turned away owing to lack of additional priorities, they said.

Luxury Flats of 10 Chicago Leaders Sold

George F. Nixon.

Two tall north side apartment buildings changed ownership yesterday. The 12 story coöperative at the southwest corner of North State parkway and North avenue, overlooking Lincoln park, now is owned by George F. Nixon and William H. Colvin, who purchased all of the corporate stock for cash. The amount was not disclosed. The 13 story Park Edgewater hotel, at the northeast corner of Sheridan road and Glenlake avenue was sold for $600,000.

The property purchased by Nixon and Colvin is one of the outstanding buildings of its kind in the city. It was erected in 1915 by Benjamin H. Marshall as architect and owner. In 1920 Marshall sold it to a group of 10 prominent business and financial leaders, who formed the 1550 North State Building corporation.

10 Tenant-Owners.

The 10 tenant owners were Stanley Field, John J. Mitchell, Edward F. Swift, Eugene S. Pick, who later sold his interest to John G. Shedd, Frederick H. Rawson, A. B. Dick, D. Mark Cummings, Dr. Arthur Dean Bevan, William V. Kelley, and Dr. Frank Billings.

Each occupied one of the 10 typical 20 room apartments. While many of the original group have passed on, their families have remained tenant-owners and will continue to occupy their present apartments until May 1, 1944.

Servant Problem a Factor.

The servant problem in the upkeep of such spacious apartments was, it is said, the contributing factor in the sale of the building. The new owners will create units of fewer rooms without disturbing the room sizes, Nixon said. Some of the present occupants are planning to lease the new apartments. Nixon, it is understood, will occupy one of the upper suites as a town residence. He has a country estate at Glenview. Colvin lives at 1100 Forest avenue, Evanston.

Winston & Co., which has operated the building since 1920, was broker. Eckert and Peterson were attorneys for the buyers, Winston, Strawn and Shaw for the sellers.

Bought by Corporation.

The Park Edgewater hotel, which occupies a 100 by 125 foot lot, was bought by the Park Edgewater corporation, Samuel F. Hillman, president, and Lewis Shaffer, secretary, from the Chicago Title & Trust company, trustee for bondholders. A $480,000 20 year 4½ per cent purchase money mortgage, plus $120,000 cash was paid.

Edward R. Tiedebohl, attorney for the seller, said the bondholders would get $73 per $100 unit. C. F. Sauter & Co. was broker. Shaffer was attorney for the buyer. The building contains 104 units of 2½ to 5 rooms each, and two penthouse suites.

SOLDIERS LEARN OF OTHER LANDS TO ASSIST ARMY

U. of C. Making Foreign Experts in 9 Months.

Unprecedented things happen on a campus when the army goes to college.

For example, at the University of Chicago, where a cosmopolitan student body is taken for granted and where service men as students no longer are a novelty, professorial eyebrows have been raised in pleased astonishment over a new curriculum to train soldiers as foreign area and language experts.

Under the army specialized training program each of the army students has just nine months to become so familiar with a European or Asiatic territory that he can accompany an army of occupation as an interpreter or liaison agent and assist in organizing and administering a district.

Must Know 1,800 Words.

This means he must learn in detail the history, political problems, cultural life, and communication and transportation facilities of a nation and be able to speak its language with the fluency of a vocabulary of 1,800 words.

All 48 states and many heritages are represented in the soldiers assigned to the course. Among those described by their teachers as "picturesque" are Paul Garrity, a Cleveland policeman who knew a little Spanish and is learning Russian; Moisey Poogach and Viacheslav Tkhonovitch Satchenko, Russian refugees who fled from the Communists and lived in Manchukuo, now studying Chinese; William Steiner, a tree pruner from Teheran, Iran, studying French; Frederick Clemeshaw, born in Aldershot, England, who speaks four languages, including Hindustani, now taking French; and Michael Kolas, who came here from Albania seven years ago and is learning Russian.

Ages Range from 20 to 45.

The entire student body, ranging in age from 20 to 45, includes many second generation Americans whose parents came from the Balkans and middle Europe, regular army "noncoms," scholars, and former factory workers and laborers.

Like many other faculty members, George Bobrinsky, who teaches Russian and Sanskrit, is enthusiastic about his class. "Most of them are eager to learn and some are excellent students," he said. "As a whole, they're as good as any college class I ever saw."

The curriculum includes courses in German, French, Italian, Russian, Chinese, and Japanese. Usually a soldier is assigned to study territory whose language would make a useful combination with the language he already knows—from the standpoint of geographical proximity.

27 Hours of Class Work.

Napier Wilt, dean of studies in the humanities, believes the course "is more concentrated than anything I've ever seen." In contrast to the average civilian collegian's program of 15 credit hours weekly, the soldier's schedule calls for 27 hours of class work weekly. Seventeen of them are devoted to language study, and 10 hours to area study.

Two of the language hours every day are spent in drill sections, in which the students of each class sit in a circle and talk over their lessons in the tongue they are learning. The instructor is present to assist and stimulate the discussion.

"The primary emphasis is on oral expression, which is practically the opposite of civilian language courses," explained Richard P. McKeon, dean of the division of humanities. "When the course is finished, it is expected the student will be able to carry on a conversation with natives under a variety of circumstances."

Dean McKeon said the novel idea of coupling language with geography may have some effect on university teaching methods after the war. He said it already has had a salutary effect on history, language, and literature professors, who are obliged to hold sessions to embellish their own knowledge so they can conduct the new classes.

He added that under the ASTP, faculy members become better acquainted personally with the army students than they do ordinarily with civilian students, since they act as counselors for the men and are with them most of the day.

Maj. H. E. Smith, assisted by a staff of 12 officers and six enlisted men, has administered the military phase of the ASTP since it was begun last May, when it was one of the first such groups to be activated.

Classes Live Together.

The trainees sleep in dormitories on the campus, altho soon the students studying Russian, Chinese, and Japanese will be housed in the 124th field artillery armory nearby. Each class is billeted by itself so that it can speak and think in terms of the language and area it is studying.

To be eligible for the area and language school a soldier must have completed his 13 weeks' basic camp training and must have made a score of 120 or better in the army general classification test. He also must have finished a year of college and have a certain proficiency for a European or Asiatic language. If his knowledge of a European language is only fair, he needs a higher score in the classification test.

GAMBLING QUIZ TO GO ON AFTER JURY DISBANDS

Courtney Vows to Carry Fight Into New Year.

BY JAMES DOHERTY.

State's Atty. Thomas J. Courtney disclosed yesterday that he intends to carry on the Guzik gang corruption investigation before the November and December grand juries—and into next year, if necessary.

Plans as outlined yesterday call for the present jury to finish by Saturday its inquiry into the murder of Martin [Sonny Boy] Quirk, Guzik agent; the affairs of the Chicago Lawn police district and the 13th ward, and the gambling activities in Town Hall and Summerdale police districts.

Tomorrow the jurors will hear Capt. Thomas Connelly and four policemen — August Ptacek, Louis Miller, Thomas McGreevy, and Henry Yager. All except Miller are at the Summerdale station. Miller recently was transferred from Summerdale to the Hudson avenue station. The four were said to comprise Capt. Connelly's gambling squad.

Drury and McCarthy Called.

Other witnesses for tomorrow's session are Acting Capt. William Drury of Town Hall station and Chief Hugh McCarthy of the county highway police department, which the grand jury and State's Atty. Courtney said should be abolished.

The grand jury — with Foreman John T. Moran, being protected against underworld vengeance—intends to devote as much time as possible during this week to the Guzik gambling syndicate's status in city and county, it was announced. Under the law it must be dismissed by Saturday. A new grand jury will be impaneled Nov. 1.

Police Make Two Raids.

Only two gambling raids were made yesterday. Police said that was an indication that the backbone of the syndicate has been broken.

Capt. Michael Naughton of Commissioner Allman's office found 16 telephones hooked up to a temporary switchboard in a suite on the third floor at 4707 Broadway. The detectives were delayed in making an entrance, and whoever had been in the room had fled.

Capt. Thomas Duffy of the Central station found Bert A. Gordon, 1022 Irving Park road, in a room on the 21st floor of the building at 123 West Madison street. Gordon said he had been in business there three days.

2 SEIZED IN RAID ON S. SIDE STILL PLEAD INNOCENT

Albert Roviaro, 11335 Langley avenue, and John Lori,, 10727 Avenue E, were held in bonds of $1,500 each by United States Commissioner E. K. Walker yesterday on charges of violating the alcohol tax laws. They were arrested Friday by federal agents in a raid on a still in a former garage at 10845 South Ashland avenue. The address was previously incorrectly given at 10857 Ashland. Mash and equipment for the operation of a 500 gallon still were seized. Roviaro and Iori pleaded not guilty at yesterday's hearing and will be arraigned again Nov. 2.

Circus Performer Dies in Stunt

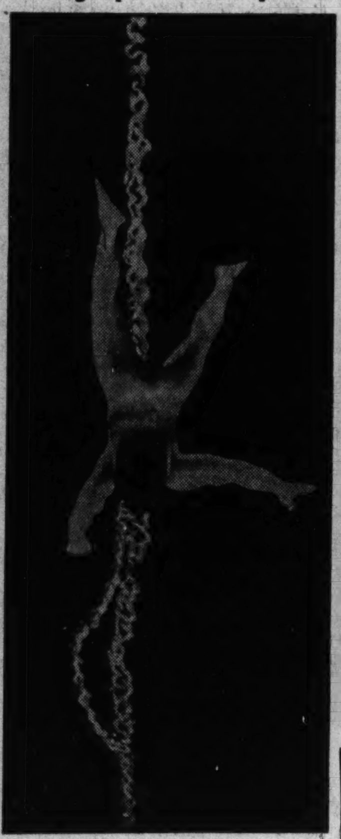
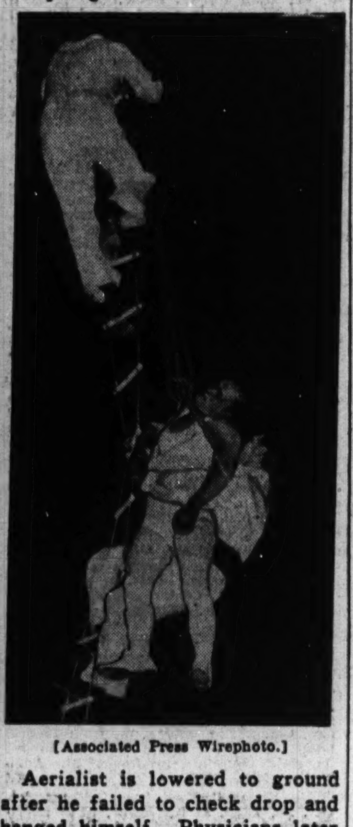
Circus aerialist Aloys Peters hangs from trapeze in St. Louis act, billed as "man who hangs himself and lives to tell the tale," before climbing rope ladder at top for 70 foot plunge with noose about neck.



[Acme Telephoto.]

Peters plummets down from high perch midway in thrill plunge.



[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Aerialist is lowered to ground after he failed to check drop and hanged himself. Physicians later pronounced him dead.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 23 (AP).—Aloys Peters, a 45 year old circus star who was billed as "the man who hangs himself and lives to tell the tale," performed his last stunt as 5,500 spectators watched his death.

One of the features at the annual firemen's rodeo and thrill circus, Peters climaxed his high trapeze act by leaping from a a 70 foot platform with a rope around his neck. The screams of spectators ended abruptly as Peters hit the end of his leap. The rope holding him 20 feet from the floor became taut and Peters hung motionless.

The silence was broken once by the announcer who boomed out over the loud speaker, "He's dazed momentarily." But Peters was dead.

Peters' act was done with a wire rope which had a rubber noose at its end. A split second before the cable tightened he would grasp the rope, breaking his fall. Last night he failed to grab the rope in time.

GAS STATION ROBBED.

Arnold Bieber, owner of a gasoline station at 6900 Loomis street, reported that burglars who broke a window lock to enter the station had stolen $40.

Church Group Will Hear Prisoner Freed by Japs

Sinclair Thompson, who returned from Thailand on the Gripsholm, will tell of his experiences as a prisoner of the Japanese tonight at Second Presbyterian church, Michigan avenue and 20th street. The meeting at 7 o'clock will be under the auspices of the church's Sunday Evening fellowship.

MEET MALARIA, SWEETHEART OF YANK SOLDIERS!

Find Hedy Lamarr Has Part in It.

BY WILLIAM MOORE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—The mosquito doesn't give man malaria. Man gives it to the mosquito. The mosquito merely passes it around.

There are two reasons the mosquito gets the chance, according to the Infantry Journal, which is gunning this month not for the mosquito but for the soldier who lets the mosquito bite him:

1. The malaria mosquito does not buzz. The Infantry Journal draws no inference from this that the mosquito is a sneak, but leaves the reader to guess whether or not the mosquito ever has been issued a buzzer.

2. "The average American soldier is not malaria conscious. The very word malaria has almost a soft and pleasant sound in English. Malaria may even have a romantic connotation to the American, summoning up images of Hedy La Marr in "White Cargo," and monsoon rains beating on the roof of planters' huts in the south seas, while dusky half-breed beauties in G-strings wiggle sensuously on sofas."

Well, what happens?

"Americans tend to emulate the heroes of the movies, the funny papers, and magazine illustrations," the Infantry Journal complains. "They have seen too many pictures of the virile, hairy chested soldier with his shirt off, or with his sleeves rolled up and his collar open to the navel.

"They try to look like glamor men—and thereby invite malaria by exposing their bodies to infection."

The mosquito bites a soldier who has malaria, and thereafter passes it along to every other soldier it bites.

There are three ways of fighting mosquitoes. One is writing stories about them, which the Infantry Journal does. Another is to use mosquito netting. Another is to use mosquito repellant.

But the Journal says the soldiers cling to their hand grenades and forget their mosquito netting, altho malaria causes five times as many casualties as enemy action.

Moreover, the Journal observes, soldiers won't use netting because they're afraid of being considered sissies.

And the repellant the army issues? Soldiers think of it as a cosmetic—something girlish!

G. O. P. CONFIDENT OF NEW JERSEY GOVERNORSHIP

Edge's Support Strong; Democrats Split.

New York, Oct. 23 [Special].—With election day less than two weeks away, New Jersey Republican leaders are exuding confidence that January, 1944, will see a Republican governor installed in the state house in Trenton for the first time in six years. The last Republican governor was Harold G. Hoffman, now a major in the United States army.

The election will be Nov. 2.

Carrying the banner for the Republicans is Walter E. Edge, who came out of political retirement to make the race. He has a distinguished record as governor of New Jersey during the first World war, as United States senator, and former ambassador to France.

His Democratic opponent is Vincent J. Murphy, mayor of Newark, and secretary of the State Federation of Labor [AFL].

The Republicans, who have been split into factions in recent years, have closed their ranks behind Edge. The Democrats, on the other hand, are working under the handicap of divided leadership.

Edison and Hague Feuding.

Since soon after his election three years ago, Gov. Charles Edison, Democrat, has been engaged in a bitter feud with Frank Hague, mayor of Jersey City and Democratic boss of the state until Edison challenged his power. The issue on which they split was a tax bill favorable to the railroads, which was passed with Edison's support over Hague's opposition, and revision of the state constitution, which Edison wants but Hague opposes.

Murphy was nominated after Hague tried in vain to persuade former Gov. A. Harry Moore, his dependable wheelhorse, to make the race. Edison could not run as the state constitution forbids governors to succeed themselves.

As a result of the divided leadership of the party, Murphy has been trying to appease both Edison and Hague. He has favored repeal of the railroad tax legislation, which waived an estimated $24,000,000 in interest on delinquent railroad taxes and provided for payment of an additional $34,000,000 over periods ranging up to 20 years.

On the other hand, he has declared himself in favor of revision of the state constitution, a project described as dear to the heart of Edison. The public will decide this issue in a referendum.

Calls OPA "Fantastic."

In his campaign Edge has attacked agencies set up by the New Deal and has demanded the return to the state of powers taken over by the federal government. He termed "fantastic" the operation of the office of price administration.

The Republican candidate has lashed at "Hagueism" and has demanded to know whether Murphy, if elected, will follow Hague policies or those of Edison, declaring "my opponent cannot serve two masters."

GIRL, 14, STABBED TO DEATH WHILE FAMILY IS AWAY

Dartmouth, Mass., Oct. 23 (AP).—Shirley May Wilcox, a 14 year old school girl, was found stabbed to death today in the parlor of her home in an isolated section of North Dartmouth. Her body bore one stab wound in the abdomen. No trace of the weapon was found.

Shirley had been alone in the house. Her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. David E. Wilcox, and an older brother had gone to work in nearby mills and three younger children were in neighboring New Bedford.

Antone Oliveria, a bread man, found the body when he stopped to make his customary delivery of bread. As he opened the back door, he saw a trace of blood on the floor and followed the small drops to the parlor, where the body was lying.

ROBBED BY TWO GUNMEN.

Sylvester Baker, 1459 Hastings street, told police yesterday that two Negro gunmen robbed him of $21 in front of 1624 Roosevelt road.

VETERANS PLAN BATTLE AGAINST OCD 'GLOBALISM'

Aroused by Propaganda of 'Block Groups.'

BY GEORGE TAGGE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 23.—The Illinois Republican service men's league today was preparing a counter-attack against the propaganda blitz launched for internationalism thru a network of block discussion groups set up by the office of civilian defense.

Starting its two day convention, the league is said by leaders to be ready to go right down the line for Americanism with a series of resolutions, one of which deals with the OCD network.

Joseph F. Novotny of Chicago, state chairman, said the public relations committee is expected to take the offensive for support of the American way of life.

Plan Our Groups.

Aimed against the OCD setup of discussion groups sponsored by well known internationalists in Chicago, one resolution recommends:

"The the various divisions and county organizations in the state sponsor the organization of clubs of members of service men's families in every political unit of the state to facilitate the discussion of post-war problems that will affect the service men when they return from this war."

Cornelius C. Cole of Chicago, publicity chairman, estimated there now are 700,000 Illinoisans in the army and navy. To this number can be added the 300,000 Illinois veterans of the last war.

Over a Million Strong.

"More than a million strong," the resolution reads, "the Illinois service men will have it in their power to chart and determine the fate of all of us for the next two decades. This force for good can be asserted only by the service men acting thru their own organization.

"This is true because they are interested in the broad principles and policies that have made the American way of life the standard for all the world. The service men are determined that these standards of fair dealing, equal opportunity, and justice shall not be lowered.

"Because of the recognition of these facts, the publicity committee urges that the league continue with longer strides on the road toward crystalization of public opinion so that rights and interests of the men and women who serve their country in war and peace shall be amply protected."

Want Jobs, Not Doles.

William R. McCauley of Olney, former state chairman, predicted adoption of resolutions demanding safeguarding of the Constitution and jobs instead of doles for veterans.

"A dozen counties or more have sent in almost identical resolutions on these subjects," McCauley said.

"We are not going to stand still and watch a group of crackpots tear down the Constitution and way of life that our boys are fighting to save. We are determined that they will find their own America when they come home.

"And the fighters of World War I. and World War II. don't want WPA for the boys who return. They don't want doles. They don't want relief. They want hospitalization, compensation for disabilities, and jobs—but most of all jobs."

"Leader Like Brooks" Needed.

Letters from the fighting fronts and conversations with soldiers and sailors who have returned from overseas give assurance as to the attitude of the future veterans, several of the delegates said. One whose son is still in the Solomons, altho wounded, exhibited a letter calling for "leaders like Brooks to prevent future wars."

Political talk was meager today but there will be a spurt in speculation tomorrow when guests will include Atty. Gen. George F. Barrett, Lt. Gov. Hugh W. Cross, State Treasurer William G. Stratton, State Republican Chairman Ben Berve, Richard J. Lyons, who is reported to be the choice of Republican leaders to run for nomination for United States senator, and Arnold P. Benson, president pro tem of the state senate, who, it is said, will be slated for secretary of state.

Gov. Dwight H. Green and Sen. Wayland Brooks will be unable to attend as they had planned to do. The governor is touring the state to aid the WAC recruiting drive. Brooks sent word today that he cannot leave Washington, making it the first league convention he has missed in 16 years.

WACS RISK BURNS BY 1,000° HEAT IN BATTLE AID TEST

Try N. U. Professor's Protective Cream.

Lt. Comdr. G. B. Fauley, formerly a faculty member of the Northwestern university medical school, has developed a cream said to afford almost 100 per cent protection against flash burns, it was disclosed yesterday.

Lt. Comdr. Fauley is now attached to the Naval Medical Research institute at Bethseda, Md. The new cream has withstood the most exacting tests at the armored command research medical laboratory at Fort Knox.

Pearl Harbor Cases High.

Extensive tests were conducted at Fort Knox on invitation of Col. W. F. Machle, commanding officer. Value of the preparation is made manifest by the fact that approximately 30 per cent of all Pearl Harbor casualties were flash burns.

Lt. Comdr. Fauley took with him to Fort Knox an instrument capable of producing a confined 1,000 degree centigrade burn. Tank corps members and WACs attached to the armored command, who volunteered, said they failed to feel even the slightest discomfort when protected with the cream. The same tests without the cream produced serious burns.

Valuable to Tank Crews.

The preparation is described as nontoxic, cheap, and easy to produce without the use of critical materials, and is nonirritating.

Col. Machle pointed out that almost one-third of the casualties suffered by tank crew members in combat result from flash burns caused by powder and gasoline explosions.

Lt. Comdr. Fauley is a former president of the northwest branch of the Chicago Medical society.

Hero of Atlantic Loses Wallet on Street Car

Thomas Halloway of Omaha, Neb., a deck engineer with the merchant marine, who has made numerous Atlantic crossings under fire, reported to police yesterday the loss or theft of his wallet containing $166, most of his credentials, and a railroad ticket back to New York. Halloway told police he missed the wallet Friday night when he alighted from a street car at 53d street and Cottage Grove avenue. The finder of the wallet can return it to the Hyde Park police station or to 5311 Dorchester avenue, where he is staying.

LEGION'S LEADER WARNS AGAINST ALIEN PROMISES

Atherton Urges Nation Maintain Independence.

Warren H. Atherton.

Opposition "to the United States' entry into any world super-government" or "reliance on the promises of other nations for its national safety" was expressed here last night by Warren H. Atherton of Stockton, Cal., new national commander of the American Legion.

Atherton, addressing the annual commanders' and adjutants' conference of the Illinois department of the Legion in Hotel Sherman, declared that "the United States must rely on its own strength as a completely independent nation at all times." He warned against any attempt, "no matter how disguised, to inveigle the people into surrendering any part of the nation's national sovereignty to any form of world super-state."

Tells People to Demand Rights.

He also called on the American people "to be on the alert to demand, immediately after hostilities cease, the complete return to local and state governmental bodies of all those powers which temporarily they have surrendered to the federal government in order to speed the war effort."

Assailing those "who thru subversive methods woud change our form of government by exploiting the fact that war needs temporarily have centralized governmental powers in Washington," he said:

"The people of the United States, in a spirit of sacrifice inspired by their desire to win the war, have only lent those powers to the federal government. It would be a travesty, indeed, if the millions of young Americans who have gone abroad to fight for democracy were to return only to find that in their absence democracy had died in their own land."

Preparedness Way to Peace.

Deploring the unprepared state "in which this nation found itself before this present war and World War I., Atherton advocated universal military service "as a permanent post-war policy."

"We believe that the road to peace lies in a will for peace together with a strong preparedness program which will secure for our nation the respect of the world for our insistence on peace," he said.

Esper Challenges Subversion.

Dr. L. W. Esper of Springfield, state commander, earlier told the conference that "if the American form of government is to be retained, we must be ever alert to efforts by subversive forces to change the American form of government.

"We should insist that our leaders be as strongly pro-American as Winston Churchill is pro-British. American youths have died in two world wars, that our form of government may be preserved. We must guarantee that they have not died in vain."

WOMEN VOTERS BID ILLINOIS SENATORS AID GLOBAL UNION

The Illinois League of Women Voters reported yesterday that it had sent letters to Senators Wayland Brooks and Scott W. Lucas asking them to support "a more forthright" resolution on international coöperation than that recently adopted by the senate foreign relations committee.

The letters, signed by Mrs. Florence Fifer Bohrer, state president, and Mrs. William H. Spencer, state foreign policy chairman, recommended a resolution proposed by the National League of Women Voters "which would place the senate on record as in favor of the United States taking the initiative in forming an international organization."

"The league believes that the resolution as adopted by the senate committee fails to use the senate's power of advice and is so vague as to be subject to various interpretations," the Illinois senators were told.

Robs Cleaning Shop Third Time; Shot by Policeman

Earl Brown, Negro, 21 years old, was shot in the chest yesterday by Policeman William O'Donnell after he walked into the Rosebud Cleaners shop at 635 East 43d street with a pistol in his hand. Mrs. Sara Moore, manager of the shop, identified Brown as the gunman who robbed her of $7 last Monday and $20 on Oct. 16. O'Donnell was detailed to guard the shop.

DIVORCE FRAUD WITNESS FACES CONTEMPT CASE

An investigation of the divorce of Mrs. Margery Howard Bomson, 42 years old, from James J. Howard, a New York insurance man, in the Chicago Heights City court of Judge Robert A. Meier got off to a good start yesterday with one of the witnesses cited for contempt.

The witness is Miss Min Greengard, 3810 Gladys avenue, a friend of Mrs. Bomson, who said yesterday she knew Mrs. Bronson in January or February of 1941 when they worked together. Judge Meier looked up the record of her previous testimony in his court when the Howards were divorced in the fall of 1941. At that time she said she had known Mrs. Bomson three years.

The present investigation was requested by Stanley Bomson, 52, of 7300 South Shore drive, who, it was learned, heard his wife planned to sue him for separate maintenance in Superior court. He acted in the Chicago Heights court Sept. 8 to forestall her. She nevertheless filed her suit here a few days later. Mrs. Bomson is accused by her present husband of giving false testimony at her original divorce as to her residence. The Bomsons were married Nov. 24, 1941, six days after her divorce from Howard.

THREE SAILORS WHO TOOK GUNS OBJECT OF HUNT

Portland, Me., Oct. 23 (AP).—Lt. Comdr. Karl N. Howard, senior shore patrol officer, disclosed today that three United States sailors who allegedly stole two submachine guns and 200 rounds of ammunition from a naval vessel here were the object of a nation-wide hunt.

The trio, whose names were withheld, left their ship Thursday between 2 a. m. and 6 a. m., the officer said, and entered a navy motor whaleboat tied up to their vessel. They made their way to a bathing beach where they abandoned the craft.

DALEY, HIRSCH INSTRUMENTAL IN ENDING 9 YEAR MINNESOTA REIGN

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 23.—Michigan took back the Little Brown Jug this afternoon by pouring a record 49 to 6 defeat on a shocked pack of Minnesota Gophers before 45,000. It was the most decisive whipping absorbed by either Gophers or Wolverines in the 51 year history of the two big football powerhouses.

The rout ended nine successive years of Minnesota supremacy over Michigan, a string which included a 40 to 0 Minnesota triumph in 1935, the lop-sided record for the series prior to today.

Michigan's most ruthless performance against Minnesota prior to this afternoon was in 1921 when the Wolverines won, 38 to 0. That same season the Gophers lost to Iowa, 41 to 7, and no other team in this century ever scored that many points against Minnesota until today.

Daley, Hirsch Star.

If one desires to console the disappointed Gophers, he might try dwelling on the fact two stalwart lads from the general neighborhood of Minneapolis, Elroy Hirsch, former Badger from Wausau, Wis., and Minnesota's own Bill Daley of St. Cloud, were terrific factors in the crushing experience.

Hirsch made the first three touchdowns and Daley accounted for two. Hirsch's first one was a dash of 61 yards on the game's first play from scrimmage. Hirsch scored again in three minutes and 51 seconds of the second period, going over from the 18 yard line. His third came after four minutes and 55 seconds of the third period, when he tallied from the 7. Daley was brilliant thruout in his contribution to the early successes, and got into actual scoring business when Hirsch left off. Bill scored the fourth touchdown in the last minute of the third period and counted again in the final quarter.

White Plays Last Game.

Hirsch of the marines and Daley of the navy weren't the whole show, of course. Capt. Paul White, playing his last game for Michigan before reporting to Parris Island next week for advanced training, was a busy man in his farewell, as were most of the other back field gents who had a shot at toting. And the line was superb, holding the perplexed Gophers to net gains of 60 yards. The one scoring foray of the Minnesotans came when Loren Palmer went over as the climax of a second period spurt which developed after Bob Lossie had intercepted Bob Wiese's pass on the Michigan 15.

In addition to being the last game for Capt. White, it was the farewell for Bob Stenberg, who kicked the last point of the game, Jim Holgate, and Len Naab. It was the next to last game for Michigan's great tackle, Merv Pregulman, and Jack Petoskey, as well as Daley.

But getting back to Hirsch, Daley, and White. The erstwhile Badger carried the ball 14 times and gained 111 yards. Hirsch also completed a 35 yard pass to Rudy Smeja. Daley made 102 yards in 22 rushes. His longest sprint was for 31 yards, in returning a punt which set up the second Michigan touchdown. White gained 41 yards in eight tries.

The two touchdowns not made by Hirsch and Daley were on passes by Jack Wink, another former Badger and a resident of Milwaukee. One was scored by Farnham Johnson, still another ex-Badger, a 51 yard exploit, and the other by Bob Nussbaumer, a marine from Oak Park. This one was a 21 yard shot into the end zone which bounced from the hands of Vic Mroz, East Chicago, into the arms of Nussbaumer.

Statistics Offer Solace.

The general statistics may not be quite so depressing to the Gophers as the score. They had six first downs to 10 for the victors. But there was a vast difference in the yardage from rushing, 60 to 230. The Gophers completed only one pass for 14 yards, the Wolverines accomplished five for 128 yards.

Today's triumph gave the Wolverines a total of 19 victories in the series, which started in 1892, tho it was their first since the 3 to 0 decision in 1932. The teams played a scoreless tie in 1933. The last time the Wolverines scored as many as three touchdowns against the Gophers was in 1926, when they won, 20 to 0. Since then, until today, they hadn't scored more than one touchdown, excepting last year, when they lost, 16 to 14. Statistics:

Purdue Beats Iowa, 28-7, in Final Spurt

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 23.—Purdue's football express, sidetracked with a 7 to 7 tie by a determined young crew from the University of Iowa, for 48 minutes today, corrected its homecoming time table in the final 12 minutes. With Engineer Tony Butkovich at the throttle it roared on to a 28 to 7 victory to the satisfaction of 15,000 homecomers in Ross-Ade stadium. It was the Boilermakers' sixth victory of the season, twice as many as their combined total for the past two seasons, and their third Western conference decision. The game also marked the final home appearance of the Purdue lads, who now take to the road for visits to Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Indiana.

When they get around to picking all-American full backs at the conclusion of this whimsical campaign, it will be difficult to overlook Master Butkovich, the former Illinois youth who is now a marine trainee here. Anthony, apparently doomed to the role of the game's goat because of a fumble which ultimately led to Iowa's touchdown, more than redeemed himself by scoring the first three of the Boilermaker touchdowns, raising his record of goal line crossings to 13, 10 of them in conference competition. In addition he strengthened his position as the nation's leading yardage gainer by rushing with a net of 149 yards in 19 attempts this afternoon. This gives him an aggregate of 686 yards in 114 efforts, an average of 6 plus.

Lead in First Quarter.

Until Butkovich began to roll, the youthful Iowa crew threatened to duplicate last week's surprising tie with Indiana. They came out of the first quarter with a 7 to 0 lead, thanks to the work of Paul [Soapy] Glasener, who dashed 19 yards back

Hoosiers Vary Attack; Crush Badgers, 34-0

BY WILFRID SMITH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 23.—Indiana's varsity drove 75 yards after the first kickoff this afternoon to score the only touchdown required to defeat Wisconsin. But the crowd of 15,000 homecomers and students applauded this same power and skill continuously as the Hoosiers added four more touchdowns to win their first Western conference game, 34 to 0.

Wisconsin's inexperienced squad, handicapped by injuries, ineligibilities, and loss of naval personnel, was completely outplayed in all phases of football except the desire to play. The stout hearted youngsters battled to the inevitable finish, albeit much of their time was spent on defense trying to hold the Hoosiers' rushes to minimum gains.

Hoosiers' Edge Definite.

Indiana had no particularly long gainers, nor unusually thrilling pass completions, but Indiana's superiority in power piled up 23 first downs by rushing for 403 yards on the ground, and concluded with a total of 28 first downs and 510 yards from scrimmage when the seven completed passes are included in the above figures.

Wisconsin's futile attack was so thoroly blanketed by Indiana's five man line and an alignment of three backers-up and two half backs, that the Badgers only penetrated Hoosier territory twice. Late in the first period, with the score 7 to 0 against them, the Badgers started an attack which ended on downs on the first play in the second quarter on Indiana's 12 yard line.

In the third quarter, when a recovered Indiana lateral in midfield created the opening, the Badgers advanced to Indiana's 30 yard line and again lost possession on downs.

Hoernschemeyer Is Key.

Bob Hoernschemeyer, the Hoosiers' triple talented half back, was the key to Indiana's attack as he has been in all games, but he had rivals in ball carrying in Don Mangold, Jim Allerdice, and John McDonnell. Finally, Indiana also released the information it has been drilling Pete Pihos at full back when the rugged

TROJANS HAND STAGG'S TEAM FIRST LOSS, 6-0

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 23 (AP).—One lightning thrust thru the air in the fourth quarter gave the Trojans of Southern California a 6 to 0 football victory today over previously unbeaten College of the Pacific, coached by Amos Alonzo Stagg.

Seventy-five thousand, largest crowd of the year, watched the contest.

From first to last both had potential scoring threats that went awry, but the breaks were about even and the issue was cleanly decided.

Tightropes to Score.

The speedy Trojans turned what appeared to be a scoreless tie into victory as their quarter back, Mickey McCardle, grabbed a Pacific punt and ran it back to the U. S. C. 32. McCardle then shot a pass to Eddie Saenz near the sideline and he went all the way to the Tigers' 45. Mickey next tossed one to George Callanan, sub half back, on a flanker and he was hauled down on the 26.

With Coach Stagg's men, expecting an end run, George ran wide to his right and then sent a swift aerial to his brother, Howard Callanan, who tight roped his way across the goal for the only touchdown. Dick Jamison missed the try for the point.

Well Coached Team.

The 81 year old Stagg showed a well trained and coached team. Pacific had a stout and resolute line that held the Trojans to a net of 121 yards in scrimmage. They took most of the punch from U. S. C.'s running game by employing seven men on the forward wall thruout the struggle. The Trojans, in stemming for most of the time the passing threat of Pacific's Johnny Podesto, went into a five man line.

The Trojans got a break late in the first quarter when Jamison swarmed on Pacific's full back, Doug Ahlstrom, and recovered his fumble on the visitors' 8. Stagg's line here asserted itself and on fourth down, with less than a yard to go, the Trojans lost the ball on downs.

Irish Shower Illini with 7 Touchdowns

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Notre Dame, Ind., Oct. 23.—Notre Dame's point producers had their assembly line running full blast again this afternoon and an Illinois squad, willing enough, but inadequate for the job at hand, suffered accordingly. The Irish, with just about all the available hands doing a turn at one time or another, figuratively wore out their own stadium grass while dashing hither and yon for a final count of 47 to 0 before 25,000 customers. The Irish now have a grand assortment of 228 points for five Saturdays on parade.

The Illini, so outmatched that they had to derive consolation for their buffeting from a few first downs, none of which developed into a torment for the Irish, delayed the impending stampede for only a few minutes at the outset. Then Notre Dame began to click with full fury. It was two touchdowns in the opening session, another pair in the second, still another pair in the third, and one in the final quarter, when a prospective eighth batch of points was dissipated on the Illini 7 yard line.

Irish Just Run and Run.

The futility of the Illini's fight against the power that survived even after the removal of the Irish regulars is told in the figures. Notre Dame bounced over the grass for a total of 538 yards against 111 for the Orange and Blue. The Irish, with Angelo Bertelli doing a good share of the pitching, grabbed off another 92 yards by completing all except two of eight aerials. And, the Irish even gave away 125 yards in a series of rule infractions.

With the Irish regulars working as a unit only in the first period

GRAHAM CRASHES LINE FOR FIRST TOUCHDOWN; PASS NETS SECOND

BY ARCH WARD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Columbus, O., Oct. 23.—The old army axiom that victory rests with the side that has the stronger reserves held true in the football game in Ohio stadium today. Ohio State, operating with only 19 players, 13 of whom are freshmen, went down in defeat before Northwestern, 13 to 0. The Wildcats used 30 men.

Northwestern scored a touchdown in the first quarter on a 6 yard run by Otto Graham and another in the fourth when Graham passed to Lynne McNutt in the end zone, but between these offensive spurts there was little to choose between the teams.

Graham's work in the two Northwestern scoring plays duplicated his performance when he last appeared in Ohio State's stadium two years ago. He tossed two touchdown passes to give the Wildcats a 14 to 7 victory on that occasion.

10 First Downs Apiece.

The Buckeyes, who gave evidence against Purdue last week that they are not setups for conference rivals, showed further improvement today. They made 10 first downs, the same as Northwestern, four of which were made by passing. They moved to Northwestern's 6 yard line in the opening period and were down to the Wildcats' 20 when the game ended.

Graham's individual brilliance was the big difference between the teams. He completed five of 10 passes for 103 yards and averaged more than 5 yards on his seven trips with the ball.

Ernie Parks, colored freshman from Canton, O., was the back field ace of the Buckeyes. He carried the ball 18 times for 73 yards and was one of four Ohio State players who stayed in there for 60 minutes. The others were Cecil Souders, right end who was a reserve on last year's squad; Paul Davis, freshman full back, and Bill Willis, a 4-F tackle who is the only regular left from the Buckeyes' 1942 squad.

New Experience for Brown.

This was the first time in 60 games that a team coached by Paul Brown had failed to score. His last shutout was in 1937 when his Massillon, O., high school eleven was blanked by Newcastle, Pa., 7 to 0.

Northwestern discovered it had a fight on its hands shortly after the opening kick-off. An exchange of punts gave Ohio State the ball at midfield. On the first play, Davis threw a long pass to Souders who was crowded out of bounds on the Wildcats' 13. Dean Sensanbaugher, limping from a leg injury incurred against Purdue last Saturday, picked up 3 yards off his right tackle. Davis advanced to the 6 in two plunges, but Northwestern stopped Sensanbaugher at the scrimmage line and took possession of the ball.

Northwestern traveled 56 yards without yielding the ball for its first touchdown. A pass, Graham to Bob Wallis, was completed on Ohio's 40. The same pair collaborated in another aerial play that brought a first down on the 6 yard line. Graham twisted his way over his right tackle for the score. Vic Schwall,

The former University of Chicago All-American football back also received his certificate as a primary flight instructor and the navy announced he would be transferred to its air station at St. Louis.

Said Comdr. Paul E. Gillespie, commandant of the naval college here:

"Berwanger is as great in the air as he was on the football field a decade ago. He is one of the finest students we've ever had."

Berwanger's home is Dubuque, Ia.

STEINMETZ HIGH TRIUMPHS, 26-0, OVER HARRISON

Crane Scores 40 to 0 Victory Over Tuley.

The Steinmetz Flashes won their most impressive victory of the season yesterday by defeating Harrison, 26 to 0, in Key Branch stadium for its fourth straight west section football victory in the City High School league.

The victory enabled Steinmetz to tie undefeated Austin and Crane for first place in the sectional race. Crane romped over Tuley, 40 to 0, in Hanson park stadium to gain its share of the tie, while Austin won its fourth victory Friday.

Matt McCarthy scored twice and Stan Chesney and George Anderson once each as the Flashes handed Harrison its third section defeat in four games.

Al Liccardi and John Villager paced Crane's attack in the Tuley game, each going over twice. Crane, after scoring one each in the first three periods, pushed over 21 points in the final quarter.

Tilden Tech bounced back from its 6 to 0 loss to Phillips last week by galloping over Englewood, 53 to 7, in Shewbridge field and tied Lindblom and Gage Park for second place in the central section race, each with three victories and one defeat. Lineups:

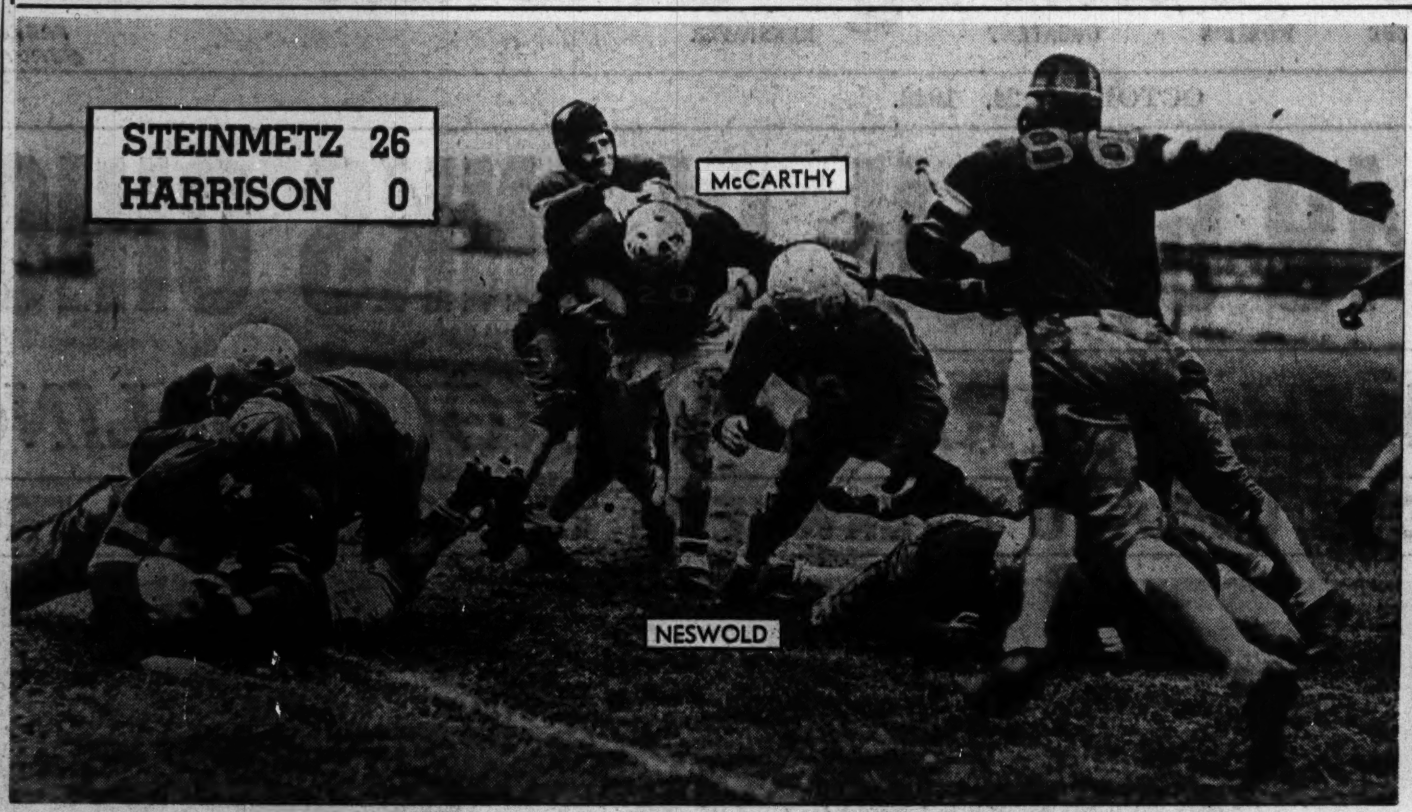
PREP LEAGUES' SEASONS WORK TOWARD THEIR CLIMAXES



Matt McCarthy of Steinmetz High getting some assistance from Thomas Neswold as he carries the ball across Harrison High's goal line for a touchdown. The victory kept the Flashes in a three-way tie for the lead in the west section of the City High School league,

Capt. Bill Chandler of the Amundsen High school team, who scored two of his team's eight touchdowns in defeating Roosevelt, 51 to 0, yesterday. The touchdowns were Chandler's 11th and 12th in five conference games this season.

35,000 WILL SEE CHARITY GAME IN SOX PARK TODAY

When St. Rita and Leo High schools meet in the annual Sisters of Mercy charity football game in Comiskey park this afternoon they will do three things. They'll provide entertainment for more than 35,000 fans, lessen complications involving the south section race in the Catholic league and enrich the Sisters of Mercy foundation treasury.

St. Rita's ambition is to eliminate the Lions from the sectional race and strengthen its bid for a possible league title and the opportunity of participating in the 10th annual Mayor Kelly bowl game in Soldiers' field on Nov. 27 against the City league champion.

To accomplish this the Mustangs must improve upon Mount Carmel's feat of last Sunday, when the Caravan stopped Leo's winning streak at 26 games by tying the Lions, 6 to 6. Leo has not been defeated in league competition since 1939, having won three straight Catholic titles and defeated Tilden in the last two city-wide charity games.

Leo enters today's contest a slight favorite primarily because of its previous encounters with St. Rita and the coaching ability of A. L. [Whitey] Cronin who has produced six league champions in the last eight years.

Leo Is Unbeaten in Series.

In four previous meetings in the series, Leo has defeated the Mustangs, 7 to 0 in 1940, 40 to 14 in 1941, and 26 to 7 last year after two rivals battled to a 7 to 7 tie in their inaugural game in 1939. In addition Leo has made three other profitable appearances in this series, defeating St. Patrick in 1935, St. Mel in 1937, and De La Salle in 1938. This is Leo's eighth appearance in this charity game and St. Rita's fifth.

Leo probably will be without the services of Don Sinnick, regular right guard, and Tom McCarthy, center. Both boys were injured in the Mount Carmel game and it isn't likely either will be able to play today. Pat McGinnis will replace McCarthy and either Frank Nessinger or Bob Brewster will take over Sinnick's duties.

This might prove costly to the Lions. If their line had remained intact it would have matched St. Rita's. The Mustangs must be given an edge because of the absence of these two boys.

Misses 2 Minutes in 5 Games.

Coach Leo Deutsch, in his first year as football coach at St. Rita, has a pair of 190 pound tackles in Ken Shuster and Frank Kosik. Shuster is a durable player having turned in four 60 minute games and one 58 minute effort in the five St. Rita has played.

The center, John McCormick, at 185; the guards, Ray Johnson, 150, and Chuck Zettek, 190, and the ends, Wally Leyden and Ken Trusch each at 170, give the Mustangs a line that averages 178 pounds.

The Lions, using Capt. Bob Walsh and Ray O'Donnell at ends; John Kopshever and Roy Hall at tackles; Frank Buttimer and Nessinger at guards, and McGinnis at center, will average 175 pounds per man.

The Lions will have the better passing combination in Bob Barry to Capt. Walsh but both Capt. Warren Jones and Bobby Bugan of the Mustangs can really whip the ball around and will have capable receivers.

Proceeds to Charity.

Leo's back field consisting of Neil Dauphinee, full back; Jim Ward, right half; Bob Kozlowski, quarter back, and Barry, left half, must be rated over St. Rita because of its offensive record. The Mustangs will start Don Doody, left half; Jones, full back; Earl Rauen, right half, and Tom Byrnes, quarter back. Doody is leading the league in scoring with seven touchdowns in three games.

The net proceeds of the game will go to the Mercy Maintenance fund for the upkeep of Mercy hospital, Mercy college for girls, four high schools for girls and 30 parishes. Sister Mary Riccardo is the director of the game and County Treasurer Victor L. Schlaeger the chairman.

Oak Park Beats Morton High, 6-0, on Late 65 Yard Drive

Oak Park High school dissolved its tie for first place with Morton of Cicero in the Suburban league football race by defeating the latter, 6 to 0, yesterday in Oak Park.

The touchdown came in the final quarter on a 65 yard march with only six minutes to play. The Villagers set up their score with a passing attack. Don Souchek tossed one to Jack Shanahan good for 19 yards and a first down on the Morton 6 and Jerry Salek pitched one for 5 yards to Ted Foss. Vin Bellock then plunged over for the touchdown. Salek's attempted placement was wide.

The victory was the sixth of the year and third straight for Oak Park in conference play. Morton's defeat was its first in league play and dropped it into second place, a half game ahead of New Trier, defending champion, and Proviso.

Oak Park virtually can clinch the championship next Saturday by defeating New Trier. Then it would have to beat Proviso of Maywood for a perfect record for the season.

AMUNDSEN AND TAFT ROUT FOES IN CITY LEAGUE

Amundsen High school, scoring in every period, overwhelmed Roosevelt, 51 to 0, yesterday in Lane Tech stadium for its fifth straight north section football victory in the City league. The 51 points make Amundsen's total 151 for five conference games.

Capt. Bill Chandler scored his 11th and 12th touchdowns in league play, bringing his total for the season to 14. Nick Marks also scored twice for the Vikings.

Taft, defending sectional champion, kept within a half game of the Vikings by routing Sullivan, 58 to 0, in Winnemac park. It was the fourth straight victory for the Eagles. Julian Byrdy scored four touchdowns and Paul Kendrick three for Taft.

Morgan Park took over second place in the south section by walloping Parker, 50 to 0, in Shewbridge field. Burt Schmidt scored four touchdowns to bring his league total to nine.

Fenger and South Shore played a south section thriller which ended in a 19 to 19 draw in Pullman Tech field. Fenger, after leading, 13 to 0, was forced to come from behind to tie the score after South Shore's second half rally.

DUCK FLIGHT OF 125,000,000 TO BE HUNGRY LOT

Corn Fields Are Sure to Suffer.

BY BOB BECKER.

Altho every sportsman in the country will give three cheers when he reads that the annual waterfowl migration probably will see more than 125,000,000 ducks in the air this fall, a good many million of these birds will have to do some fancy hustling to find food on some of their flyways. Most of the birds will be boarding in the farmer's fields as they move south. Tom Main of Ducks Unlimited in Canada writes: "Judging from the swarms of ducks on prairie waters, our estimate of 125,000,000 birds for 1943 is an understatement. Everywhere dusk flights begin to look like old times."

It's going to be great to see a whopper of a waterfowl migration this fall altho many sportsmen may gaze at the birds with a tear or two in their eyes because this year of the great duck hatch may be far from being a great year for good shooting what with the disappointments on ammunition and transportation problems.

Shortage of Food Plants.

In the middle west there may be another headache for the duck hunter who frequents the Mississippi and Illinois rivers; lack of natural duck foods on those rivers. A survey of these rivers shows that the spring floods made it impossible for many of the food plants to grow. Therefore, this fall should see the big flocks combing the cornfields as they never have before, so the hunter who has a few boxes of shells to shoot up and wants to hunt, may be smart to try the river bottoms early and then try some field shooting for ducks later in the season.

Our annual survey of the Illinois river daily fee shooting spots has been completed. The list of places compiled includes some as far north as Hennepin and others south near Beardstown. On the basis of information received, hunting this fall will not be a cheap sport. Some of the daily fee marshes are charging a slightly higher fee than last year. In the Hennepin area prices for a day's hunt range from $15 per man including blind, decoys and guide, to $17.50 per person if a hunter shoots with a pusher and occupies one blind. If no guide or pusher is used a hunter pays $10 per day for shooting privileges. Down around Henry prices for a day's shoot are a little lower. One spot we have checked will charge $25 for two men in a blind including a pusher or guide.

Board, Lodging are Extra.

Day shooting privileges are less around Browning and Beardstown, but these places are not as accessible as those in the upper part of the river. For example, around Browning some of the daily fee spots charge $15 per day for two men including a pusher. At Beardstown one of the established shooting places charges $10 per day per man including transportation to and from blinds. In all of these quotations the hunter must pay extra for board and lodging either in a hotel or a private home.

MOUNT CARMEL, DE LA SALLE TO BATTLE TODAY

Mount Carmel High, seeking a Catholic league football title which has evaded the Caravan since 1939, risks its undefeated south section record against De La Salle, in Yates stadium this afternoon. De La Salle has won one and tied one in two games while Mount Carmel has won two and played a tie with Leo.

The Dragons defeated Fenwick, defending sectional champion, 12 to 6, and romped over St. Patrick, 52 to 6, in its first two league efforts. Weber, after defeating Loyola, was held to a scoreless tie by St. Philip. The Dragons figure to remain undefeated.

St. Ignatius, with two victories and one defeat, meets Fenwick, owner of one victory and loss, in Key Branch stadium and Loyola and St. Patrick play in Loyola stadium in other north section games. Hal Hamberg, stocky little back, threw three touchdown passes and plunged for the fourth score for the Middies.

ARMY WALLOPS YALE.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 23 (AP).—Army didn't bring its cadets along to the Yale bowl to march before the game today, but there was an army parade just the same.

The victorious cadet footballers staged this one with all the trimmings, displaying their gridiron equivalents of heavy tanks, big guns and an assortment of block busters as they walloped Yale's very Blues 39 to 7 and ran their winning string to five straight for the season.

PENN ROUTS LIONS, 33-0.

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Scoring five touchdowns and having two other nullified because of penalties, Pennsylvania's undefeated and untied football team swamped Columbia, 33 to 0, before 15,000 at Baker field today.

Sparked by Joe Kane at half back, who scored three of the five touchdowns, the Quaker first stringers piled up a 20 to 0 lead in the first 10 minutes, then retired until the third period when they scored twice more in 13 minutes.

COLGATE UPSETS CORNELL.

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 23 (AP).—Colgate's humbly regarded Red Raiders pounced upon unsuspecting Cornell today and upset the Ivy leaguers, 20 to 7, with a cleverly varied aerial and ground attack that yielded scores in all but the second period when Cornell momentarily deadlocked the game.

An unheralded freshman back, Frank Muelheuser, led the Raiders in a 60 yard touchdown drive in the first period, a 68 yard push in the third quarter, and a 50 yard march in the final.

Camp Grant, Ft. Riley Play to 13-13 Tie

Fort Riley, Kas., Oct. 23 [Special]. —Camp Grant's football team made a brilliant comeback here this afternoon and fought its way to a 13-all tie with the Centaurs of Fort Riley. Trailing by two touchdowns in the third period, Camp Grant suddenly came to life and turned what appeared to be defeat into a thrilling tie.

Following the kickoff after Fort Riley's second touchdown, the Warriors started to move. Reino Nori hurled a pass to End Sam Goldman for 10 yards to the Camp Grant 48. Nori picked up 5 at right end. After one aerial failed, Nori sailed the ball to Goldman, who grabbed it and dragged Safety Man Ben Sheridan to the Fort Riley 1 yard line. Corwin Clatt smashed over for the touchdown, but Bob Orlando missed the extra point.

Nori Sparks Attack.

Early in the fourth quarter, Nori enabled Camp Grant to fight back into a tie. The Warriors got the ball on the Fort Riley 48 when Tackle Roman Bentz recovered a Centaur fumble. Clatt plunged for 5, and Nori made it first down. Then Camp Grant was penalized 15 yards for clipping, sending the Warriors back to their 48. Nori was thrown for a 5 yard loss as he sought a pass receiver, but on the next play Nori located Goldman with a perfect strike and the big end snared the ball on the Fort Riley 23.

Orlando Kicks Point.

The Warriors then smashed to the 18, where Nori's pass to Bill Reed was knocked down. Nori pitched again and this time Bill Huber caught it on the 1, where he was knocked out of bounds. After Tony Storti was halted in one thrust, Nori ran right end for the touchdown. Orlando returned to the game and kicked a perfect placement to knot the count. Lineups:

playing his last game for the Wildcats, kicked the extra point.

N. U. Stalled on 11 Yard Line.

Northwestern moved to the Buckeyes' 11 yard line in the second quarter, but its passing game bogged down and the Purple lost the ball on downs. The Wildcats were unable to get a sustained offense under way in the second and third quarters.

The fourth period opened with a Northwestern team that many predicted could call its shots leading by only 7 to 0. At this juncture the reliable Graham again took command. He set up his team's second touchdown with a dash around his right end from midfield to Ohio's 30. Don Buffmire almost got into the clear, but was pulled down from behind on the 8 yard line by Bill Wallis. Herman Frickey rammed center for 2 before Bill Hackett stopped him. Graham lost a yard when he slipped, but on the next play he passed to McNutt on the goal line for a touchdown. Schwall's kick from placement was wide.

Davis Intercepts Pass.

Davis thwarted another Northwestern scoring threat in the fourth quarter by intercepting Schwall's pass on Ohio's 36.

Two long passes gave the Buckeyes their second scoring opportunity, but time ran out before they could capitalize on the situation. Davis connected with a toss to Jack Dugger on the Wildcats' 40 and the next time to Souders on the 20. The gun sounded before another play could be started.

and for about five minutes in the third, the passing feats of Bertelli, the imminent marine, were limited, but effective. He began pitching at the very outset, doing his bit for the first two of the touchdowns that dazed the spunky Illini. Altogether he launched seven throws, completing five for 82 yards. This boosted his season's total to 21 completions in 25 attempts.

Penalties Only Delay Irish.

The Irish used up 4 minutes and 15 seconds to score the first time, but were delayed by penalties. After the Illinois kickoff, Bertelli tested his pitching arm successfully, but on the next two plays Notre Dame was assessed 20 yards for offside and holding. Bertelli regained some of this lost ground with a heave to John Yonakor, putting the ball on the Irish 43.

The remainder of the march was as simple as a Monday afternoon practice. Jim Mello plunged for 11 yards and then went over his right end to the Illini 40. Creighton Miller slipped thru for 5 before Julius Rykovich sprinted 24 yards around the Illini right end. Mello, Miller, and Rykovich did the rest, the latter going over from the 3 yard line. Bertelli missed the extra point.

Bertelli Pitches for Score.

The second touchdown, scored five minutes later, began to shape up after Don Greenwood had punted to Rykovich on Notre Dame's 31. Mello took a lateral 5 yards and Bertelli slipped a pass to Yonakor for 10. With the help of a 21 yard jaunt by Miller around his right end, the Irish set up business on the enemy's 20 yard mark. Ray Kuffel grabbed a pass and dodged his way over the Illini goal, but there was a holding penalty on the Irish. This delayed them only until Bertelli sailed a 35 yard pass to Rykovich, who was in the end zone. Bertelli kicked the extra point to make it 13 to 0.

Opportunity struck the Illini early in the second period, but they couldn't capitalize. Bob Palladino fumbled a punt from Greenwood and Lester Joop recovered for the Illini on Notre Dame's 35. But Greenwood promptly fumbled the ball back to Notre Dame, George Sullivan recovering on his 32. With John Lujack, Palladino, Fred Earley, and Vic Kulbitski sharing the chore, the Irish strolled down to the 7 yard line from where Palladino drove thru center for the third touchdown. Earley's aim was bad on the kick for the point.

Palladino Goes 51 Yards.

The fourth touchdown showed up four minutes after its immediate predecessor. It came on a 70 yard march without including 5 yards slapped on the Irish after Palladino had captured an Illini punt on his 30 yard mark. Palladino recovered the 5 yards and 3 more. Kulbitski picked up 2, Lujack passed to John Zilly for 10, and Palladino followed with a dash of 4. This set the stage for Palladino, who burst from behind the customary impregnable blocking to sprint 51 yards to the Illini goal. With the aid of Earley's toe the margin was widened to 26 to 0.

Early in the third quarter the Illini captured a fumble by Mello on the Irish 47 yard line, but weren't able to do anything about it except lose ground, so punted. Bill Butkovich kicked the ball only to Notre Dame's 33. The Irish rolled down the field slowly until they were 30 yards away. Then Miller galloped over his right end for a touchdown. Bertelli kicked and the busy score board keeper put up a 33 to 0 count.

The Score Mounts.

Less than five minutes of the third quarter remained when the Irish made it 40 to 0. In a few plays after Kulbitski had intercepted a pass in midfield they were down to the Illinois 9 yard line, the big items in the advance being one of 13 yards by Kulbitski and one of 17 by Lujack. Earley handled the last 9 yards and also the extra point.

Fourth period operations began with the Irish camping on the Illini 33 yard line. Ray Davis hit center for 3 yards, but on the next play Notre Dame was set back for holding. Bob Hanlon found his way to the 25 yard line and Maggioli set up another first down by going 14 yards. Lujack ripped to the 1 foot line and on the next play shot over the goal, after which he kicked for the 47th point of the game.

Miller gained 72 yards in seven sprints, thus maintaining his season's 10 yard average. Palladino, who fills in for Rykovich, picked up 115 yards in 11 tries. Mello got 49 yards in 10 attempts, Rykovich 63 in four, and Bertelli contributed 4 yards in one assignment as a ball lugger instead of a pitcher.

Wheaton college came from behind in the final quarter to earn a 19 to 19 tie with Elmhurst college yesterday afternoon at Elmhurst.

Wheaton scored first in the opening quarter when Norbeck, Wheaton left end, blocked an Elmhurst punt, and Hill, left tackle, carried the ball over. Bobby Bizer, Elmhurst left half, however, took care of his team's scoring the rest of the way, by accounting for three touchdowns, the first on a 55 yard run after taking a pass from Harry Horst, right half. Koppin and Schaeffer scored the other two touchdowns for Wheaton.

Elmhurst college announced yesterday that its postponed game with De Kalb will be played Nov. 13 at De Kalb. Lineups:

end took this position in the third quarter.

Pihos defended the left wing of Indiana's line and Capt. John Tavener, the other veteran on the Hoosier roster, backed up the right flank. Between them they bolstered their freshman mates, who seldom failed to break thru Wisconsin's line. Tavener also added four points by placement after touchdowns, altho he twice had second chances because the overeager Wisconsin boys were offside.

Indiana Marches 75 Yards.

Indiana rolled 75 yards in 10 plays for the winning touchdown immediately after the Wisconsin opening kickoff had been put into play on Indiana's 25. Hoernschemeyer and Allerdice were the principal ball carriers, with John Cannady also contributing a 25 yard run that reached Wisconsin's 46 yard line on the second play of the game. A Wisconsin offside nullified an Indiana fumble shortly afterward and with this break in luck, Mangold then shot around defensive right end for 26 yards and a first down on the Badgers' 10.

Wisconsin's line dug in and held Allerdice and Hoernschemeyer to 8 yards in three plays. On fourth down, Hoernschemeyer crossed up the Badger line and threw to Pihos wide in the end zone for the touchdown. Tavener's second attempt—Wisconsin was offside on the first kick which hit the cross bar—made the score 7 to 0.

Mangold Goes Over.

Immediately after Wisconsin had relinquished the ball on downs on Indiana's 12, the Hoosiers drove to their second touchdown. This march required 13 plays and marked up six consecutive first downs. Hoernschemeyer opened with an 11 yard sprint around left end and Allerdice went around the same flank for 13. Cannady plunged for 7 yards and Allerdice reached the Badgers' 49 yard line.

Hoernschemeyer and Allerdice contributed a first down on the Badgers' 38 and then the former passed to Frank Hoppe for a first down on the 24.

Mangold circled right end for 10 and the Badgers were offside. On his second plunge Hoernschemeyer scored but Tavener's kick was wide.

Just before the end of the half Indiana started from its own 8 yard line, where Ray Dooney's punt had rolled dead, and the assault was climaxed by Hoernschemeyer's third down pass to Mangold which erased the last 36 yards.

Late in the third period, with Pihos at full back, the Hoosiers started for touchdown No. 4. Pete carried the ball seven times in the 10 plays which covered 70 yards and on the second play of the fourth period he smashed over from the 1 yard line.

Minutes later Hoernschemeyer's 16 yard return of Paul McLaughlin's punt to Wisconsin's 35, signaled the last touchdown drive. This time Pihos carried five times in six plays, the extra play being a 12 yard pass by Hoernschemeyer to Frank Torak. Pihos got the touchdown by a 3 yard lunge at Wisconsin's left tackle.

A. A. WILL HOLD MEETING NOV. 29 IN NEW YORK

Columbus, O., Oct. 23 (AP).—George M. Trautman, president of the American association, announced today the league's annual board of directors meeting would be held Nov. 29 in New York.

Plans for the 1944 season will be discussed, Trautman said, since the league has every expectation of operating next season.

In the past, the session has been held yearly in Chicago or some association city, but the shift was made to conserve travel, Trautman said. Since association directors will be in New York for the major league meeting Dec. 1, Trautman said, the league's session was scheduled to make a second trip unnecessary.

FOURTH QUARTER PURDUE DRIVE WHIPS IOWA, 28-7

Boilermakers Held to Tie for 3 Periods.

of admirable blocking support in the eighth minute of play. The Hawkeye line, for most of the first three quarters, fought on even terms with one of the finest forward walls ever to wear Purdue uniforms.

After a 28 yard return of the opening kick-off by Henry Terrell, Iowa failed to make first down and William Gallagher punted out of bounds on the Boilermaker 34 yard line. A holding penalty set Purdue back 15 yards, and on the next play the Hawkeyes partially returned the compliment by being caught offside. On the next play, Butkovich, spinning thru the line in his peculiar, twisting fashion, fumbled as he broke into the clear, and an Iowan recovered on the Purdue 44 yard stripe. Gallagher picked up 8 yards on a quick opening thrust over his left tackle, and Roger Stephens added another on a line sneak, then Iowa was offside.

Barbour Takes Glasener's Pass.

On the next play, William Barbour made a grand, leaping catch of Glasener's pass on the Purdue 26 yard line. Soapy then made his first tour around right end for a touchdown, but it was nullified by another offside penalty. Gallagher got one at the line and then the Glasener-Barbour combine collaborated for another pass, this good to the Boilermaker 19 yard line. An offside charge against Purdue moved the ball up another 5 yards, but the officials detected the Hawkeye backfield in motion, and it went back to the 19, from where Soapy scampered around his right for the touchdown and Co-capt. Barbour made the extra point to astound the home comers with a 7 to 0 deficit.

Master Butkovich got around to squaring himself with customers after four minutes of second quarter action. Gallagher had punted to Lewis Rose, who returned to the Iowa 47 yard line, starting point of the first Purdue score. Tony touched it off with a five yard smash at center, Rose got three more, and then Butkovich broke off tackle for an 18 yard jaunt to the Iowa 21 yard line. Boris Dimancheff contributed one and then Tony, in three tries, climaxed by a 9 yard right end sweep, made it 6 to 0, Stanley Dubicki entering to tie the score with a placement.

It's Butkovich Again.

The Butkovich nature of the contest came up again early in the third period, when a couple of passes from Sam Vacanti to Joe Buscemi brought the ball down to the Iowa 23 yard mark. On the next play, Tony burst thru the line, apparently bound for another score, but he was embarrassed to find himself without the ball, that item in some mysterious fashion turning up in the hands of Quarter Back Stephens of Iowa. The Hawkeyes started from this juncture to make a drive that brought them to the Purdue 28 yard line. Chief ingredients of this march were a pair of passes from Stephens to Dave Danner, Iowa end, the second being snatched off the fingers of a would-be interceptor, named, of all things, Butkovich. The Boilermakers couldn't capitalize on their position, however, and finally punted.

The fourth quarter was only 3 minutes and 10 seconds old when Butkovich roared over for his second touchdown, and within two more minutes and 30 seconds, he made it three straight, thanks to Buscemi's speed. Dimancheff returned an Iowa punt to the Purdue 30 yard line. On first down, Butkovich whirled around his right end and down to the Iowa 32 yard line. While he was regaining his breath, Dimancheff added two yards, and on third down, he stormed around the defensive right end, knocking over at least three ambitious Hawkeyes before crossing the line. Dubicki delivered the point again.

Kicks Third Placement.

Purdue kicked off, the ball rolling crazily in the vicinity of the Iowa 20 yard line, but Buscemi was first to cover the ball, and it was the Boilermaker's ball on the 22 yard mark. Dimancheff punched the Iowa line for eight, and in two more line smashes, Butkovich made it first down on the Iowa 14 yard mark. He hammered out another 11 yards, and then scored over right tackle on the next play, Dubicki dashing back in to kick his third placement.

The final touchdown came with the second Boilermakers' team on duty. A faulty pass from center eluded Gallagher who was standing in his end zone prepared to punt, and Nathan Laskin rushed into pounce on it for the fourth Purdue touchdown. Dubicki complementing same with another placement.

BY EDWARD PRELL.

The most spectacular team in the National Football league will line up against the Bears at 2 o'clock this afternoon. This spectacular team is Brooklyn and it is spectacular in a negative way. Not one point have the Dodgers racked up in a season which has started off with an accent on offense.

The Bears have been just as successful finding points as the Dodgers' search has been fruitless. A 48 point splurge against the Phil-Pitt Eagles last Sunday hiked the Bears' total for four games to 116. The only other team in the plus-100 point bracket is Detroit, which has scored 104 in five trips to the gridiron. The Lions play the Green Bay Packers today in Detroit and a crowd of 40,000 is in prospect.

Come to See the Parade.

Good weather in Chicago may bring out the biggest Bear crowd of the year. The attendance for the Cardinal and Eagle games was disappointing, but now that the Bears have established themselves as the most potent scoring team in the league, fans may come out as they did in the past to see how many points the Bears can run up and what new ways they have figured out to get six points.

Sid Luckman will try to crack his all-time touchdown passing record. He needs two. Last year Sid tossed 10 touchdown passes, one more than his 1941 total. The Bears' quarter back still is a long way from the record of 24 set last year by Cecil Isbell. But Sid is having by far his greatest season as a passer. He's completed 38 of 68 for 719 yards and a .559 average.

Baugh Is Challenger.

Sam Baugh of the Redskins, who meet the Cardinals today in Washington, has a .558 passing mark on 29 completions in 52 tosses. Seven of Baugh's passes have gone for touchdowns, but his total yardage is slightly less than half of Luckman's production. It looks like the two fellows will be feuding in this department all year long—and especially on Nov. 21 when the two teams clash in Washington.

Brooklyn hasn't been badly mauled in any of its four losing contests. The Dodgers, under their colorful new coach, Pete Cawthon, formerly of Texas Tech, have yielded 91 points. The Bears have been touched for 63 in their four games and the Packers have given up 75.

Cards' Hopes Are Slim.

Against the Redskins in Washington the Cardinals will be trying for an upset, but their chances seem remote. In an exhibition game last month at Buffalo, N. Y., the Redskins won, 43 to 21, but the Cards' Ronnie Cahill outshone Baugh in passing. Ronnie completed 11 of 19. In this game the Redskins scored three times on pass interceptions and once on a Cardinal fumble.

The Packers are in a desperate spot in Detroit. The Green Bay team must continue winning and then knock off the Bears in Wrigley field on Nov. 7 to remain in the running for the western section title.

The Phil-Pitt Eagles will play the New York Giants in New York in the fourth league game today.

FORT SHERIDAN TEAM PLAYS IN DAYTON TODAY

Bill Sims, former all-state back at St. Rita's High school, Chicago, and 1942 Indiana university full back, joined the 28 man Fort Sheridan football squad named by Lt. John Phipps, coach, which left for Dayton, O., to play Patterson Field today.

Sims is expected to start at full back. Earlier in the week Dick Johnson, former Harvard linesman, had bolstered the squad. Players named for the Dayton trip were:

PANTHER RALLY BEATS BETHANY ELEVEN, 18 TO 0

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 23 (AP).—The University of Pittsburgh broke loose in the last quarter for two touchdowns, after playing listlessly thruout the first three quarters, to defeat Bethany college of West Virginia, 18 to 0, for the Panthers' second football victory of the season today.

period by virtue of a pass from Capt. Ralph Heywood to McCardle to the 33 and Mil Dreblow's run to the 12. McCardle passed to Heywood for what appeared to be a touchdown but the officials ruled he dropped the ball as he fell to the ground, without holding possession.

A 52 yard dash thru a broken field by Podesto a short time later set up a touchdown that had to be ruled out because officials called a Pacific clipping penalty. Podesto was run out on the Trojan 35, but he fired a pass, seconds later, to Quarter Back Joe Ferem, who scampered across the goal, only to be called back.

Pacific had another tough break which prevented it from tying the score on the kick-off after the Trojans had scored in the fourth. Holmes fumbled the kick-off but picked it up and carried it across the goal. The officials ruled he had stepped out on U. S. C.'s 46, however. Pacific was unable to get beyond the 30 after that.

Penn State Wins, 45 to 0, at Maryland Homecoming

College Park, Md., Oct. 23 (AP).—Penn State's Nittany Lions, getting away early and fast on a series of misplays by the University of Maryland, ruined the Old Liners' homecoming today with a 45 to 0 victory in the fifth renewal of their football hostilities.

Sportsman's Bets $871,706 for Record

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Leonard Wegrzyn, who has been doing some amazingly energetic riding during the Sportsman's Park meeting, brought in four winners yesterday, including the top horses in the co-feature events.

Meanwhile the crowd of 15,000 was pouring a track record handle thru the mutuel machines. The total of $871,706 for the nine races was well in excess of the previous all-time high of $654,169 which was wagered on last Wednesday's eight events. This brought the week's handle to $3,650,462, for a daily average for the first week of the fall meeting of $608,410.

Wegrzyn, an apprentice rider from Palatine, Ill., landed Reztips on the finish line a length and a half ahead of Quizzle, while Bushwhacker was finishing third in the $2,500 Sam Markel handicap. A few minutes later he brought in Frank's Boy a length in advance of Marion Collins in the $2,500 Garfield Park handicap. Miss Ethel was third.

Seven Furlong Events.

Both of these events were at 7 furlongs. Those who backed Reztips collected $12.20 and the followers of Frank's Boy drew $13.40.

Dads and Gay Elf scored in the first two races to make up an $83.40 daily double. Wegrzyn brought the former up in the stretch to take the lead in the last sixteenth of a mile. He beat Arrive on Time by half a length, Susan Constant being third. The winner paid off at $19, $7.80, and $5.40 across the board.

Gay Elf led all the way in accounting for her half of the double. Her early opposition came from Blossom Queen and Virginia Love. After disposing of these she went on to finish a length and a half in advance of the fast finishing Stepping Out. Naughty Sister was third. Those who backed the winner collected $10.60.

Finishes All Alone.

Wegrzyn was aboard his fourth winner of the afternoon when Mack's Prince led all the way in the seventh race, finishing all alone four lengths ahead of Royal Blue after dominating this mile and an eighth gallop all the way. Those who bet Mack's Prince to win collected $10.20.

Walter Warren, who had ridden Gay Elf in the second, brought in another winner in the fourth—Quercus. This horse, the 5 to 2 second choice, came up to catch the even money favorite, Little Bolus, in the stretch. Tower Lass was third. The proceeds of this race are to be turned over to the Catholic Youth organization.

Paducah Sets Track Record.

Paducah, the favorite in the eighth race, which was named in honor of State Senator Frank Ryan, set a new track record for two miles and 70 yards. This was one of those races in which the horses go round and round and round the half mile oval until the spectators get a bit dizzy.

Paducah, with Eddie Franklin aboard, lost the lead on the last time around when he went wide on the clubhouse turn, but he came right on again to regain it, finishing four lengths ahead of Spiteful, with Starcress third. His time of 3:48 3-5 was 5 2-5 seconds better than the previous mark of 3:54.

SCHWABENS AND SWEDES TO PLAY FOR LEAD TODAY

Two Soccer Titles May Be Decided.

BY OFFSIDE.

First place in both the major and first divisions of the International Soccer league, still undecided, may be settled this afternoon in a pair of games involving leading clubs in the two sections. The top attractions in the major division will bring together the Schwabens and Swedish-Americans at California avenue and Roscoe street, while the first division feature matches the Hakoah-Centers and Necaxas in Sparta stadium.

Another major division game attracting a lot of interest is that between the Vikings and Slovaks in Winnemac stadium. The Vikings will oppose the Norwegian Royal Air Force team from Toronto a week from today in Chicago's first international match of the season. Today's games will finish the league schedules, except for play-offs of postponed contests.

Service Men to Help.

The Schwabens, needing a victory over the Swedes to gain the major division leadership, have dropped only one league point this season. They will field their strongest lineup against the Swedes, who were dropped from the lead a week ago when beaten by the Vikings. The Schwabens expect to be able to use all of their players who are in service, since they are stationed in the Chicago area. The Swedes' only doubtful starter is Billy Fraser, who was injured last week but expects to be ready to play.

The first division match between the Hakoahs and Necaxas is expected to attract a capacity crowd, since both have large followings. The Hakoah lineup includes a number of players who got their early training on European teams. Mainstays of this undefeated club are Max Gruner, Leo Hony, Pvt. Henry Kuhn, Eddie Linderman, and Max Pearlman. The Necaxas' lineup includes the two Nava brothers from Mexico. Lineups:

CHAMPIONS ARE DIME A DOZEN IN CAST OF FOLLIES

"Ice Follies of 1944" will have a group of champions in its personnel of 138 when the eighth edition of the Shipstads and Johnson revue opens at the Chicago Arena Friday night, Nov. 5, for an engagement lasting thru Nov. 20.

One of these champions gained his title in another field of sport, Heinie Brock, one of the top comedians of the show, having been national fancy diving champion while at the University of Minnesota and a teammate of Johnny Weissmuller at the Illinois Athletic club.

Norah McCarthy won the women's Canadian figure skating championship and was a runnerup for the North American title. Michael Kirby, 17 year old, 6 foot 3 inch find from Nova Scotia, won the Canadian national junior pairs championship in 1940 with Shirley Halstead of Toronto, who also is a member of "Ice Follies." Kirby then went on to take the Canadian junior crown in 1941 and the senior title in 1942.

Other title holders in the show are Papez and Zwack, former Olympic games competitors; Frances Claudet, Canadian gold medalist, highest honor obtainable in figure skating; Osborn Colson, former Canadian men's senior champion and Olympic games representative, and Betty Atkinson, a former winner of the American Legion national competition for drum majorettes.

Pass Gives Gary Emerson 6-0 Victory Over Proviso

Emerson High of Gary defeated Proviso of Maywood, 6 to 0, last night in Gary. Emerson turned a Proviso march into the winning touchdown. Mike Coutouis intercepted a Proviso pass on his own 14 and returned to the visitors' 31. On the very next play Bill Levack pitched a perfect pass to Ben Olis in Maywood's end zone.

The Home Front

BY MARK COX.

WHILE chaos and confusion have engulfed the National Basketball league's status for 1943-'44, Chicago's play for pay representatives have gone quietly about their own business of molding a team. The Studebaker Champions will be thought of in the terms of automobiles again, not as a basketball team, and replacing them as Chicago's professional basketball exhibitors will be the American Gear company.

Never heard of American Gear? That doesn't qualify you for a 4-F on grounds of mental deficiency, for a year ago this time there were only 400 employes on its pay roll, qualifying it as merely a neighborhood enterprise in this area of industrial massivity. Today there are 1,000 workers in its 24 hour daily production pattern and by New Year's day the number will have grown to 1,200.

That Army-Navy E flag rippling over the plant at 6633 West 65th street had to do with accomplishments in war work, but it could have applied to aggressiveness in athletics, which is unequalled thruout Chicagoland, and possibly unparalleled in the nation by industrial plants of the same proportions.

Softball Team Wins 50 Straight and Three Titles.

Chicagoland's softball clique began to suspect as much last summer when the Gears compiled a 50 game winning streak over 37 different teams in capturing the citywide Chicago park district industrial, Gage park industrial and Cleary industrial district titles. Their basketball plans should make the matter definite.

Operating in the same driving, forceful manner, the Gears already list such players on their roster as Herb Ball of Western Kentucky Teachers, lathe operator; Harry [Swede] Roos, veteran workhorse of Chicago basketball, gears inspector; Ed Gainor, 6 foot 8 inch former De Paul player, who performed one season with the Fort Wayne Zollners, and Vernon Yates, All-Missouri Valley disciple of Coach Henry Iba at Oklahoma A. & M., who has a medical discharge form the army. Others will be forthcoming.

The Gears plan to fill a schedule with such opposition as Chase Brass Co. of Cleveland, Sheboygan, Akron Goodyears, Dow Chemical of Midland, Mich., coached by Everett Shelton, who directed Wyoming to the N. C. A. A. title a year ago, and various high grade service teams. Ray Adams, the former De Paul star who played with Camp Grant last year, but is directing the present Camp Ellis quintet, already has asked to be counted in on the Gears' agenda.

Builds Fine Athletic Plant for Outlay of $16,000.

Back of this spurt into industrial sports prominence is the president of the company, Maurice A. White, a strapping individual in his early 40s who looks trim enough to compete on the concerns' clubs. When he decided to present his employes with a recreational change of pace, he tackled the project wholeheartedly. He purchased the property across the street from the plant while the snow was on the ground last winter and broke sod on a modern athletic field early last spring.

He named the project Harry M. White stadium, in honor of his father, any by the time he had completed the modern structure, had put out $16,000 to furnish his employe the only lighted solely industrial field in the city. Five hundred loads of dirt were hauled in from the Chrysler plant to furnish a level surface for roadside tables, dance floor, and volleyball, handball, horseshoe and basketball courts.

Then he obtained Don Rice to make the program tick. Apparently it was a wise move for Don has a solid background, having been an umpire in the Texas and Western leagues as well as in Chicago, and a basketball official of long standing. His days as a competitor date back to 1916-'17 in Columbus, O., where, as a member of the North High teams, his toughest opponent was a young man from neighboring East High named Chick Harley, who was to gain immortal recognition in Ohio State sports.

Thus, is a picture of an industrial athletic program that might well be adopted here, there or anywhere. There is no copyright on it.

TO the Illinois division of Bendix Aviation, the nation's No. 1 producer of aircraft carburetors, goes the credit of being the first industrial plant in this area to organize a figure skating club. Sponsor of the idea is Chris Hoekstra, who for many years has cut fancy capers on both artificial and natural ice.

During the days of the depression many commercial art studios had more artists than art jobs. Space was no object in the roomy studios and many managers installed table tennis sets to allow the artists to pass away their time between assignments. As a result, it was not surprising they became adept at the game which requires a liquid wrist, a flat stomach, and a graceful movement, all requisites of a good artist.

Organize Table Tennis League for Mills Industries Players.

Out at Mills Industries, two of these nationally acclaimed artists are organizing a table tennis league. They are Frank Riley, typographic artist who is the designer of the type face Grayda, so-called after his wife, and Everett Eckland, designer famous for his developments in moulded plywood for airplanes.

Eckland also contributed the physical design for the war bond display of 4,500 airplanes hanging from the roof of the Union station.

Coördinating and writing the copy for the plaque which themes the display was Jim Mangan, Mills director of war promotions, who confines his stroking to the tennis courts.

Phil Jewell, personnel director at Signode Steel and Strapping company, has returned to his desk after convalescing from a nervous condition and glandular fever. His buddies on the north side suspect the breakdown was due to his softball team's falling below fancy advance predictions.

Benny Budrick, long a familiar name to Chicago basketball followers, is being welcomed back to Revere Copper and Brass after spending some time at a local ordnance plant. However, it will be farewell soon for Benny expects an early induction.

Illinois Tool Executives Attend Softball Banquet.

Personally speaking . . . Lt. [j. g.]Charley Dwyer recently visited Utah Radio, where he used to be quite a performer. . . . After spending a year in Iceland, Charley averred he certainly received a warm reception. . . . Lex Waters of Hammond is getting to be quite a railroader in the Division Street Y Industrial bowling league. . . . A week ago he accomplished the 6-7-10 and this week picked up the 4-7-10. . . . H. L. Smith, president, and Walter B. Smith, chairman of the board, turned out last week at the Illinois Tool Works banquet to fete the men's and women's softball teams that won the North Avenue-Larrabee Y titles. . . . After winding up his twice weekly conditioning classes of the summer, Joe Capetty, athletic director at Russell Electric, is making plans for basketball to share the winter program with the 70 bowlers in the plant.

Titus Haffe, co-owner of Hober Screw company and other north side industries, is making rapid prograss against his old enemy, avoirdupois. . . . The popular little dynamo of energy serves as an excellent example to all his employes. . . . From Proctor and Gamble comes word there is much interest in the table tennis tournament there. . . . Ed Neville, their monopolizer of ping pong titles for many years, again is billed as favorite, but will get more than a workout from such contenders as Ed Moore, Mike Tober, and Norm Wherrett, recreational director. . . . Proof the ladies of Pullman-Standard are a color conscious lot was proved when a popularity contest for bowling blouses ended up with a selection of bright green letters for their white blouses.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 30 [Special].—A reorganized Marquette university football lineup, weakened this week by an injury and by losses to the navy, will meet the Great Lakes Naval Training station eleven in the annual homecoming game in the Marquette stadium this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

More than the usual color will be attached to the homecoming festivities this year, with a premature observance of Navy day as the feature. The program will include the first formal review of Marquette's 800 navy trainees; the appearance of the Great Lakes band, the Hilltop navy band, and 500 sailors from the training station, and the presentation of a service flag which will honor 4,250 Marquette men and women now in the service.

Sailors Won Last Game.

The service flag will be presented to the Rev. Raphael C. McCarthy, S. J., president of the university, by Gamma Pi Epsilon, honorary sorority. It also will include a gold star to honor the 29 Marquette men who thus far have lost their lives in the war.

The game should be one of the best on the Hilltoppers' home card this season, with Coach Tom E. Stidham's team seeking to avenge the 24 to 0 loss it suffered at the hands of Great Lakes here last fall. Marquette holds an all time 2 to 1 edge in the series, however, having won from the Bluejackets, 14 to 7, in 1917, and 29 to 0 in 1919.

Aschenbrenner Injured.

The Marquette lineup was shuffled this week when two first team men, Bill Kramer, tackle, and Chuck Chesbro, end, were transferred to the Iowa Pre-flight school. Coach Stidham moved Len Liss from right tackle to left tackle, and switched Chuck Benkendorf from left end to right end. Two freshmen, Don Farrell, end, and Bob Krebs, tackle, then were promoted to the varsity. Marquette's chief casualty is Frank Aschenbrenner, brilliant freshman runner and kicker, who is favoring a bad leg and may not be able to play against the Bluejackets.

Great Lakes' experienced lineup features the two Steves, Lach of Duke and Juzwik of Notre Dame, in its back field. The Tars have a formidable line with Russ Letlow, former Green Bay Packer, and Libero Bertagnolli of Washington at the guards; George Perpich of Georgetown at tackle, and Cecil Pirkey of East Texas State and Joe Schwarting of Texas at ends.

Great Lakes has won from Fort Riley, Iowa, Pittsburgh, and Ohio State, and lost to Purdue and Northwestern. Marquette's record includes victories over Michigan and Lawrence, a tie with Camp Grant, and a loss to Purdue.

Tops Stadium Card

Fritzie Zivic, former welterweight champion, who will meet Bobby Richardson in the feature bout of a boxing show in the Chicago Stadium Friday night.

Gee Will Sub for Woods in Taylor Bout

Forrest Gee, Milwaukee middleweight, yesterday was substituted for Corp. Lou Woods of Camp Grant and Detroit in an eight round bout against Tito Taylor in Marigold Gardens tomorrow. Woods asked to be excused because of a hand injury he suffered in training.

Other eight round matches on the card will bring together Robert Simmons, Indianapolis welterweight, and Jimmy Hunt, and Eddie Scott, Detroit lightweight, and Gene Spencer.

Don Callahan, St. Paul light heavyweight, is paired with Mickey McKiness in a six round bout, while Sam Hughes, junior welterweight, also of Indianapolis, is matched with Gene Ward in a four rounder.

Promoters Irving Schoenwald and Jack Begun last night said reports that Lee Savold would meet Jimmy Bivins in Chicago Stadium in December were not true. They added if the match is made it probably will be held in Cleveland under auspices of Larry Atkins, who is responsible for the erroneous report.

Johnny Barbara, former Chicago welterweight, has joined the navy Seabees. . . . The Swedish Angel will meet Emir Badui in the windup bout of a wrestling show in White City tomorrow.

BLACKHAWKS TO PLAY TORONTO IN HOCKEY OPENER

CampaignWill Start Next Sunday.

One week from tonight the Chicago Blackhawks and the Toronto Maple Leafs will open the 1943-'44 National Hockey league season in the Chicago Stadium. The Hawks' counting room has forecast the largest opening game crowd in history, and, if the team proves as strong as hoped the largest season from the point of attendance is considered likely.

Unlike baseball, most of the hockey players are citizens, not of this country but of an allied dominion, Canada, and those who will play have complied with war time requirements, said to be just as exacting as those having to do with baseball athletes in this country.

It seems that authorities both in Canada and the United States, have come to consider a professional athlete in the same category as any other civilian who works for pay. This viewpoint is a solution that sometimes may be obscure to persons who think of athletics only as a fun producing recreation for the participant as much or more than for the spectator.

Hockey Players Do Their Part.

This "play is work when its for pay" idea has applied mostly in clearing the players from man power restrictions. A hockey player, who usually makes more money playing hockey than he can at any other occupation, by the same token, pays more taxes from a hockey income than he could from some job he might take in an industry more essential than skating.

Tho the National Hockey league is going to have a boom year, it can't be said it enjoys any magic exemption either from Canada or the United States. Hockey has as many or more stars in military services than most professional sports, and they haven't received soft berths.

There is Sammy Lo Presti, for instance. This former Hawk goalie, you may recall, spent 42 days on a raft, given up as lost in the South Atlantic after his ship had been sunk. Two sons of Red Dutton, president of the National league, have been killed in action in Europe.

Will Use Kids and Veterans.

Some of the American players will not finish the season if Uncle Sam keeps after the fathers. But for the time being big league hockey, by employing under age youngsters and oldsters with dependents, will get along without too much prejudice we hope.

The Hawks have their share of said kids and oldsters and they'll have the customers, as per the forecasts at the outset of this piece.

If professional hockey doesn't last out the season it will close gracefully. Until such time, we trust, apologists won't be too busy and critics too severe.

"I cannot express the anguish it caused me to read that Lonnie Wilhelm and Fred Schaus as being from Warren, O.," he writes. "If you check back you'll find that Wilhelm was a coach at Newark [Ohio] High school and that Freddy Schaus [he spells it with one "s"] also came from the same school. Schaus, incidentally, was all state basketball forward. I know what I say is true because I, too, was a pupil of Wilhelm and after graduation covered sports for central Ohio newspapers."

Fort Sheridan.

FORT SHERIDAN'S football team will meet Wilson Junior college on the field at nearby Highland Park High school Saturday afternoon. . . . SPOTTING THE PINS

TOURNEY FOR OLD TIMERS

Quarter century meet popular with veteran bowlers.

RAY SCHALK SETS DATES

Holiday sweepstakes will be held again on Jan. 8 and 9.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

"GEE, but I'd give the world to see that old gang of mine," is the old song refrain with which the gents who are conducting the Quarter Century Bowlers' reunion next Sunday at Art Meier's Gold Coast Recreation, 1213 North Clark street, are sounding the call for the 14th annual assembly of old timers. . . . This gathering of the clan has successfully been conducted over 13 years for the purpose of bringing together old friends in the atmosphere of yore. . . . The fee for attending is $1.25, entitling each guest to a pocket piece and the opportunity to contribute to the men in the services. . . . For another $1.25 the old timer may bowl three games in a variety of contests which offer prizes, by drawing, to those bowlers in the 40s, 50s, 60s, 70s, etc., as well as awards for high scores. . . . The Paul Fechtmeyers have set themselves a goodly pace in the Logan Bowl House league by winning six straight. . . . Pvt. Joe Wilman, one of the town's sharpest bowlers, now is stationed in Camp Grant.

Connie Schwoegler Thinks Switch Will Help Him.

The South Shore Monday Night Men's Major league last week came up with the following results: Wanzer Dairy, 2,864; Keeley Beer, 2,675; Schneider & Son, 2,787; James Grisham, 2,572; New Club De Lisa, 2,723; E. E. Knapp, 2,653; Du Bouchett Royal, 2,706; South Shore Bank, 2,476; Charlie Bunn, 2,639, and Sister's Restaurant, 2,631. . . . Les Flannery had high game of 251 and Rudy Konar topped the series scorers with 638. . . . Connie Schwoegler, who will defend his individual match game championship in the third annual national classic to be sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., and the Bowling Proprietors' Association of America in the Auditorium service men's center from Dec. 4 thru 12, is confident that his recent switch to a three-fingered ball will help him in hanging on to his crown against the grand field that will be out to take it from him. . . . George Foell and his associates have reopened the Beverly Recreation, scene of last season's unfortunate fire.

Gov. Dwight H. Green, having proclaimed last week as "bowling week" for hundreds of thousands of Illinois pinmen, took official cognizance of the proclamation by rolling three games with the Springfield ordnance plant at the Springfield Bowl. The chief executive had an average of 157 with a high game of 179.

Alley Manager Goes Out and Grabs His Pin Boys.

Sammy Weinstein, the original Tenpin Tattler of radio, enters the navy tomorrow. . . . When there's a roundup of unusual 1943-'44 scores, they'll have to consider the performance of Leo Rumpf in the Dutch Boy league at St. Joseph's alleys, 729 West 17th street. . . . Playing with the Thunderbolts, Leo, who had maintained a prior average of 166, fired three consecutive games of 222 for a series of 666 that not only helped him set his best game and series record, but also aided the Thunderbolts in sweeping three games against the Lightnings. . . . Johnny Kelly, manager of the 20th Century Lanes, apparently has solved his personal pin boy headache. . . . He does a Paul Revere each day, combing the streets in the vicinity of his establishment and seeking boys who are idle.

Bee Hochstadter Resigns Job to Work on War Fund Drive.

Bee Hochstadter, one of the ablest organizers and instructresses in bowling, has announced her resignation from the staff of Garden Recreation, where she has been stationed for the last six years. . . . She is president of what many experts consider the strongest feminine bowling wheel in the land—the Playdium All-Star Ladies' league. . . . Bee is making the change in order to devote more time to her duties as central state regional director of the war Service commission and to concentrate on the Wings of Mercy drive, whereby she and her associates hope to purchase two hospital planes. . . . The drive is directed toward the 20,000 women bowlers in Chicago, who are being asked to contribute $1 to this effort.

Ray Schalk, the old time White Sox catcher, has announced his eighth annual holiday sweepstakes tournament, to be held at Schalk's [New] Evergreen Towers, 2535 West 95th street, on Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 8 and 9. . . . The entry fee is $50 per five man team, with $7.50 for bowling. . . . The teams will bowl four games across eight alleys. . . . Entries should be forwarded to Secretary C. M. Labbe, 2535 West 95th street, Evergreen Park, Ill.

Among local bowlers who have a show business background are Paul Young, manager of Rose Bowl, one of the five local qualifying sites for the All-Star tournament; Eddie Costello, co-owner of the Pla-Mor lanes; Jack Stack of Stack and Ryan, and Sam Black, the bowling linen tycoon. . . . Vaughan Segert, the secretary of the North West Ladies' Traveling league, is a rabid aviation enthusiast.

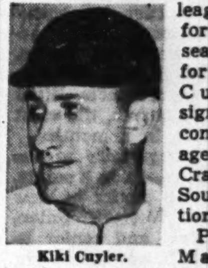
South End Ladies' Traveling League to Move Tonight.

The South End Ladies' Traveling league moves tonight to the Bowlarium recreation, 75th street and Essex avenue. . . . The leading Pla-Mor Lanes, who have a record of 15 won and 3 lost, meet the home team. . . . Other pairings send the Crest Bowling School against South Shore National Bank, Mrs. Grass' Noodle Soupers against the Crest Recreation, and the Du Bouchetts against the Green Diamond Golf Range. . . . Crest Recreation is holding a mixed doubles Halloween sweepstakes on Oct. 30.

CUYLER TAKES JOB AS PILOT OF ATLANTA TEAM

Leaves Cubs After Two Years as Coach.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 23 (AP).—Hazen [Kiki] Cuyler, for 17 years a major league player and for the last two seasons a coach for the Chicago Cubs, today signed a two year contract to manage the Atlanta Crackers of the Southern association.



Kiki Cuyler.

President Earl Mann of the Crackers, who declined to disclose terms, said Cuyler had left the Cubs with approval of Business Manager James Gallagher, who told him he could have a job as coach for the Cubs or as manager of a minor league Chicago affiliate any time he wished to return.

Cuyler managed the Chattanooga Lookouts for three years, leaving the club in August, 1941, to join the Cubs. He piloted Chattanooga to a pennant in 1939—its second in Southern association history.

Cuyler went to the big leagues from Nashville, where he was voted the outstanding player of the Southern league in 1923. He played center field for Pittsburgh for four years and then went to the Cubs in 1928. He was sold to Cincinnati in 1935, and went to Brooklyn in 1938.

GEORGIA PRE-FLIGHT WINS.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Oct. 23 [AP].—The Georgia Navy Pre-Flight school crushed North Carolina Navy Pre-Flight, 20 to 7, before 5,000 spectators, mostly cadets, today.

Will the Post-War Hour Have 100 Minutes

Wars Have Always Brought Big Changes. New Ways of Measuring Things Being Considered by Scientists. Our Money Is Measured by Decimal System . . . Why Not Weight, Distance, and Time, Too?

The watch of the future may be like this . . . 20 hours . . . 100 minutes in an hour . . . 100 seconds in a minute.

ASK yourself these four questions and you'll see why scientists think our present way of measuring things is too complicated:

What is a tenth of 6 pounds?
What is a tenth of 7 yards?
What is a tenth of 12 hours?

Now, what is a tenth of nine dollars?

Our way of counting money is easy and simple because we use the metric or decimal system: Merely move the decimal point and you have the answer. $9.00 is 900 cents and a tenth of that is 90.0 cents.

Our way of measuring weight, distance, and time is clumsy. For instance, a pound is 16 ounces, 6 pounds is 6 x 16 = 96; a tenth of 6 pounds is nine and three-fifths ounces. A tenth of 12 hours is 12 x 60 = 720 ÷ 10 = 72 minutes or 1 hour and 12 minutes.

If the decimal system were used in measuring time, it would simply be 120.0 minutes, or 1.20 (one hour and twenty minutes).

Think how much time would be saved and how many errors avoided if we could measure all things by the "tens" or decimal system. This system is already used by scientists everywhere.

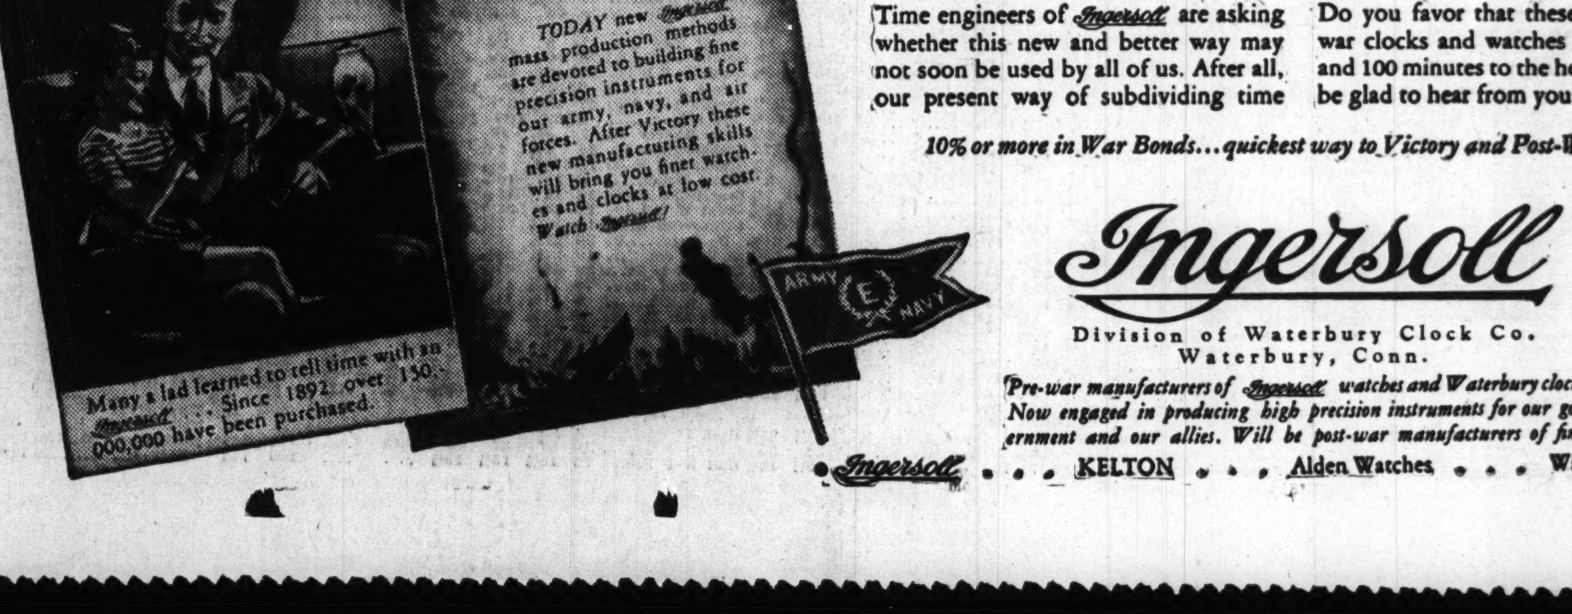
Many large business institutions have long expressed interest in a more simplified system of time recording. With the decimal system there would be no 12 hours A. M. and 12 hours P. M. The day would be divided into 20 hours of 100 minutes each and 100 seconds in each minute. Counting hours, minutes, and seconds is as simple as counting dollars, dimes, and pennies.

Time engineers of Ingersoll are asking whether this new and better way may not soon be used by all of us. After all, our present way of subdividing time was originated thousands of years ago when time was measured by sun-dials, running water, and running sand. Today's watches and clocks, of course, are big improvements over the hour-glass and sun-dial . . . but now, can not the watch and clock themselves be improved?

Right today, "watches" built by Ingersoll to explode anti-aircraft shells at a given distance are checked to 1-100th of a second.

That these "watches" each containing over one hundred parts and marvels of accuracy are now made on a mass production basis by Ingersoll foretells a much better watch for you at a low price after Victory.

Do you favor that these and all post-war clocks and watches have 20 hours and 100 minutes to the hour? We would be glad to hear from you.



TODAY new Ingersoll mass production methods are devoted to building fine precision instruments for our army, navy, and air forces. After Victory these new manufacturing skills will bring you finer watches and clocks at low cost. Watch Ingersoll!

Many a lad learned to tell time with an Ingersoll . . . Since 1892 over 150,000,000 have been purchased.

PRICE OF STOCKS PUSHED HIGHER BY SPECIALTIES

Utility Preferreds Lead Volume Expansion.

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Specialties attracted a large part of buying interest again today in a slightly higher stock market, but many prominent issues closed lower. Activity in utility preferred issues, sought by investors because of more optimism over tax prospects, lifted dealings to 326,070 shares, the most for a short session in a month.

After general irregularity at the start, some issues rose 1 to 3 points. Conspicuous among stocks at new 1943 peaks were Western Union, American Distilling, and senior issues of American Power and Light and Electric Power and Light.

Wage disputes in the rail and coal mining industries handicapped other departments besides the carrier list.

Little Support Attracted.

The list held steady or better during the week without attracting much support. The stand of the house ways and means committee against any boost in individual income taxes was an important supporting factor. Good war news, coupled with many pleasing dividends and earnings statements, inspired selective bidding.

Dealings were relatively sluggish, the turnover slightly topping the 600,000 share mark on only two days. The market was a bit unsettled Thursday when oils weakened on the announcement that underwriters had arranged to offer publicly 1 million shares of the Rockefeller Standard Oil holdings. The petroleum group revived yesterday, however, when the sale was postponed indefinitely, and did little today.

BONDS ARE IRREGULAR.

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Fractional improvement in a sizable group of rails in the bond market today was about balanced by an almost equal number of losses thruout the list.

Advances of more than two points were made by Peoria and Eastern income 4s and Rio Grand Western collateral 4s. Cleveland Union Terminal 4½s added a point. Smaller gains were made by Boston and Maine 4½s, Kansas City Southern 5s, Lehigh Valley 4½s, New Haven convertibles, Pere Marquette 4½s, and Frisco "A" 4s and "B" 5s.

In the foreign list Chilean bonds were in demand and some Peruvian issues gained.

CHICAGO PRICES GAIN.

Prices were higher yesterday in small turnover on the Chicago Stock exchange. The most actively traded issues included Midland Utilities 7 per cent prior lien, up ½; Middle West corporation, up ⅛; Midland United A preferred, unchanged, and Chicago corporation common and Libby, McNeill and Libby, both down ⅛. New peaks were established by Great Lakes Dredge and Dock, Wieboldt Stores, and Mickelberry Food Products.

BIGGER TENDER SPARES ENGINE FOR WAR DRAFT

Pulls More Water, Fuel for New York Run.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 23.—F. E. Williamson, president of the New York Central railroad, disclosed today that introduction six months ago of a new type tender, carrying increased water and fuel supplies, has enabled many of his road's most important passenger trains to make the 928 mile run between Chicago and New York with a single steam locomotive. The new tender, which releases for vital war service at least one extra engine, was built from redesigned equipment in the New York Central's own shops, Williamson said.

Fully equipped with roller bearings, the tender weighs more than 200 tons loaded and is 51 feet 6 inches long. It has a capacity of 17,500 gallons of water and 43 tons of coal, compared with 30 tons of coal and 14,000 gallons of water carried by the standard Hudson type tender, which it replaces on some of the road's best trains.

Promises Post-War Savings.

Along with a dual type locomotive, suitable either for freight or passenger duty, which the road has been putting into service for some time, the new tender foreshadows the kind of railroad efficiency the country may expect in the post-war period, Williamson asserted. Such efficiencies, he declared, will make important contributions toward providing better and more economical transportation.

"After the war," Williamson said, "all business, including transportation, will return to the American way of competition and enterprise—the normal, healthy condition in which the man who pays the bill gets the kind of goods and services he wants at a competitive price.

Rails Ready, He Says.

"The railroads are ready and willing to resume business under these terms. They are best equipped for the mass transportation of freight and passengers overland, and if all the elements of volume, speed, comfort, and low cost are considered together, the railroads can do more than any other agency."

Williamson predicted that with the war in offensive stage, both freight and passenger traffic would move into new record levels.

"In every month since February, 1942, the pre-war peak in the movement of freight, reached in October, 1928," has been exceeded," he recalled. "Estimates indicate that this pre-war monthly record will again be exceeded in October this year by as much as 50 per cent, a new all-time record."

Exchange Urges Earlier Decisions on Dividends

Suggestions for easing the problems of stockholders in connection with Dec. 15 income tax estimates were sent all listed corporations yesterday by the Chicago Stock exchange. The corporations were asked to consider year-end dividend possibilities earlier than usual, make any declarations several days before Dec. 15, and inform stockholders and the exchange immediately of any dividend action.

HOTELS ENJOY BIGGEST WAVE OF PROSPERITY

Nearly Every Room Is Occupied.

BY AL CHASE.

Chicago hotels are having their greatest era of prosperity, with nearly all rooms occupied nightly, a survey disclosed yesterday. Reservations are booked ahead for weeks and in some instances for months.

Arnold S. Kirkeby.

Despite the war restrictions on conventions, Chicago remains the world's greatest center for business gatherings, and thousands of visitors pour into the city daily. So far, altho some individuals have complained that they could not get into certain hotels, every one seems to have been able to obtain sleeping accommodations.

Arnold S. Kirkeby, new president of the Stevens hotel, said that the Drake and Blackstone hotels, which he also operates, nightly send more than 200 persons they are unable to accommodate to the Stevens, where cots are set up in rooms not yet officially open to the public.

Stevens Rooms to Be Full.

"From early morning until late at night I get long distance phone calls, telegrams, and letters asking about accommodations in any of the three hotels we operate," Kirkeby said. "Every one of the 1,100 rooms of the Stevens' 3,000 which are to be opened to the public on Nov. 1 will be taken on that date. And when the entire hotel is in operation the 3,000 rooms all will be taken for weeks ahead. [They can accommodate about 4,500 persons.]

"I have combed the Chicago area from Waukegan to Gary and can't find any vacant hotel rooms available to care for our oversupply. Outlying hotels used to be the safety valve for the loop hotel situation. When downtown was overcrowded we sent guests to the neighborhood hotels. Now they are full to the roof, too."

Twelve conventions unable to meet in Chicago unless the Stevens were reopened will hold sessions here as a result of his purchase of the "world's largest hotel" from the army and announcement of its reopening next month, the Chicago Association of Commerce reported.

Booked Ahead for 3 Weeks.

The Drake and Blackstone are booked solidly ahead for three weeks, he said. The Drake has 700 rooms and the Blackstone 400.

The Bismarck hotel has its 600 rooms full nightly, said C. E. McGarrity, assistant manager. The Bismarck ran an advertisment in New York newspapers last week announcing that no rooms were available the first part of this week.

"The public is getting 'reservation minded,'" McGarrity said. "People who never planned ahead, but just landed in town and expected to walk into a hotel and get a room, are reserving space weeks ahead. We already are booking rooms for January."

"The La Salle hotel is full all the time," said Allen Stubbins, resident manager. "We haven't had a vacant room in a month. We receive hundreds of letters and telegrams daily for space we don't have available." The hotel has 1,000 rooms.

Girl Aids in Room Search.

All of the Morrison hotel's 2,000 rooms are occupied daily, an executive said, and its capacity is booked for six weeks ahead. A girl employe is stationed in the lobby to aid visitors in their search for rooms by telephoning other loop hotels.

The Palmer House, which maintains a large reserve of rooms for contingencies, said it had empty space available at nearly all times.

Ernest Byfield of the Hotel Sherman said he was considering the desirability of holding space for emergency visitors. He said there were many days when no rooms were available, and that booking was done weeks ahead.

He agreed with other managers who said transportation uncertainty was becoming a major problem for all hotels.

With the Chicago Beach hotel's 600 rooms taken for an army hospital, the Auditorium hotel with 400 rooms used as a service men's center, and the 937 rooms of the Congress hotel empty awaiting a court decision for a possible reopening, about 5,000 hotel rooms once available in Chicago will remain off the market until the Steven's reopening reduces this number.

Specific Law on Contract Ending Urged

Legislation designed to ease the burden on manufacturers, particularly smaller ones, caused by cancelation of war contracts was urged yesterday by directors of the Illinois Manufacturers' association in recommendations to the house committee on military affairs. The committee is conducting hearings on the renegotiation and termination of contracts.

The association recommended that at least 75 per cent of the amount of claims by contractors on war business be paid on termination of contracts. It said this would relieve the apprehension of manufacturers over the present policy of the government with relation to contract cancelations.

Farrar Heads Committee.

The directors also urged the President and governmental departments concerned with contracts to be empowered to correct any defects or deficiencies in contracts and to validate them so that claims may be expedited.

The subcommittee of manufacturers which made the recommendations was headed by John F. P. Farrar, president of the Chicago Metal Hose corporation.

The recommendations follow:

1. Congress should enact legislation which will be specific in detailing the conditions and methods of settling war contracts.

2. This legislation should provide that on termination of the contract the government shall advance, within 30 days after claims have been filed, a minimum of 75 per cent of the amount of the claim directly to the prime contractor or the subcontractor, whichever originated the claim, and that if an overpayment is made the excess will be treated as a loan at regular interest rates.

Urges Direct Claims.

3. The claims of subcontractors for advances should be made directly to the government subject to appropriate safeguards.

4. Legislation should be enacted to provide that the President or any governmental department to which contractural powers have been granted should have the power to correct any defects in contracts and to validate them for the expediting of claims.

5. In order to expedite the prompt settlement, on a fair and reasonable basis, of all claims arising from the termination of government contracts the responsibility for settlement should not be confined to a single governmental agency, but should be discharged by the particular procurement agency with which the contract was arranged.

TWO BUILDINGS IN LOOP SOLD BY INSURANCE FIRM

The land and two buildings at the northeast corner of Wabash avenue and Madison street were sold yesterday by the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company, Milwaukee, Wis., to Harry L. Drake, Chicago realty operator, for a reported $1,775,000.

The land is 163 by 101.1 feet. At the corner is a 17 story building in which Capper and Capper, Ltd. has space. Adjoining is a six story building put up for Von Lengerke and Antoine.

Charles F. Hough, attorney for Drake, said the purchase, which is subject to a $1,446,750 purchase money mortgage, was made for investment. O. A. Reiners represented the insurance company.

Blood, who is chairman of a special committee of the National Association of Manufacturers which as been studying distribution, is expected to speak on the findings of the committee.

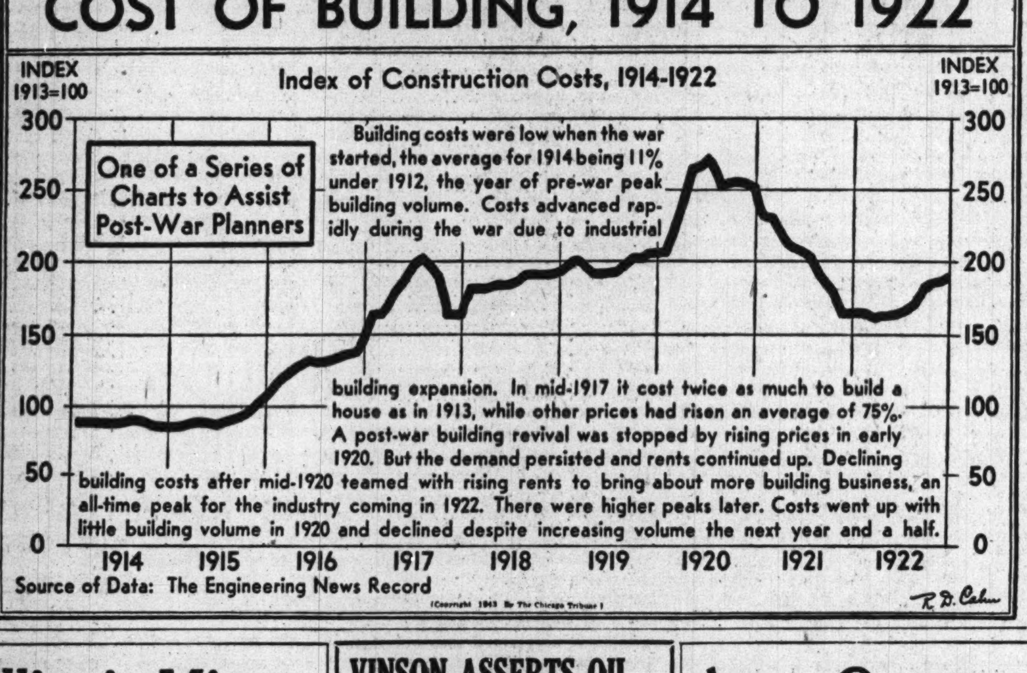
COST OF BUILDING, 1914 TO 1922



Building costs were low when the war started, the average for 1914 being 11% under 1912, the year of pre-war peak building volume. Costs advanced rapidly during the war due to industrial building expansion. In mid-1917 it cost twice as much to build a house as in 1913, while other prices had risen an average of 75%. A post-war building revival was stopped by rising prices in early 1920. But the demand persisted and rents continued up. Declining building costs after mid-1920 teamed with rising rents to bring about more building business, an all-time peak for the industry coming in 1922. There were higher peaks later. Costs went up with little building volume in 1920 and declined despite increasing volume the next year and a half.

Illinois Mine Strikes Total Rises to 4,100

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The ranks of striking coal miners in Illinois were more than doubled yesterday as approximately 4,100 stayed out of the pits because of their dissatisfaction over the lack of a contract. In the first Illinois strikes Friday 1,400 walked out.

The strikers are members of the United Mine Workers' union, whose proposed contract was being considered by the war labor board.

Four mines in Franklin county, employing 2,200 men, produced no coal. About 250 miners left their jobs at the Crescent Mining company's La Marsh mine, No. 1, near Peoria; 575 quit at Peabody mine, No. 47, at Harco, and 250 were out at the Consolidated Coal company's Jefferson mine, No. 20, in Jefferson county. Two of the three shipping mines in Williamson county were idle as 375 men struck. Unworked Franklin county shafts were the Old Ben, No. 8; Peabody, No. 18, and Franklin County Coal company's No. 5 and No. 7.

Promises Effort in Alabama.

The Valier Coal Mining company's mine, idle Friday, resumed operations, but the crew numbered only 106 of the 600 employes.

In Washington, UMW officials agreed to make an intensive effort to get striking Alabama miners back to work tomorrow after Chairman William H. Davis of the WLB told them that unless production was resumed it appeared that the board would have to refer the case to the White House.

Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the UMW, and William Mitch, Alabama district president, said they had been leaving nothing undone to end the wildcat walkout by 20,000 Alabama miners. More than 35,000 are out in all states.

The board had called union officials to explain why the miners had not obeyed a WLB order of last Saturday to return to work.

Kennedy and Mitch appeared in the absence of John L. Lewis, UMW president, who is ill at his home in Alexandria, Va.

Foundries Plant Struck.

East St. Louis, Ill., Oct. 23 [Special].—A wildcat strike by 30 furnace men at the East St. Louis works of the American Steel foundries today made 1,800 employes idle. Officials of the CIO United Steel Workers' local union said the strike was unauthorized and "the work of hoodlums." They said the furnace men quit in protest against a recent government ruling that gave production workers retroactive wage increases to equalize their pay with those of furnace men.

WLB Takes Jurisdiction.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—The war labor board tonight took jurisdiction over a strike at the Sheffield Steel company plant in Houston, Tex., and telegraphed a back-to-work order to 1,100 AFL construction workers. The strikers, out since Oct. 11, charged that companies building a new plant were hiring nonunion workers.

TEXTILE OR RELATED BUSINESS

A well-established concern in the Chicago area is interested in securing the rights to manufacture and market textile or related products under the trade names of these products. However, they are not considering anything in the clothing field.

They would be interested in impregnated products for the heavy goods or consumer markets. They would be interested in laminated textile products made by the low-pressure molding process . . . or in flame-resistant or mildewproof fabrics.

They would be interested in products used in the protection of machinery such as rust-proofing or a similar process. This concern is willing to consider either outright purchase of rights or operation under a license. If this proposition interests you, write at once to . . .

VINSON ASSERTS OIL PRICE HIKE BILL IS HARMFUL PRECEDENT

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—Thru Fred M. Vinson, director of economic stabilization, the administration struck back today at attempts in congress to raise price ceilings on specific basic commodities.

Vinson declared opposition to the bill of Sen. Elmer Thomas [D., Okla.,] to force a 35 cent a barrel increase in crude petroleum prices, contending its enactment would set a "harmful precedent" and open the way for other price-fixing by congress with the result that administrative machinery for control of prices would be destroyed.

"If the congress sets a minimum price for crude oil, there is no reason for it to refrain from similar action with respect to thousands of other commodities," Vinson said in a letter to Chairman Robert F. Wagner [D., N. Y.] of the banking committee, before which the bill is pending.

Sen. Thomas, saying he believed Vinson merely had reflected the views of the President, announced he would seek passage of the legislation anyway.

7 MILLION IDLE 6 MONTHS AFTER WAR PREDICTED

More than seven million men and women face unemployment six months after the war ends, Donald H. Davenport, chief of the employment occupational outlook branch of the department of labor, warned yesterday. He urged careful planning to avoid widespread and prolonged unemployment during the post-war reconversion period. Davenport addressed 150 delegates to the interstate conference of the Illinois and Wisconsin Trade Union leagues in the Hotel Sherman.

Manufacturing may be expected to have a post-war boom, Davenport said, and at the end of the second year may employ 13 million persons, or 2½ more than in any peace time period. Even then, he estimated, 4½ million persons probably will be idle, not counting the 6 million men and women now employed who are expected to withdraw from the labor force because of age, family, or other considerations.

PREDICTS SALES TAX DEMAND IS CERTAIN TO GAIN

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—Creation of new pressure for a retail sales tax is certain, Chairman Walter F. George [D., Ga.] of the senate finance committee said today, as a result of the house ways and means committee's refusal to increase the individual income tax load.

As the house tax framing body deferred until next week a decision on whether to make any changes in the corporate tax structure, George declared the search for additional revenue apparently is narrowing down to new and increased excise taxes.

"I am still of the opinion that a sales tax would not be approved by congress over the active opposition of the treasury department," he added.

Arms Output About Steady in September

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—Arms production, which in August was reported to be getting "its second wind," stayed put in September.

Altho the heavy bomber output gained six per cent, Charles E. Wilson, acting chairman of the war production board, reported tonight that generally munitions manufacture for September "held substantially to the August level," and said the failure to show a percentage gain "indicates more than anything else that we are approaching our production ceiling."

Production Value Gains.

The monthly WPB production report showed a two per cent gain in September over August in airplanes and aircraft guns, ammunition, and related equipment, on a dollar value basis. Airplanes alone went up four per cent in value of production, altho the number of planes produced dropped to 7,598, or 14 less than the August total. Airborne signal equipment increased six per cent.

Aircraft progress in October was not covered in Wilson's report, but WPB sources said that figures for half of the month indicated a 5 per cent gain in weight and satisfactory increase in numbers, "heading toward 8,000." These preliminary figures, however, frequently require revision.

Slack Taken Up.

"September's performance reemphasizes the difficulty of achieving substantial successive month-to-month increases," Wilson said. "The slack, which permitted sharp gains during 1942, has now been taken up. Continued increases have been registered in most of the important groups and, while the gains have been smaller, the consistency of these gains has been encouraging."

Ammunition, which made a poor showing in August, registered a three per cent gain in September.

BRITAIN EASES EXCHANGE CURB FOR AMERICANS

LONDON, Oct. 23 (AP).—The relaxation of war time exchange controls, permitting Americans and other nonresidents of the United Kingdom to send home about 6 million pounds [about 24 million dollars] from blocked sterling accounts was announced today in a treasury order.

Nonresidents will be allowed to export interest and dividends from capital invested in this country, proceeds from maturing or redeemed securities, and income from legacies invested in British securities. Those wishing to change from one sterling security to another also will be given a wider range of investments.

PONDER MEANS OF BRACING HOG PRICE 'FLOOR'

Industry Believes Support May Fail.

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON.

Discussion of how to bolster the "floor" of $13.75 a hundred pounds for hogs under pressure of large volume at the peak of the movement of spring pigs this winter was renewed at the Chicago stock yards yesterday after many grades had dropped rapidly from the $14.75 ceiling. Last June the market broke thru the "floor" set by the government.

The pork industry also faced the problem of handling the largest volume in its history with the smallest number of experienced employes in many years.

It is not unlawful for packers to buy at less than $13.75, but they are subject to fines and imprisonment if they pay more than the $14.75 ceiling. The war food administration is depending chiefly on use of subsidy payments, not available before, to prevent a break in the floor. Any packer that buys good 200 to 270 pound hogs below the floor will lose its subsidy payment, amounting to $1.30 a hundred pounds, officials explained.

Other Teeth to Be Bared.

The consensus in the stock yards was that an ending of subsidy payments by congress would be the end of the $13.75 floor. However, federal spokesmen said they would be able to bare other "teeth" against any attempt to crack the floor.

Lend-lease buying will be based on live costs of hogs, it was asserted, and any break below the $13.75 level may bring a corresponding cut in prices the government pays for pork, giving no advantage to packers that buy hogs for less.

Should subsidy payments end Jan. 1 the December markets, when volume is heaviest, would not have the "protection" of subsidy money, because payments are made a month late, some packers said. The cost of care and feed for hogs during periods of congestion will be an important market factor, packers said.

Gain May Reach 20 Per Cent.

Most conservative estimates placed the winter hog run at 10 per cent above the record volume handled last winter. Many experts agreed with spokesmen for the war food administration that the increase may be 20 per cent. Estimates of the November to January slaughter under federal inspection ranged from just short of 19 million hogs to almost 21 million.

The preliminary estimates by recognized authorities averaged slightly below 20 million hogs for the three months, or about 6,600,000 per month. Last year the three month total was 17,232,000 and two years ago it was 16,159,000. Top prices touched a low of $13.60 last December, and dipped again to $13.75 in June when the slaughter was 5,649,942 head.

Most winter slaughter estimates were based indirectly on the federal survey showing that 74 million pigs were farrowed last spring, a record crop which compared with the former peak of 61 million in 1942. Two years ago the crop was 49 million. A large part of the spring pig crop usually is marketed during the winter.

Report Wheat Price Ceilings to Be Set Soon

Reports circulated in Washington yesterday asserted that the office of price administration would soon announce price ceilings on wheat. This action was sought to relieve flour millers who are squeezed between ceiling prices on flour and the relatively high prices of wheat.

Representatives of the flour section of the OPA and the Millers National Federation met yesterday in Chicago to discuss the squeeze on millers. The meeting was closed to the press, and Herman Steen, secretary of the trade association, said there would be no announcement here on the various proposals.

Affects Soft Winter Wheat.

The Washington reports were that the ceilings would be imposed on soft red winter wheat, but probably would be followed later by maximums on spring wheat. It would be the first time the OPA used its price fixing power on wheat.

The price stabilization act provides that any ceiling on wheat must be equal either to parity or the highest price paid between Jan. 1 and Sept. 15, 1942, whichever is higher.

Previously flour millers had proposed an increase of one cent a loaf in the price of bread to ease the squeeze, but the OPA plans to give relief by stabilizing the price of wheat, it was said.

Grain Markets Uneven.

Grain futures closed mixed yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade after an early break. Prices rallied on short covering and wheat closed ⅛ cent a bushel higher to ⅛ cent lower. Oats were ¼ cent lower to ⅜ cent higher and rye gained ¼ to ½ cent. Barley closed unchanged to ⅛ cent lower. A large part of the trading was by professional operators, brokers said.

December oats tumbled 1¼ cents early on light selling which found support lacking, but when buying orders appeared there was little for sale and prices rose.

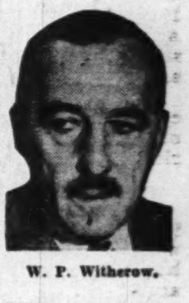
RAPS ATTACKS ON SYNTHETIC RUBBER FUTURE

Witherow Resents Blow at Industry.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 23 [Special].—Attacks on the future of the nation's billion dollar synthetic rubber industry at a time when both war and civilian needs are almost wholly dependent upon its production were deplored in a statement issued here today by William P. Witherow, chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers.



W. P. Witherow.

Witherow is president of the Blaw Knox company which was commissioned to design the standard synthetic plant for the industry and handled procurement and installation of equipment for six of the plants. He asserted that the present controversy over the post-war status of synthetic rubber involves the only dependable source of rubber now available.

F. D. R. Opposes Tariff.

Altho Witherow made no mention of President Roosevelt's announcement last week of opposition to a post-war tariff on natural rubber for the protection of the synthetic industry, his statement was regarded as a protest against the President's slap at the industry's future.

Mr. Roosevelt expressed the hope at a press conference that congress would not place a tariff on rubber for American automobile tires after the war just to keep some synthetic plants going.

The President was quoted as saying he believed in cheap tires and more of them, and the only way to get that is to use the tires that are made by nature. Vice President Henry Wallace also has urged resumption of large scale rubber importation after the war as a means of promoting international relations.

Held Only Hope at Present.

"Quite naturally our synthetic rubber investment conflicts with cartel-controled natural rubber in international trade and politics," Witherow said, "but it is regrettable that this phase of the subject should be given such serious consideration at a time when synthetic rubber seems to be our only hope of keeping this nation on wheels, both in war and at home."

DEPLORES MOVE TO LET NEW U. S. INDUSTRY WANE

Keep Synthetic Rubber, Witherow Advises.

Witherow said that altho synthetic rubber may or may not be here to stay, it at least is here. The man who sees his present tires wearing out has built his hopes on the synthetic rubber industry and knows that the military and his own future needs are dependent on it, he asserted, otherwise the public would not have been asked to finance, or industry to build our billion dollar synthetic facility in such short order.

Predicts Crude Will be Costly.

"Our post-war rubber problem will not be simply a matter of overnight transition from plentiful but expensive synthetic rubber to plentiful and cheap natural rubber," Witherow said. "I am of the opinion that natural rubber is likely to be slow and inadequate in supply as well as costly in price for some time following allied reconquest of the established for eastern sources for crude rubber."

He said several years probably would be required to rebuild the world's stockpile of natural rubber, and predicted research in the meantime will both improve the quality and reduce the cost of the synthetic product.

Says It Will Slow Research.

"Will not the talk of scuttling this youthful industry discourage the companies engaged in its development from carrying forward aggressively the research it needs and to which it is entitled?" he asked. "Our concern should be to evaluate the future world rubber situation with justice for all, to produce the maximum of synthetic rubber and to secure the vital minimum of natural rubber until the situation resolves itself."

TAX SAVINGS.

Tax cancelation provisions in the current tax payment act of 1943 may offer an opportunity for substantial tax savings for investors and others whose 1942 income tax was substantially larger than the indicated tax for 1943.

To place taxpayers on a pay-as-you-go basis and yet avoid requiring the payment of two years' taxes in one, the new law provided for the cancelation of 75 per cent of either the 1942 or the 1943 tax, whichever is the lesser.

The taxpayer whose indicated tax for 1943 will be less than that for 1942 has an incentive, therefore, to realize whatever income or profits he can before the end of the year, up to the point where his 1943 tax will approximate that for 1942. At most he will actually pay only 25 per cent of the tax ordinarily due on this additional income or profit, the other 75 per cent being canceled.

The possible saving is even larger for the taxpayer with unrealized capital gains. The tax on net long term capital gains is limited to a maximum of 25 per cent, and is less for those whose income subject to surtax is below $18,000. When the 75 per cent cancelation can also be applied, the maximum tax rate on capital gains would be one-fourth of 25 per cent, or 6¼ per cent. Thus, the holder of securities of other capital assets could realize net long term gains equal to four times the amount of the excess of the 1942 tax over the 1943 tax, and his tax on such gains would not be more than 6¼ per cent.

It has been suggested that the taxpayer who has no capital profits to realize could endeavor to take in other types of income before the end of 1943. A bonus or commissions paid in December, 1943, for example, would be taxed at only one-fourth the rate applied to these payments if made in 1944, assuming, of course, that the taxpayer is eligible to apply the 75 per cent cancelation to this additional income.

Since the purpose of these measures would be to reduce the over-all tax bill for 1942-'43, the taxpayer might deliberately increase his 1943 tax to such an extent that it would moderately exceed the 1942 tax, in which case the 75 per cent cancelation would apply to the 1942 bill. This would be done, of course, only because such action would afford the greatest tax savings on the basis of the taxpayer's circumstances.

Nickel Plate Plans to Call Erie and Western Bonds

Cleveland, O., Oct. 23 (AP).—The Nickel Plate railroad announced today it would call for redemption its outstanding Lake Erie and Western extended 3 per cent bonds, totaling $4,933,000, due in 1947, if the interstate commerce commission approves an application asking authority to issue $2,025,000 of equipment trust certificates.

Willing Winnie began selling at once, and she's happy now because she's won security, a fuller purse, personality and friends!

DAY by DAY on the FARM by BEN MARKLAND

Oct. 23, 1943.

THE affinity between a farmer and his trees is so close that landowners find themselves constantly comparing species, noting the advantages of one type of elm over another, wondering why this maple thrives while another in almost similar surroundings seems unhealthy, and in general watching out for the welfare of the saplings and patriarchs of the woods, fields, and lawns.

The men on the Wheaton farm and the Fox River farm have had trees on their minds during the last few weeks, and the main subjects of discussion have been autumn defoliation and leaf coloration. In and adjacent to one of the farm yards, for example, are many American elm trees. Most of these have lost their leaves, but two have retained them and are almost as green as in midsummer. Inasmuch as all of the elms are in excellent condition, the farm residents have been wondering why these two have retained their leaves so much longer than the others. In addition, a nearby sycamore tree is retaining its leaves excellently and in the last few years has grown faster than trees of its type usually do.

On Water Main Route.

These three trees are on the route of a water main, and one theory about their condition was that the main may have sprung a slight leak, providing them with a beneficial supply of extra water. The water gauge discounts this theory, however, since the pressure would be shown on the gauge if there were any such leak.

The farm gardener believes that the elms and the sycamore are thriving because of a lawn operation completed four years ago. At that time the lawn was regraded, with a foot of rich black dirt being placed over a foundation of 6 inches of coarse gravel. For four years the tree roots have been reaching up toward the new lawn surface. While the fibrous roots were in or below the layer of gravel the trees showed their lack of water absorption facilities [fibrous roots] by losing their leaves at the usual time in the fall. Now, however, the roots have reached the layer of black dirt just below ground level. Thousands of new fibrous roots have developed in this soil to feed the two elm trees with an abundance of water and valuable fertilizing elements.

Sycamore Tree Thrives.

The sycamore tree also is a beneficiary of the lawn grading. It is located at the base of a six foot terrace, and when the lawn and flower gardens are watered, the natural drainage route is down the terrace and toward the sycamore.

The maple trees which line the north bank of the Fox river on the Yorkville farm are getting the same sort of drainage, this time from Nature rather than from lawn sprinklers. As a result they provide the most attractive autumn coloration on either farm, with water which flows from adjacent highlands nourishing their roots and giving them the sustenance for a longer and more colorful season.

★ The GARDEN ★

TWO easily obtainable containers for outdoor storage of root crops are common barrels and large drainage tiles. These can be sunk into high ground in the garden or elsewhere in the yard. If a barrel is used it should be tilted at a 45 degree angle or buried on its side with the bottom half below ground level, since a barrel placed perpendicularly accepts too much rain and snow. It also is advisable to equip the barrels with a lid which can be closed and covered with straw and dirt after severe weather strikes.

If a drain pipe is used, an ideal size is 18 inches in diameter and 30 inches deep. Such a tile will hold about three bushels of root crops and apples. The hole should be dug 6 inches deeper than the length of the tile. Four to six bricks can be placed on end in the bottom of the hole, and a circular piece of galvanized wire placed over the bricks. Then the tile can be placed on the bricks, with the top rim of the tile about 2 inches above ground level.

Four or 5 inches of sand or gravel should be placed in the bottom of the hole to increase drainage.

After the vegetables are placed in the tile, a waterproof cover should be placed over the container, and in severe weather additional soil and straw can be placed over the tile to prevent freezing of the foods.

According to my judgment the best business in the United States today is raising alfalfa and winter vegetables in the great Winter Garden District located southwest of San Antonio where it doesn't rain too much; has rich soil; plenty of water to irrigate; plenty of the cheapest labor in the United States; 12 months' growing season. The land is still cheap because only a small part of it is in cultivation that can be cultivated. Write for proof.

Pinched
$20 FOR 30 DAYS
COSTS ONLY 60c

The common-sense solution to any money shortage is a short-term loan. It allows a "breathing spell" in which to adjust expenses to fit income. Right now, for instance, living costs are up and it is becoming increasingly difficult to make ends meet. A loan from Commonwealth will "tide you over" until you get adjusted to these new war time conditions. Monthly rate 3% on balance of $150 or less, and 2½% on that part of the unpaid balance over $150.

CIVIL COURIERS: UNSUNG HEROES OF HOME FRONT

Drop Regular Jobs to Keep Plants Rolling.

Hundreds of doctors, lawyers, business men, laborers, and other civilians who have the ability and the nerve to take off in lightweight airplanes at a moment's notice are the unpublicized heroes who help keep Illinois war production lines moving steadily. They are the emergency couriers of the civil air patrol.

The courier service was organized late in 1941, after an incident at the Diamond Wire and Cable company showed the need for such a setup.

The Diamond company, which then had an army contract, had a breakdown on one of its diesel engines and the management, in desperation, appealed to the Chicago Heights CAP squadron. The parts were delivered to the plant the same day and it went back into operation.

Regular Service Set Up.

After that the Illinois wing of the CAP began a regular courier service for emergency use. Today war plants which have made contracts with the CAP have the use of 36 airports scattered thruout the state. Out of them operate 200 planes. The pilots are CAP members who have agreed to leave their regular jobs when called.

Capt. Jack Christensen, engineering officer for the Illinois CAP wing, cited the example of the factory in Kansas City, Mo., which suddenly needed certain radio equipment to keep production rolling. A CAP plane picked up the equipment in a town in Illinois at 8 a. m. and flew it 300 miles to an air line connection in St. Louis, Mo., which relayed it to Kansas City. It arrived at 2 p. m. the same day, whereas ordinary transportation facilities would have taken two days. There are hundreds of similar instances, he said.

The planes travel at an average speed of 90 miles per hour and carry a pay load of approximately 300 pounds. The pilots receive $8 per day, which in some cases barely pays their expenses. All personnel carried on the missions is covered by accident insurance.

Maj. C. W. H. Schuck is commander of the Illinois wing, which has arranged for courier service at the Elmhurst, La Grange, Harlem, Oak Lawn, Franklin Park, and Rubinkam airports in the Chicago area.

5 AWARDED $100 BONDS AS PRIZES IN 3D LOAN DRIVE

Five men and women who bought war bonds and gave the best reasons for doing it on Sept. 30, the treasury department's Sacrifice day, were awarded $100 war bonds yesterday by the State Street council at a luncheon in the Republic building restaurant. The council offered the prizes in conjunction with its State street arsenal, a display of weapons, in behalf of the third war loan drive.

Mrs. Mary Ann Smith, 4435 Berkeley avenue, one of the winners, said she is buying bonds because "my father is missing in action and I hope this may help bring him home alive." W. B. Elson Jr., 35 South Clark street, asked a prize winning question: "How can a person live with himself and sleep at night without at least doing this much?"

Mrs. Ethel F. Barron, 520 East Seminary avenue, Wheaton, was awarded a bond because, "my love for America supercedes my love for myself; because anxiety for my loved relatives is greater than my anxiety for personal needs." The two other prize winners are William C. Philips, 15 South Wabash avenue, who said he buys bonds because Hitler doesn't want him to, and Mrs. Laura E. Fairclough, 3827 West End avenue. Mrs. Fairclough said she buys bonds because she feels she "must keep faith with the boys on the battle fronts, in hospitals, in prison camps, or sleeping their last sleep in some foreign land."

CITY OWNERSHIP IS UP TO PEOPLE: HARRIS TO KELLY

Surface Lines Price Set, Says Veteran Banker.

BY WILLIAM SHINNICK.

Occasionally, in the discussion of Mayor Kelly's plan for municipal ownership and combination of Chicago's main local transportation lines, the phrase "traction magnate" has bobbed up.

That phrase once had a connotation that was unmistakable: a strong man was sitting back, cracking a financial whip and making the straphanger squeeze into bad transportation. The crowding is still here. The mayor has not overstressed it. But the traction magnate is nobody more than a bondholder or a stockholder in one of the three companies—bus, street car, and elevated—which are proposed for unification.

First Mortgages Pay.

Some of the bondholders have good securities. They are the first mortgage bondholders of the surface lines. Since 1907 they have been collecting 5 per cent interest on some 72 million dollars of bonds. They have been paid off, as to principal, the difference between their holdings and 100 million dollars which was the original amount of the issue.

Junior bondholders of the surface lines and all bondholders of the elevated have received no interest for years. Their securities are not very good as things stand.

The senior CSL mortgage holders are the most powerful financial group in the local traction setup. Their prospects of getting their interest this year and next year are good, and it's not much use looking farther ahead than that. The operating company is in a sound financial position and has 30 million dollars in cash that would be available for improvements.

Price Set, Says Harris.

Albert W. Harris, veteran banker, represents the majority of the first mortgage bondholders. He doesn't act the part of a traction magnate. Harris seldom talks for publication; but he did talk a little last week about the mayor's plan. He said in effect that if the people wanted municipal ownership they could have it, and that there was a price already set on the surface lines.

This referred to the 20 year franchise of the lines, which expired in 1927. Unable to get a new franchise, the properties were put into receivership. They are still there and the mayor is following a traditional Chicago attitude in fighting to keep the surface lines out of anything but a unified reorganization.

Harris sold the public the 100 million dollars in bonds in 1907 and the money was used to rehabilitate the street car system of that time. It purchased many of the cars that are still rolling along the streets.

400 ENGINEERS MEET TODAY ON POST-WAR PLANS

Construction of public works after the war, with emphasis on airports, will be discussed by some 400 federal, state, and city engineers at the 49th annual conference of the American Public Works association opening today in Hotel Sherman and continuing thru Wednesday. The members also will give attention to war time maintenance and operating difficulties.

William H. Spencer, regional war man power commission, will speak at the first formal luncheon of the conference tomorrow noon. Lloyd Johnson, Chicago commissioner of streets and electricity, will be the principal speaker at tomorrow's general session on streets and highways. Dr. Charles E. Merriam, professor emeritus of political science at the University of Chicago, will speak at a dinner Tuesday night.

Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, administrator of the federal works agency, and Dr. Willard Wright of the United States public health service, are others on the program. Loran D. Gayton, assistant city engineer of Chicago, will receive a veterans' award, at the dinner Tuesday night.

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks department will answer questions about the draft and military service, both in the daily columns and by mail, if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are sent with the queries.]

MESS OFFICERS.

The United States marine corps indicates openings for men between 25 and 40 years of age who can qualify as specialist officers in mess management. Candidates should have had past experience as chef or steward and be familiar with commissary detail, food costs, preparation of menus and food grading. Ability to instruct cooks and bakers is also a requisite. Selected candidates will be assigned to mess supervision, inspection, preparation, and serving of proper menus, and the enforcement of regulations pertaining to the distribution, preparation, allocation, and conservation of foods. Previous military experience is not necessary. A college education is desirable but not mandatory. Minor physical defects may be waived at the discretion of the marine corps. Apply Marine Officer Procurement District, room 1170, Board of Trade building, Chicago.

C. A. writes: "I have a son who will be 18 years old next month and will register for the draft. He attended summer school and now is in the last half of the senior year and will graduate in January if he isn't called. How can he get a short deferment?"

ANSWER: If he should receive an induction notice before he graduates, he should request in writing a stay of induction from his board so he may graduate.

M. J. A. asks: "Is there any possibility of getting into the women's marine corps reserve as an officer candidate? I have five years of professional experience in addition to my college degree."

ANSWER: Yes, there are openings temporarily for a limited number of applicants who possess unusual ability in a specialized field which can be used advantageously by the marine corps and for the next few days the Chicago marine corps procurement office will give consideration to and select candidates for these openings. If you are interested you should make immediate application at room 1170, Board of Trade building. Ordinarily most women officers in the women marine corps come up thru the ranks. By following this route, a great many women who lack the necessary educational qualifications for direct appointment can become officers after completing several months of enlisted service and then undergoing officer training.

M. E. Z. writes: "My son is serving in a near-by foreign land. He is with the army air transport command. His wife is expecting a baby in November and we are wondering if she must come to the United States for its birth in order for the child to be a citizen?"

ANSWER: No. Section 601, subchapter II of the nationality act of 1940 provides that . . . "A child born abroad whose American parent is at the time of the child's birth residing abroad solely or principally in the employ of the United States government . . . is a citizen."

CHICAGO FLAT-TOP—A DAY ON THE WOLVERINE

By WALTER SIMMONS

EARLY IN THE MORNING and late at night you can see them at anchor, two flat-toppers lying off Chicago's Navy pier. They are the U. S. S. Wolverine and the U. S. S. Sable, the navy's land-locked training aircraft carriers on Lake Michigan. Within little more than a year these craft—which technically are not true carriers at all, since they do not have or need hangar decks—have trained thousands of carrier pilots for navy combat service.

This happens to be the story of the Wolverine and her unluckiest, most incredible day—a day that still makes her crewmen shake their heads and mutter, "Black Tuesday." It was a day——

But the story properly begins when the Commerce chugged away from the foot of Randolph street early that morning. The Commerce is a rugged, peppery little work boat with a crane planted on one end of her splintery deck. Every morning she puts out to the Wolverine, carrying officers, men, and supplies from shore. At night she brings officers and liberty parties ashore again.

"She's a lady all right, but not a very young one," said an officer, speaking of the Wolverine. "The first flat-topper to sail inland waters. Used to be the Seeandbee, one of those Great Lakes luxury ships, owned by the Cleveland and Buffalo Transit company. Like statistics? I can give you a few about her. She was built in 1913, of 6,400 gross tons, powered for 20 knots. After this war started they took just 80 days to strip off her five upper decks and make a training carrier out of her. The Sable was commissioned later—last May, to be exact. She's a little longer and about 10 years younger."

The nose of the Commerce banged slantwise against the side of the Wolverine.

An hour later, while some metropolitan office workers were just getting out of bed, the Wolverine was plowing steadily into a 29 knot wind a dozen miles off Chicago's jagged sky line. Her crash boat, the little cabin cruiser Lark, tagged along respectfully behind. It was a middling rough day on the lake. The wind had a chill bite; the water was a dull green, and choppy.

Lookouts had picked up planes at 8½ miles, and Capt. C. L. Lee, the 41-year-old four-striper who commands the Wolverine, smiled as he noted the wind gradually increasing its force. (Continued on page eleven.)

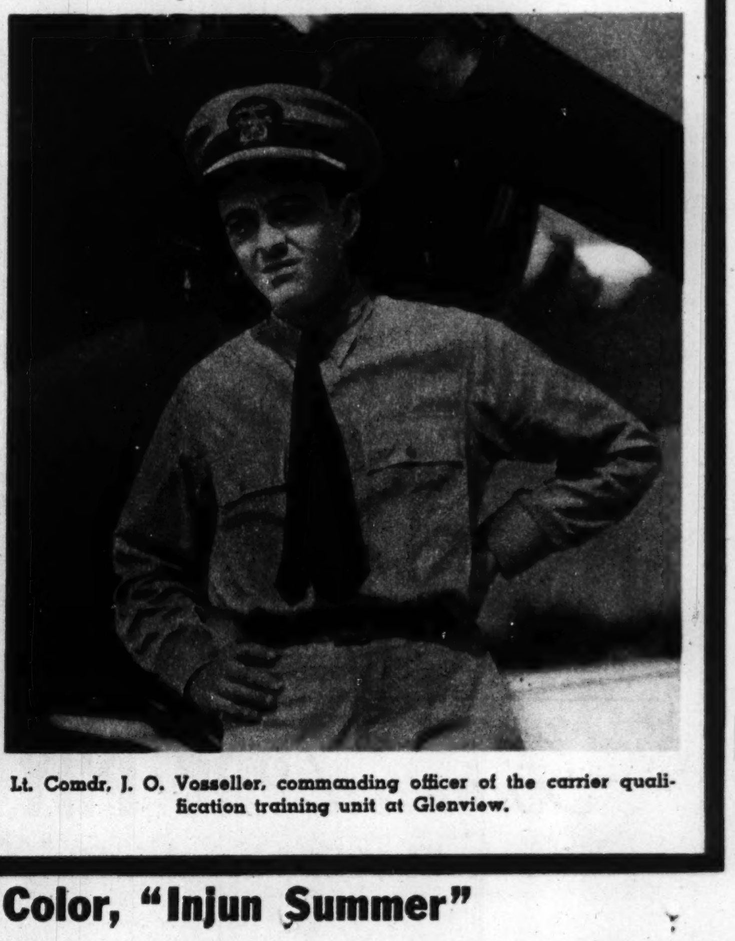
"But the bomber's great engine had lifted it into the air by the time the plane had passed the control island."



Lt. Comdr. J. O. Vosseller, commanding officer of the carrier qualification training unit at Glenview.

When Illinois Fell for a Pioneer New Deal

By DELOS AVERY

WHEN Illinois was just a foolish young thing in her teens, about a hundred years ago, she was wooed by a bevy of dreamy politicians whose intentions, they assured her, were honorable in the extreme.

They loved her very much indeed, they said, and asked nothing more than the privilege of continuing to be her house guests while they guided her gently along the fragrant path which leads to the more abundant life.

The more abundant life, they pointed out, is a very nice thing to have. Once you try it you wonder how you ever got along without it. It's so convenient.

"You merely order whatever you want," they explained, "and charge it."

At first Illinois listened with some misgivings, troubled by shadowy memories of depressing maxims she had heard somewhere, such as "A penny saved is a penny earned" and "You can't get something for nothing." Of course she would love to have the more abundant life—a chicken in every pot, a quart of milk on every doorstep, two horses in every stable, and a buggy ride on every moonlit evening. But just the same——

"Cost much?" she inquired timidly and hopefully. "Darling, forget it!" said the politicians. "It won't cost you a dime—aside from a small carrying charge—just tell the man to put everything on the cuff—let the future take care of it. You're potentially rich, dearie, and it's your duty to live up to your manifest destiny."

Tempted as she was, Illinois still had a lingering doubt or two, which she hoped her starry eyed suitors would find a way to dissolve. So in a quavering voice of mingled hope and fear, she uttered a single word:

"Taxes?"

"Don't be silly, Ily," they all replied impatiently. "The taxes will pay themselves. Your profits on your debts will cover everything, including the taxes, and you'll have money left in the bank."

"Are you quite sure?" she faltered.

"Of course we're sure," they told her. "Sweetheart, we've planned it that way."

What they had planned that way was a program of "improvements." It called for a crazy, mazy cobweb of unnecessary railways and waterways darting left and right, up hill and down, forming Z-patterns and U-patterns and curlicues all over the land, blithely altering their course to appease the whims of any village whose votes might be needed. And any reluctant community that didn't want a railroad but did want its share of the gravy could take its pro rata in cash. No wonder the thing sailed triumphantly thru the legislature. Even Abraham Lincoln voted "Aye." So did Stephen A. Douglas, for that matter.

And that is the way Miss Illinois, being 19 years old on the deciding day, in 1837, fell for the Planned Non-Economy. In the end, like the honest girl she always was at heart, she paid and paid, and got nothing but The Plan—and a lesson.

Chicago in 1832, before Illinois launched its visionary scheme of prosperity. (From an old drawing showing Wolfe's point at the juncture of the two branches of the Chicago river.)

"It would be better," says Thomas Ford in his brief and bitter "History of Illinois," "if politicians could reverse the order of their existence, come into the world in their old age, and go out when they are young. As it is, a man comes into the world without knowledge, experience or capacity to think, and before he gets them he is required to make up his opinions upon all grave questions which are to affect himself or his country."

Ford was the state's seventh governor, taking office just in time to inherit the troubles caused by The Plan. It was he who diagnosed the disease, prescribed the remedy, and persuaded the unhappy patient to swallow the drastic dose.

Here is his diagnosis as given in his "History":

". . . It was believed that the people were anxious for a system of internal improvements; that the system would be of great utility in multiplying population and wealth; that the cost of it could be easily guessed at without previous surveys; that the system would cause a great deal of land to be entered, and increase the land tax, a part of which could go to pay interest; that the tolls on parts of the roads as fast as they were completed would yield the interest on their cost; that the water power made by improvements on the rivers would rent for a large sum; that lands were to be entered by the state and resold at a higher price, and that no great financial skill would be required in any future legislature to provide for the paying of interest on the loans and carry the system to completion without burdening the people. . . ."

Sweet dreams! Everything for nothing—a paradise to be created "without burdening the people"—every man a king without waiting for a Huey Long to arrange the coronation—let 'em eat cake and have it too—pumpkins transformed into four horse coaches without waiting for a fairy godmother from Hyde Park or Shangri-La.

"Roads and improvements were proposed everywhere," says Ford, "to enlist every section of the state. Three or four efforts were made to pass a smaller system, and when these were defeated, the bills would be amended by the addition of other roads until a majority was obtained for it. . . . Thus was the whole state bought up and bribed to approve the most senseless and disastrous policy that ever crippled the energies of a growing country . . . a whole people becoming infatuated, adopting a most ruinous policy and continuing it until the whole system tumbled about their ears. . . ."

Money? Borrow it. Borrow some in Chicago, more in New York, the rest in London. London, of course, would want a higher rate of interest and would take the bonds only at a discount, say 9 per cent or so. But no matter. Whatever the cost might be, it could be ignored because the profits would wipe it out. Why pay attention to the silly old dollar sign at all?

Stock was to be issued, too. Naturally. Everybody likes to buy stock because that's the easiest way in the world to get rich next week or the week after. Simple matter of paying one price and selling for a better one. Ford derisively reports:

"It was confidently believed that the stock would command a premium of 10 per cent, which would swell the interest fund. It was also expected the stock in the banks would yield enough to pay interest on the bank bonds and a surplus besides, and that in fact the system would be self-acting and self-sustaining, provide for its own liquidation and payment, and enrich the state treasury in the bargain."

"I mention these calculations," Ford continues, "all of which so signally failed, as a warning to all theoretical, visionary schemers in public affairs. Let posterity remember it and engrave it upon their hearts as a lesson of wisdom."

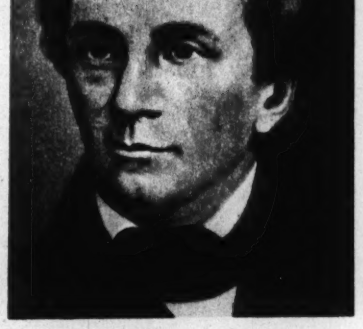
But some folks have to learn that sort of lesson more than once—and Illinois was that way. Ford describes an earlier experience:

"In the year 1828, and afterward, the policy of selling the school lands and borrowing the school fund was adopted. From the very first organization of the state government, the legislature had been too fearful of its popularity to provide adequate revenues by taxation.

". . . It so happened that congress had donated to the state a township of land for a seminary of learning; 3 per cent of the net proceeds of the sale of public land, and the 16th section in every township, for the support of common schools. . . . This was a most magnificent provision for education. The 16th sections, amounting to nearly a million acres, are destined to be worth a large sum of money. [Ford's book was written in 1847 and published in 1854.] . . . Before the end of this generation, it is to be feared that, under the system of selling, and then lending out the price, most frequently on personal security, there will be no trace or vestige of this beneficent donation remaining either in money or lands. . . ."

Ford cites and then repudiates the sciolistic arguments by which the lawmakers tried to justify their folly. Then he observes acidly:

"It has been often the case in an Illinois legislature that a majority of the members, for secret and selfish reasons of their own, first resolve upon a measure and then invent the reasons to be given to the public for it afterward."



Gov. Thomas Ford

The school land folly and the "internal improvement" tragedy had both passed into history by the time Ford, in 1842, was inaugurated as governor. His predecessor, Thomas Carlin, in a farewell message to the general assembly, had described the situation as a "muddle."

"Like the good locofoco he was," writes Theodore Calvin Pease in his "Centennial History of Illinois," Carlin "detailed in meager, bewildered paragraphs the steps of the state's downfall."

("Locofoco" is a good dictionary word which has meant "Democrat" since 1835.)

No matter about the "steps of the downfall." The question when Ford stepped in was what to do.

There were plenty of people who, seeing no hope, frankly favored the easy and deadly plunge into the abyss of repudiation. Just tell the world, "All right, we owe the money and we haven't got it, and that's that." It would mean the suicide of credit, but—so what? It would mean dishonor, but many a bankrupt has found that endurable.

Governor Ford, however, was not that kind. Historian Pease, after mentioning the "locofoco" message of the hopeless Carlin, says:

"No stronger contrast to this message can be imagined than the inaugural of Ford. By the openness and sincerity with which it discussed the state's plight it carried conviction of the honesty of its statements and proposals. The frankness with which it coupled the admission of the justness of the state debt with the need for patience on the part of the creditors showed that the backwoods judge (that is what Ford had been before his election as governor) had found instinctively the method of address that wins the confidence and support of men of affairs."

Ford began by telling the people exactly how much their debt was—not in round figures but down to the penny. It was $15,187,348.71.

Ford itemized it. He said that the people of Illinois intended to pay it. He didn't know how many years it would take, but they would do it. He kicked the repudiationists downstairs—at least figuratively. To prove the people's good faith he cited the fact that only a year earlier they had taxed themselves to the ouch degree to pay the interest.

"The main thing with which the world can justly reproach us," he said, "is that we were visionary and reckless; that without sober deliberation we jumped headlong into ambitious schemes of public aggrandizement which were not justifiable by our resources. . . ."

This was blunt speech and he made it blunter. He pointed out that when foolish loans are made the blame is not solely with the borrower. The lender, too, has responsibility, for he ought to know better. He denied that the creditors were free from reproach, and he said:

"They, as men of intelligence sufficient for the proper management of large capital, ought as well as ourselves to have foreseen our future want of ability, and the constant catastrophe which our common error has produced."

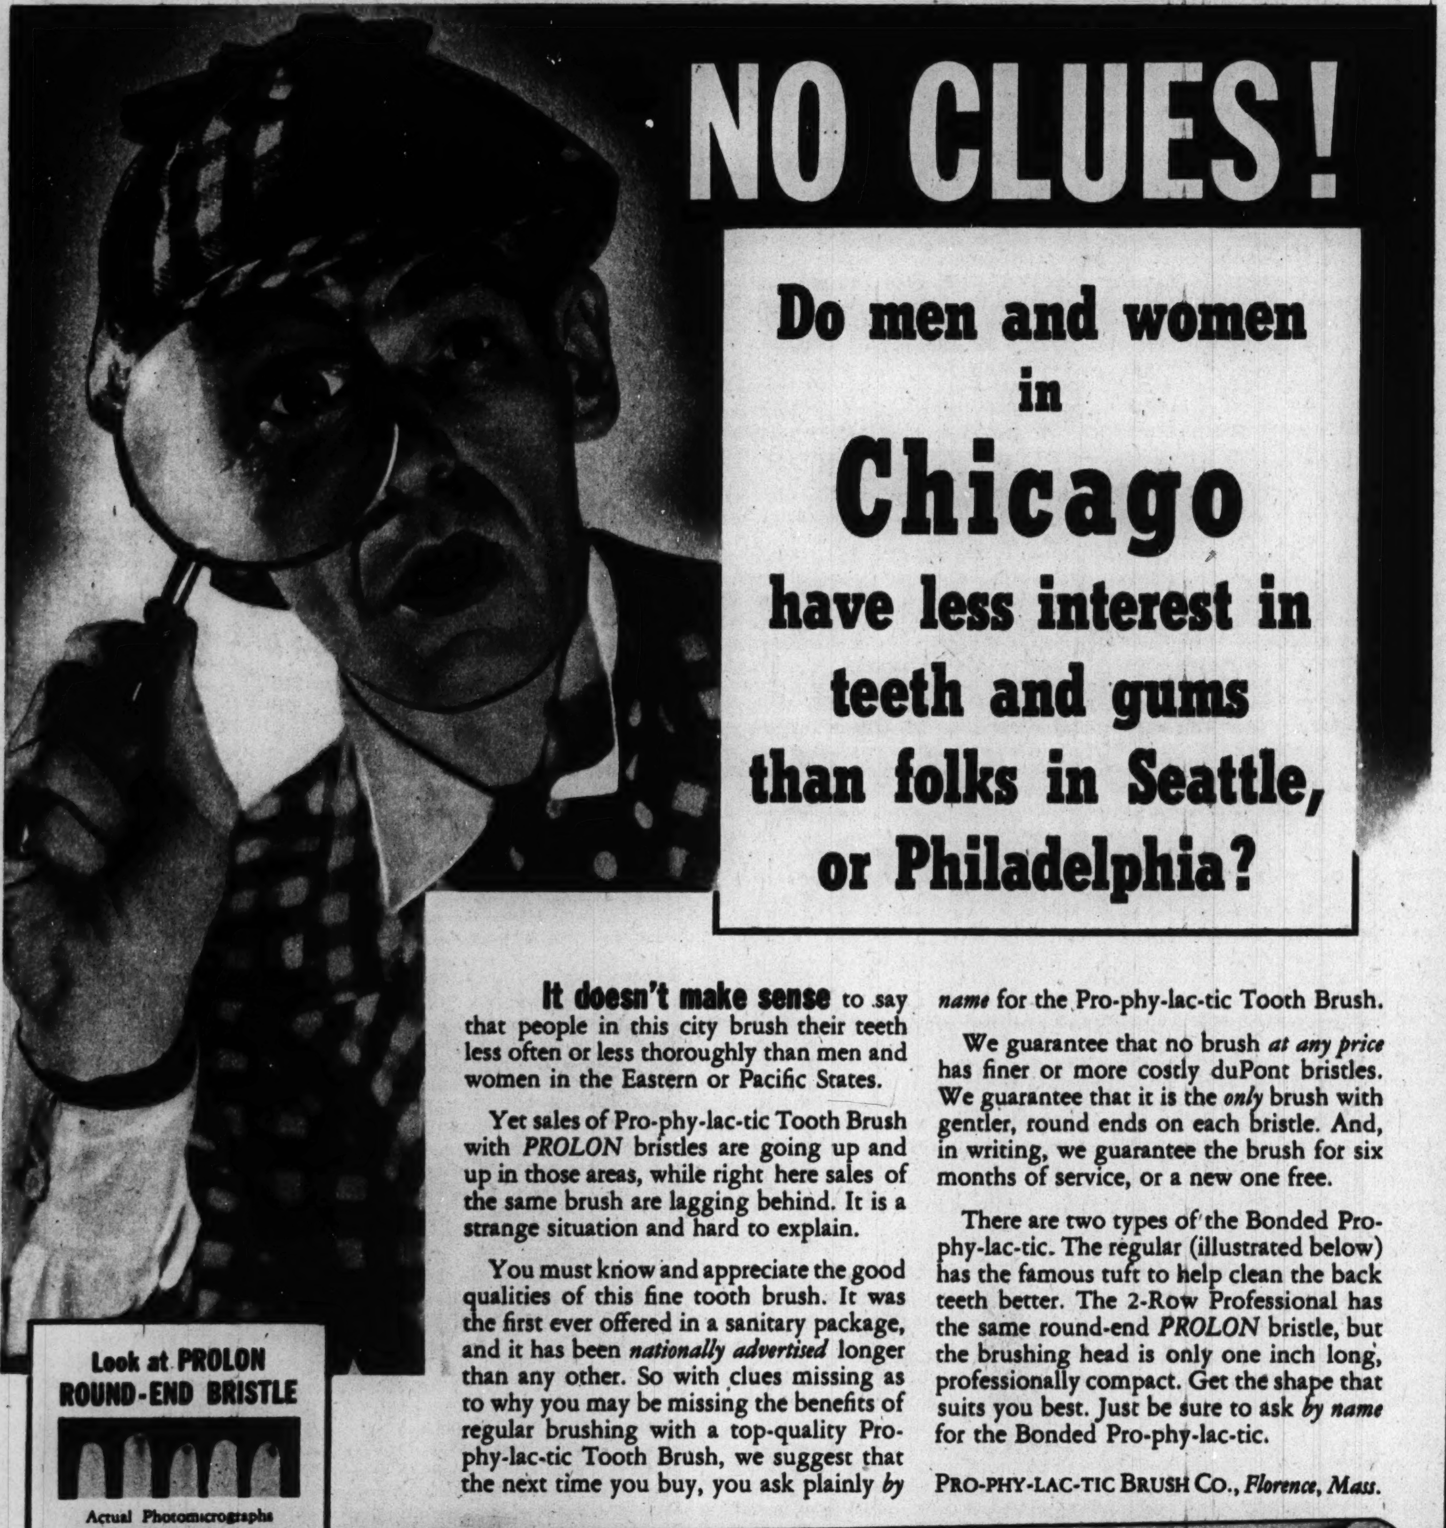
He was against any such drastic step as trying to pay everything quickly by taxing, because with taxes fixed at an impossible rate the creditors would soon find themselves dealing with "a depopulated and ruined state." The debt could be paid only, he said, by "the people who are here, the inhabitants of the land." Every wise creditor knows he must protect an honest debtor to protect himself. Here is what Ford proposed:

"Let it be known in the first place that no oppressive and exterminating taxation is to be resorted to; in the second, we must convince our creditors and the world that the disgrace of repudiation is not countenanced. . . . I would therefore recommend to the general assembly to speak on this subject in the most decisive manner, so as to give every assurance that in due time we will tax ourselves, according to our ability, to pay our debts. The consequence will be that our creditors, who are persons of power and influence, instead of reproaching us and getting up a moral crusade against us, as against a confederated band of unprincipled swindlers, with a view to coerce us to do our duty, will be directly interested in doing us all the good in their power."

As a result of that message and what followed it, there is now to be found in the Encyclopaedia Britannica in its article on Illinois this paragraph:

"Thru the efforts of Gov. Thomas Ford, a movement to repudiate was defeated and a plan was adopted by which the entire debt could be reduced without excessive taxation, and by 1880 practically the entire debt was extinguished."

By 1880! That is 38 years to pay for $15,187,346.71 worth of a fairy story about the abundant life.



NO CLUES!

Do men and women in Chicago have less interest in teeth and gums than folks in Seattle, or Philadelphia?

It doesn't make sense to say that people in this city brush their teeth less often or less thoroughly than men and women in the Eastern or Pacific States.

Yet sales of Pro-phy-lac-tic Tooth Brush with PROLON bristles are going up and up in those areas, while right here sales of the same brush are lagging behind. It is a strange situation and hard to explain.

You must know and appreciate the good qualities of this fine tooth brush. It was the first ever offered in a sanitary package, and it has been nationally advertised longer than any other. So with clues missing as to why you may be missing the benefits of regular brushing with a top-quality Pro-phy-lac-tic Tooth Brush, we suggest that the next time you buy, you ask plainly by name for the Pro-phy-lac-tic Tooth Brush.

We guarantee that no brush at any price has finer or more costly duPont bristles. We guarantee that it is the only brush with gentler, round ends on each bristle. And, in writing, we guarantee the brush for six months of service, or a new one free.

There are two types of the Bonded Pro-phy-lac-tic. The regular (illustrated below) has the famous tuft to help clean the back teeth better. The 2-Row Professional has the same round-end PROLON bristle, but the brushing head is only one inch long, professionally compact. Get the shape that suits you best. Just be sure to ask by name for the Bonded Pro-phy-lac-tic.

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD WANTED—A WAR SONG! WITH HEDDA HOPPER

Irving Berlin used a universally familiar and sympathetic theme in "Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning!" Scene from the movie "This Is the Army."

(Copyright: 1943: The Chicago Tribune.)

Hollywood.

A VARIETY wag arose just about a year ago in his plush pulpit to observe that "Tin Pan Alley hasn't begun to sing this war yet."

I'll go a step farther by announcing my firm fear that Tin Pan Alley never will begin to sing this war.

Tin Pan Alley's going to miss the boat altogether. Its formerly happy-go-lucky troubadours are too smart for their own panties. Also they're too prosperous.

The scramble for the mantle of George M. Cohan became a free-for-all in which the song-and-dance man's garment of poesy was torn to bits, and not too delicately. And now flimsy portions of it adhere to this one and that one. George's heirs, I dislike to say, are clever rhymesters who can turn a neat phrase with the greatest aplomb, adapt popular classics by changing their tempo, and discourse with haphazard charm on the multifarious symptoms of puppy love-sickness. But their joint and collective souls have yet to give forth with a simple, lusty expression of nationality, patriotism, aspiration, inspiration, or however you want to describe the soul of a tune like "Over There."

Our song writers are a city breed. They're brave, hearty, courageous boys. Many are in the services. Others are aching to get in. They are as individuals lustier fellows than Georgie Cohan ever was. But they don't and can't know their U. S. A. as Cohan did. George absorbed the soul that is America's on the road, in frowsy little back street theaters of frowsy little backwoods towns, in the mad scurry of Broadway, and in stately, decorous saunterings on 5th avenue; among ball players, actors, pretty women, prize fighters, farmers, stagestruck girls, clergymen, clerks, and clucks.

Cohan's music went 'round and 'round and it came out of his crucible pure and unsullied corn. He dreamed and composed off the cob. Honest corn is as truly the life of America's soul as corn from Iowa. And too darn little corn of the pure quill variety grows either on Broadway or in the tiled palaces wherein the pampered musical prodigies of the films court their reluctant muse.

With the foregoing castigation out of the way, we'll look at the record, which, tho it comes up spotty, isn't too bad. Quite a lot of hot, earnest boys are two-fingering the keyboard looking for the magic melody of marching men of a warring people pitched to an emotional zenith. Others are searching for words—lyrics, in the quaint phrase of the trade.

I can't help, for example, falling for the product of Jimmy Monaco and Mack Gordon, Jimmie McHugh and Harold Adamson. I love a certain song that Arthur Schwartz and Frank Loesser batted off for Bette Davis. It's called "They're Either Too Young or Too Old." I love Gordon and Monaco's "Yankee Doodle Hayride" for Twentieth's "Pin-Up Girl." Neither of these ditties will sock you on the button with the solid clunk of a thing called "Pistol Packin' Mama," an earthy lilt with the perfume of sawdust and stale beer. The juke boxes are giving it a twirl right now. All it needs for a slam-bang success is Marlene Dietrich in black tights and bra crooning low in her sudsy five note baritone.

They have Bette Davis singing "They're Either Too Young or Too Old" in her new movie, "Thank Your Lucky Stars." The oldster is Dick Earl.

The last war is memorable for "Over There" and "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," also "Mademoiselle from Armentieres"—a memorable trinity of songs with a trench spirit in 'em. They are in the tradition of unforgettable war music, descendants in the direct line of "Marching Through Georgia" and "Dixie," first cousins to Rouget de l'Isle's "Marseillaise," to "La Cucaracha" and "Madelon." Variety's Abel Green was right when he said we haven't begun to sing this war. I think I'm right in doubting that we ever will.

Now, here's a theory: Our men write songs, but women sing 'em. In this war we're sending Hollywood girls to all the fronts. "Entertaining soldiers" is a very laudable enterprise. It builds morale. Even Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, on returning from his last global mission, emphasized the importance of actresses on the war fronts.

Russians march into battle to the tunes of Tschaikowsky—yeah, believe it or not.

Russia's psychology is different from ours. Suffering and perishing is their glory. Ours is fighting, loving, living, winning. I brought up this topic with Arthur Schwartz, who started out to be a lawyer before he turned to tunes. Arthur took himself apart and let me see what makes a song writer tick. He revealed, perhaps not unwittingly, the reasons why he and his confreres are successful, and also why we needn't look for this war to produce an American "Marseillaise."

I said: "Songs like 'La Marseillaise' are born only when the enemy is at our gates—like Francis Scott Key writing our 'Star Spangled Banner' while he watched the British bombardment of Fort McHenry."

Arthur said: "You're right. Great national hymns are written in times of great crisis. But song has other missions to fulfill, Hedda. Judy Garland, Martha Raye, Betty Grable, Frances Langford sing to our soldiers of the home they've left behind and which they long to return to. Remember what a hit 'Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree' was? Why? It appealed to the fighting man who's afraid while he's away some other guy's going to steal his girl.

George M. Cohan. 1906.

"Jerome Kern, Irving Berlin, and, in the earlier days, George Gershwin wrote in a natural way. Berlin's a master of naturalness. 'Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning' is an example."

"And how does a successful song go over?"

"Thru hard plugging and smart exploitation. When Frances Langford went to North Africa and sang to the soldiers that was song plugging at its most exalted pitch.

"Rudy Vallee's coast guard band has some of the greatest talent ever in the big name bands—the best blowers, tooters, and beaters in the country. He takes his gang on tour. Any number Vallee introduces with that mob is on the up beat.

Today's war songs are being sung to soldiers by famous entertainers. Frances Langford braves 135 degree heat in Africa to sing to the boys.

"What better exploitation could a song have than Betty Grable warbling it to the accompaniment of Charlie Spivak's sweet trumpet? Irving Berlin used to depend on a piano and violin accompanying a cracked soprano in a cheap cabaret. That's the way 'Alexander's Ragtime Band' got its start."

"I'm wondering who Pancho Villa's song plugger was for a song that was born out of the great bowels of Mother Mexico, out of the suffering and triumph of humankind—'La Cucaracha.' Or what magnificent setting helped to translate the 'Marseillaise' to Jean Jacques and Marie, jeering at the guillotine as noble heads rolled in the basket. Those songs plugged themselves into the hearts of the people for whom they were created."

"Our songs are not sung by mobs of the oppressed, not even by men on the march. This is not a marching war; it's a flying and riding war, with mechanized steel cavalry in place of horses. Our songs are sung by pretty girls to inspired fighters who know they are the lords of the earth because under our way of life they have equal opportunity to enjoy life's blessings. Think of the pull at the heartstrings of 'Coming In on a Wing and a Prayer' and the timeliness of 'Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition' when we had darned little ammunition—but how we praised the Lord for that little!

"But no one is writing songs that will thrill like 'Over There.' I wonder sometimes how many people know what makes America tick like Georgie Cohan did. Maybe our boys get too much money for what they do. I wouldn't know.

"The only thing I'm dead sure of is that today's song writers are giving us tunes to lift up people's hearts and morale—and when the time comes that our country needs a 'Marseillaise,' 'Cucaracha,' or another 'Marching Through Georgia' a man will come forth to deliver it.

"And, furthermore, I'll wager that George M. Cohan, God rest his trouper's soul, is resting more comfortably from whatever 'over there' he may be watching today, because he knows it, too."

16 Points! Margarine Helps

By MARY MEADE

A wine sauce can transform plain cake into a party dessert. This is lemon angelica sauce over a two egg cake.

EVEN IF YOU can spare 16 points for a whole pound of butter every week, don't use any of that butter for cooking! It is far too precious to be used anywhere but on the table. Even on the table butter is more to be admired than spread these days. I'm thinking of using my quarter pound as a centerpiece in place of flowers and fruit! Look at it, folks, admire its golden color, smell it if you like, but please don't eat my nice butter!

Margarine is easier to come by and may serve as both table spread and baking ingredient.

Try it in muffins and biscuits. Make these muffinlike puffs with margarine (fortified with vitamins, of course) and self-rising cake flour. Self-rising cake flour contains baking powder and salt in correct proportions, so that these ingredients needn't be added to your cake or puffs.

ORANGE DATE PUFFS

(One dozen)

2 cups self-rising cake flour
¼ cup margarine
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
½ cup chopped dates
Melted margarine and orange juice

Sift and measure flour. Cut in margarine and add milk and orange rind. Mix lightly with a fork. Add dates. Drop into greased muffin cups. Brush over with margarine and orange juice. Bake at 450 degrees for 15-20 minutes.

Self-rising flour may be used in this or any other cake recipe if baking powder and salt are omitted.

QUICK CAKE WITH LEMON ANGELICA SAUCE

(Serves eight)

⅓ cup margarine
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1½ cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon lemon extract

Set oven temperature at 350 degrees. Line bottom of square eight inch cake pan with waxed paper. Oil sides of pan and paper. Cream margarine and sugar until light. Add eggs one at a time and beat until smooth and well blended. Sift flour with baking powder and salt several times. Add a small portion of dry ingredients to batter. Add lemon extract to milk, then add milk and dry ingredients alternately to batter, beating until smooth after each addition. Bake cake at 350 degrees for half an hour, or until cake surface springs back when touched lightly with the finger tip. Cool and serve with sauce.

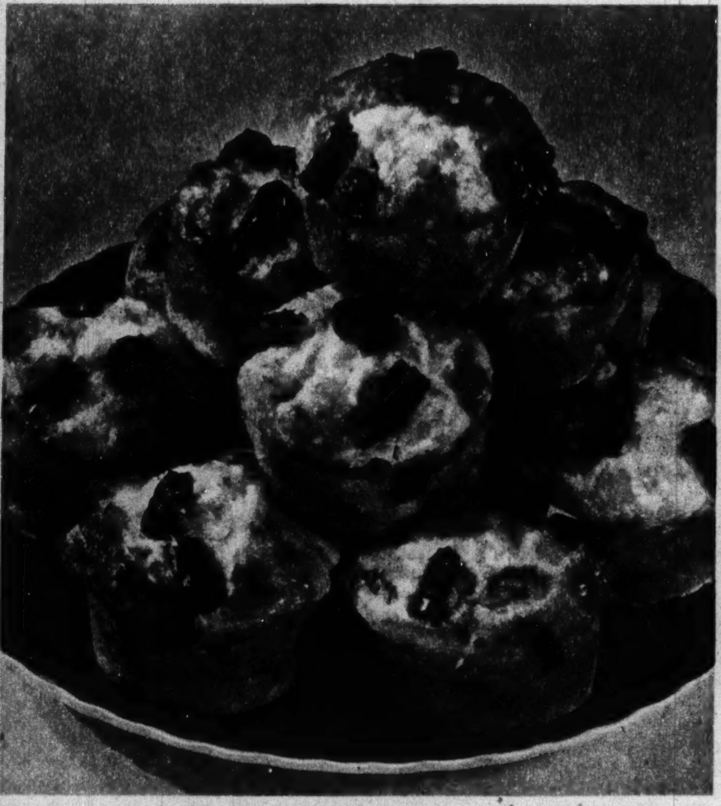
LEMON ANGELICA SAUCE

Combine 1 cup sugar, 3 tablespoons cornstarch, ⅛ teaspoon salt. Add 1½ cups boiling water gradually and cook in the top of a double boiler until thick and clear, stirring occasionally. Pour a small amount of the mixture into 2 beaten egg yolks and stir into sauce. Add ⅓ cup lemon juice, 2 teaspoons grated lemon rind, and ⅓ cup angelica wine. Cook for one minute, stirring constantly. Add 2 tablespoons margarine and remove from heat. Cool and serve over cooled cake.

Tokay, muscatel, or any other favorite dessert wine may be used in this delectable sauce. This is the kind of dessert to serve at your next party. The family will like it, too, so don't consider it just a company dessert.

The wine sauce dresses up any kind of simple cake. It is excellent with a sponge or angel food, too, or over lady fingers. If you like you may baste the cake itself with a tablespoon or two of the wine used in the sauce.



These orange-date puffs (really muffins) are made with self-rising flour and glazed with orange juice and margarine.

GINGER CREAMED HAM SLICE

(Serves six)

3 to 4 tablespoons brown sugar
1 teaspoon ginger
1 2-pound slice [illegible] ham
1 cup milk

Melt sugar in heavy skillet and stir in ginger. Fry ham quickly on both sides in melted sugar. Pour milk over ham, cover, and bake in a slow (300 degrees) oven for 45 minutes to one hour. Remove ham and thicken drippings with flour mixed with a little cold water.—MRS. L. MALLOY, 5627 Pine street, Philadelphia, Pa.

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

Macmillan hall, which houses administration offices, classrooms, and the college auditorium.

By ELEANOR NANGLE

Aurora, N. Y.

ON THE 15th of this month, when Wells college celebrated its 75th birthday, an anniversary poem by Robert P. Tristram Coffin was read to the students, the faculty, and what few alumnae could journey to its beautiful but (in war time) somewhat remote campus on the eastern shore of Lake Cayuga here in the Finger Lakes region of New York.

Properly enough, the poem paid tribute to Henry Wells, who founded the Wells-Fargo and the American Express companies and who also founded Wells college, described in the final stanza as "his best American industry."

In founding Wells Seminary for Women, which became a college two years later, Wells chose for it the happiest of sites, close by his own home in Aurora, overlooking Cayuga, which stretches like a slim blue finger from Geneva down to Ithaca, N. Y. Wells' campus begins at Cayuga's shore and extends back thru wooded hills, ravines, and broad lawns for 300 acres. But tho the campus rambles eastward, the lake remains its focal point; all Wells buildings face it, and all roads for the constant round of picnics, hikes, warm-weather swims, and sketching expeditions lead to its shores.

Wells is a small liberal arts college with an enrollment just under 300. In the course of its 75 years it has naturally rolled up any number of traditions. Today, in what is almost a gasolineless era here in the east, those that center around the Wells-Fargo coaches in the college barns have interestingly practical aspects.

For many years two of the original coaches that were the pride of Wells-Fargo when it was telescoping space between the country's frontiers have been owned and used by Wells college. One company coach and an imposing "5th avenue" coach always draw up before Main building on baccalaureate day to transport the entire senior class to the Presbyterian church in Aurora, where the services are held. And on May day the company coach is used to carry the queen and her court to the outdoor theater northeast of Macmillan hall. Students feel today that the coaches and the spanking teams that drew them on festival days might very well be put to more frequent use. Wells feels the transportation pinch—but what other college has commodious, serviceable passenger coaches at its disposal for emergency use?

War has made Wells more than ever a community where girls pursue their studies in an atmosphere of complete tranquility. Picturesque Aurora lacks even a movie. Films are shown twice weekly on the campus by the college, and visiting lecturers and artists are presented frequently. Social life is sedate and pretty much self-sustained, and only on week-ends nowadays do men come up from Cornell.

Wells girls work willingly on the college farm when it is short-handed, as at harvest time, and the army aircraft observation post on the hill high above Glen park is never unoccupied. Student spotters assume weekly two hour watches, studying or knitting between reports on any plane seen or heard in the vicinity.

For the size of the student body Wells has a large quota of students from Chicagoland, many of them alumnae daughters. Harriet Rendall and Priscilla Smith, both of Morrison, Ill., are second generation students. So are four students from Evanston—Helen Husted, Anne Hemenway, Sally Bunnell, and Margaret Starbuck, the latter president of the junior class.

NOW I'M AN AIR LINES STEWARDESS!

● This is the second and final instalment of the story of a young school teacher who dreamed of becoming an air line stewardess and finally made the dream come true. Last week she told of her training and of the start of her first flight on duty. Her most congenial passenger was a transport command pilot.

By LUCILLE COOK
(As Told to June Geserick)

LUCILLE COOK, the school teacher who became an air line stewardess.

SNOW was falling when we landed at La Guardia field in New York City. I don't think I've ever seen a prettier sight. Holiday greetings rang thru the ship as passengers deplaned, many of them to hurry toward the gates, where friends and relatives waited. I felt lonesome and left out of things as I stepped from the plane into the half night. I pulled my coat tightly around me as I walked to the dispatch office.

I turned around as I heard quick footsteps in the snow. It was the ferry command pilot, and he greeted me with a shout.

"I was just thinking," he said as he approached me, "why couldn't we do something together this evening? I'm going up to Connecticut to see my folks, and my train doesn't leave until after midnight."

I didn't know any one in the east, and the idea of a young, congenial companion pleased me. I accepted his invitation, and he promised to meet me in the lobby of the Savoy-Plaza, the New York base for United Air Lines stewardesses, in two hours. That gave me just enough time to check in at the dispatch office, catch a crew car to the hotel, and change from my uniform to street clothes.

We had a wonderful evening. First we walked blocks and blocks to find a fuzzy toy lamb for the new little niece the pilot had never seen. Then we had supper in a smart uptown restaurant. Two movie stars were dining there, and we stared like high school kids. After that we went for a walk on 5th avenue.

"That gave me just enough time to catch a crew car to the hotel."

The shops were decorated for Christmas, and tinsel and bright stars reflected their shimmering lights onto the snow in the street. It was then that my companion confronted me with the biggest surprise of my life. He said simply, "Will you marry me?"

I looked up at him dumfounded, and he continued: "I mean it. I've always wanted to marry a blonde. You're the one I've been looking for. Come on home with me and meet the family."

Ever since I was a little girl I had planned the beautiful speech that was to be delivered after my first proposal. That quite left my mind. Instead I gurgled, "O, no; I hardly know you."

Back in the lobby of the hotel he vowed that he would haunt me until I changed my mind. He said, "I'll call you every time I'm in Chicago, and I'll write from wherever I'm stationed."

After he left I went upstairs to the stewardess suite. One of the girls, a classmate of mine in training school, had just come in. She was unpacking her bag. I had never met the other two stewardesses, but they were friendly, talkative. We ate crackers, drank milk, and hashed over the events on our respective trips—chiefly weather, men, and crew.

Just as I was climbing into bed a knocking sounded at the door.

"Parcel for Miss Cook," a bellhop called.

It was a box of flowers from the ferry command pilot. He must have stopped at the florist just around the corner. A card in the box read:

"I have now known you for exactly 10 hours. I still want you to marry me. Maybe it's not just because you're a blonde. Anyway, I like uniforms. Do you?"

I have flown 162,000 miles, all of them unpredictable and exciting, during my 10 months on the job as one of United Air Lines' 183 stewardesses. Each mainliner is my home upstairs—a snug apartment where as hostess I see to the comfort of busy passengers en route from one war time mission to another.

My guest list is as democratic as the Gettysburg address. It includes the names of army generals and buck privates, rally-bound movie stars and returning heroes, business men, and even the President's wife.

I first saw the latter last summer when in the dark hours of early morning I reported to Chicago airport to prepare for a westbound flight. The terminal's small morning staff was agog with excitement. Mrs. Roosevelt was in the station. She was to be a passenger on my trip. The employes worked hard at looking busy, but really they were gaping at Mrs. Roosevelt. I was, too.

The only one who seemed unaware of the first lady's identity was a cleanup man. He was too busy mopping the floor. Back and forth, back and forth went the mop—nearer and nearer to Mrs. Roosevelt. Finally he practically was mopping her shoes. Then he spoke to her. We all held our breath as we waited to see what would follow. The President's wife smiled, picked up her magazine, and moved to another chair. The cleanup man smiled back at her and went on mopping the area she had just vacated.

Talking shop is the favorite pastime of air line employes. That probably accounts for the strong ties between stewardesses, first officers, and pilots. Altho crew members are often together not only in the air but also at out-of-town bases, they still seek one another's companionship at the home station.

Not long after I made my first flight as a full-fledged stewardess I decided to move. I had been living with a family of friends, but the location was not convenient to the airport. When two other stewardesses asked if I would like to share an apartment with them I readily accepted.

It was a five room apartment, complete with a fireplace in the living room, and, best of all, it was in a neighborhood where many air line employes live. It wasn't long after we moved in that the place took on the appearance of a scene from "My Sister Eileen."

Pilots' wives come calling on their way to the airport to pick up their husbands. Entire crews sometimes appear at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and still are around at midnight. The telephone rings at least once every 10 minutes, and we never know how many to expect for dinner. Stewardesses stop in for a shower or to change their clothes before setting out for a date. If a guest is hungry he goes to the kitchen and fries an egg or two. Two weeks after we took up residence in the place we abandoned all formality. But even the apartment can't hold a candle to the events that sometimes take place during flights.

Last winter as I sat in the jump seat during a take-off from Chicago for Cheyenne, Wyo., I heard an unorthodox noise at the front of the cabin. A minute later I heard the sound again. It was the bark of a dog. Animals are not permitted on the ship, but I knew as I looked out the window that it was too late to put the beast off the plane.

I quickly loosened my safety belt and hurried to the front of the ship. No dog was in evidence, but I looked between the seats, in the hat rack, and even under the seats. Then I heard the bark again. This time it was in the back of the ship. Others joined me in the hunt. Some of the men crawled on their hands and knees, peering into the dark crevices under

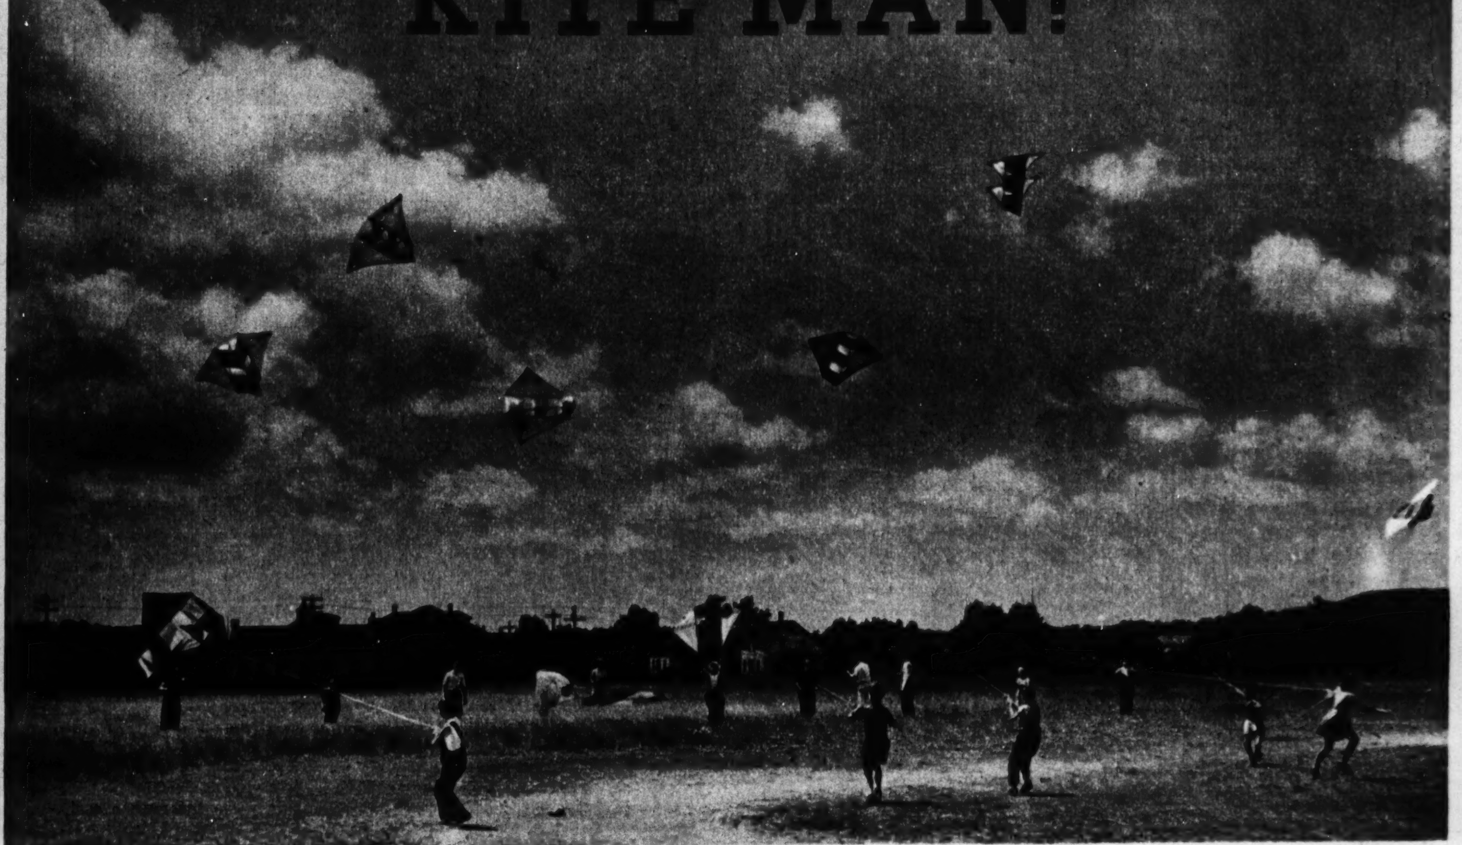
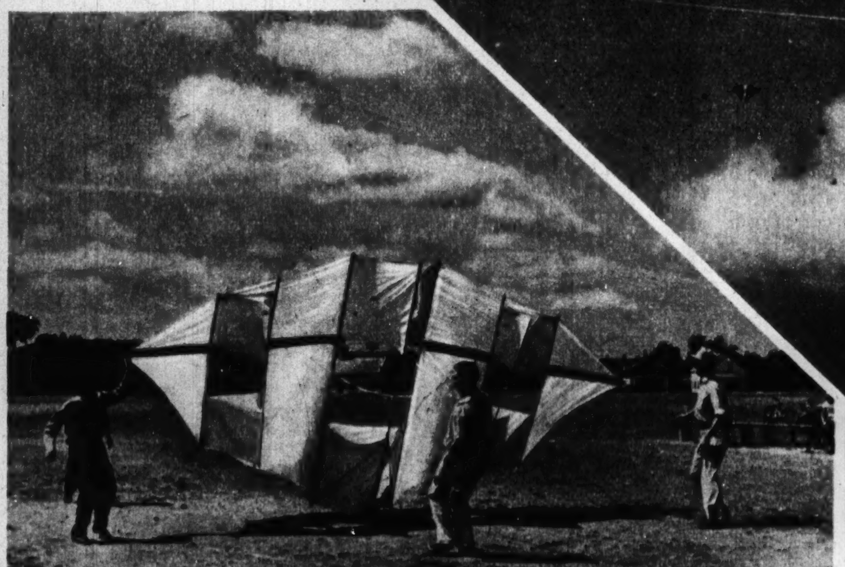
KITE MAN!



(By-Line photos from International.)

To the kids of Woonsocket, R. I., Domina C. Jalbert is a hero. He's the man who makes tremendous kites and flies them all his spare time. He frequently lets the youngsters fly his smaller kites, as in this picture.



Jalbert's largest kite is 10 feet high, 17 feet wide. It has towed an auto across a field and requires a very high wind.

To show the lifting power of kites Jalbert has his daughter Dorothy, 11, carried 100 feet into the air, seated in a bosun's chair attached to the lines. Jalbert is trying to interest the army and navy in the use of kites for towing, signaling, etc.

Boogie Boy

A new piano genius is creating a stir in Chicago, playing classical music with a boogie-woogie touch. Robert Crum (below) studied to be a composer and is fast becoming a major figure in modern music.

He believes that music should be a guide, not a prison, for the artist. His interpretations, with their trend toward exciting modernism, are technically superb, artistically sound.

→ Crum's virtuosity has been hailed by authorities. His agile hands make amazingly swift passages over the keys.

GRAPHIC LITTLE THEATER Presents John Garfield and Maureen O'Hara in "THE FALLEN SPARROW"

1 Back from years of imprisonment and torture in Spain, John McKittrick (John Garfield) returns to New York after recuperating in Arizona. He had been the object of Nazi torture because he knew the location of something they wanted very much.

2 He discovers that his chum, Louie Lepetino, has died "accidentally." Kit believes Louie was murdered by the Nazis because Louie had been their unwitting stooge in helping Kit escape so he might lead them to the treasure. Kit tells Inspector Tobin (John Miljan) he is going to find the murderer.

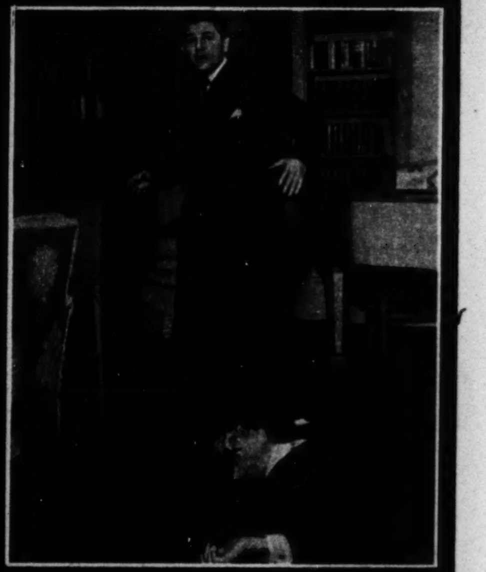
3 Kit's old social circles are now cluttered up with European refugees, and among them he hopes to find the killer. He even suspects an old friend, Whitney Hamilton (Martha O'Driscoll), of complicity, and is definitely suspicious of beautiful Toni Donne (Maureen O'Hara).

4 Kit makes deliberate, hard-boiled love to Toni. Thru her he meets Dr. Skaas, an invalid, and his son Otto, "refugees" from Norway.

5 Kit's suspicions of Whitney go counter to his fondness for her cousin Ab, who is in Washington on a mysterious trip. But he pursues his investigation.

6 Dr. Skaas, thru Toni, invites Kit to his lavish home. Toni warns Kit that the agents will kill him, that he can't win. But he stays, and joins a sinister toast with Otto (John Banner), Toni, a friend, and Dr. Skaas (Walter Slezak).

7 After this meeting Kit is more than ever aware that his old captors are after him. He seems to hear again the dragging, limping footsteps of his former torturer.



8 He goes to Washington and finds Ab a "suicide." Knowing Ab's fear of firearms, Kit immediately suspects murder, and the evidence points toward Otto Skaas.

9 With the help of Toni, Kit sets a trap for his foes. Then as he waits he grows drowsy. He realizes he's been drugged—double-crossed! Before he passes out, however, he hears the terrible footsteps, and in limps Dr. Skaas. At last Kit meets his tormenter face to face, and kills him. The Nazi ring is cornered—even little Toni, who was so deeply involved that even her love for Kit couldn't help her escape.

Hiding Your Lightning Under a Bushel

By MAUREEN DALY
(Author of "Seventeenth Summer.")

AND THEN take the case of John Doe Jr., the high school senior with the shy eye and bashful manner, a lanky Yankee who was smart in school, had a smooth tan sport coat, and whose mother thought he was wonderful—but he still wasn't happy. All because he didn't have any friends. He wanted to know other boys, but never figured out how and thought they didn't want to know him. He wanted to go out with girls, but they talked and laughed so much they scared him, and he believed they considered him pretty much of a droolic individual anyway.

He wanted to get up and recite in class, to join the debate team, and to try out for the class play, but that meant having people stare at him, and that wasn't his idea of fun. So he was lonesome. He was always by himself. On Friday nights, when other fellows and girls were going out in twos and fours, he used to put on a clean shirt, go to a movie by himself, and then home to bed—and that wasn't his idea for the end of a perfect day, either.

So one day he made up his mind that things were going to be different.

He started off one afternoon by asking the fellow who sat next to him in history class if he was taking a girl to the football dance next Saturday or if he was going to wolf it with the other boys. That started a small conversation, and one thing led to another, which happened to be the smooth girl in the next seat, a rather luscious little character, who remarked that as yet she hadn't been asked to the dance. So bashful Johnny straightened his tie and warmed up to the $64 question. As they left class together he said, "Well, see you Saturday night, then," and she gave him one of those "you melt me, brother" looks, and he began to think: "Maybe I'm going to like this life. Tomorrow I guess I'll talk to another girl!"

He discovered then that making friends and conversation is a fifty-fifty proposition. Many of the fellows and girls had thought his former shy silence was snobbery, but once he showed that he wanted to be Pal Joey with them, they began to make with the personality, too. He realized also that if he brushed his teeth carefully every morning, kept his hair neatly combed, and always tied his shoelaces he felt more at ease with people. Because, tho he knew he wasn't the cutest kid in the world, he felt neat and clean. And tho he didn't look like Charles Boyer, he was sure that girls didn't class him in the strictly ghastly department.

He didn't worry any more about trying to find the right thing to say, because he began to find talking to friends so natural and easy that he opened his mouth first and thought about worrying later. In his old shy days bashfulness made him stammer and forget what he was saying, and that made him feel even more awkward, so now he decided to talk more slowly—just till he got the hang of things.

That helped him so much that he tried doing everything slowly—because it made him feel less awkward and self-conscious. When he walked up to the blackboard to put a problem on the board for the math class now he did it slowly and with ease.

He began to think that girls were pretty wonderful people.

He didn't trip over the waste basket or drop the chalk in embarrassment, as he might have done before. And when he went to pick up his new girl acquaintances for dates he didn't tip over table lamps in his jitters, nor did he almost knock his sweet stuff over in an attempt to let her get out of the door first.

That shy feeling was soon gone. He felt now as if he really "belonged" in school. He found out that almost every one was good people and wanted to be friendly just as much as he did—and some of them had been too shy, too. He discovered that all the people he had thought were staring at him were really only smiling and trying to be pleasant, but he hadn't noticed that before.

He began to think that girls were pretty wonderful people, and tho they had thrown him off the beam before with their laughing and chattering, he decided all that was fun to listen to, and, besides, most of them did it because it was just a way of being friendly. He knew he wasn't getting any younger and was glad that he had discovered his mistake in time, while he was still young and groovy. So young John Doe himself developed into quite a solid character and began to find this high school social life of mouses and men a very interesting business.

And the moral of the story is: Gather your roses, Bud, while you may.

"THE CHOCOLATE SOLDIER"

"The Chocolate Soldier" will be presented by the Chicago Theater of the Air from 8 to 9 p. m. (C.W.T.) Saturday, Oct. 30, over W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual network.

BACK in 1910 the world of music was split asunder. Should the artists, the composers, the producers, and the patrons pay any attention to operetta as an art form worthy of notice? Or should the custom of importing operas from Europe be continued in what was purported to be a representation of the best music obtainable, the music which would please the musical tastes of the majority? Oscar Straus' operetta "The Chocolate Soldier" was at the core of the controversy.

But Walter Eaton, New York critic, took up arms for those who saw the operetta as the medium to express in musical form the public's taste for plot and melody more closely allied with incidents of life with which they were familiar. Writing in the Craftsman magazine, he said in essence that what was needed was not a greater education of people in grand opera, but a more catholic education in the musically elect so that they would realize the true importance of operetta, its national significance, and no longer sneer at the composer who wrote it.

"The creation of one American operetta like Gilbert and Sullivan's 'Patience' or Oscar Straus' 'Chocolate Soldier,' said Eaton, "would be worth a dozen importations of Madame Butterflies and Toscas and Salomes."

Another man of that era who shared the beliefs of Eaton was Fred C. Whitney. Just one year before he had purchased the right to bring Straus' Viennese operetta, "Der Tapfere Soldat," to New York, and gave it an American premiere on Sept. 15, 1909, under the title "The Chocolate Soldier." That his judgment was sound was proved by music lovers who flocked to the Casino theater and packed the house each night of a run that lasted 291 performances.

The story behind the New York appearance of "The Chocolate Soldier" can be traced by drawing attention to a series of adaptations. Foundation of the opera was a book by George Bernard Shaw, "Arms and the Man." From this R. Bernauer and L. Jacobson, two Austrians, adapted a libretto form. Oscar Straus, then one of Europe's top composers, adapted to their libretto his "Waltz Dream" music. The result was "Der Tapfere Soldat." The English version was adapted by Stanislaus Stange—and New York had its new operetta.

The plot of "The Chocolate Soldier" concerns the adventures of a Serbian officer by the name of Lieutenant Bummerli during the days of the Bulgarian-Serbian war of 1885. Rather than fight, the gay lieutenant devotes his time to the enjoyment of chocolates. Comes time for his retreating from the oncoming forces of the enemy, and he hides in the dressing room of Nadina Popoff. Enter the love interest, the climax, and the happy ending. Running thru the operetta in the midst of this action are songs which long have been favorites of theater audiences thruout the world. Among the better known are "My Hero," "While My Lady Sleeps," and "The Chocolate Soldier." For W-G-N's presentation of the operetta Marion Claire will sing the role of Nadina and Morton Bowe will be co-starred with her as he sings Bummerli's tenor arias.

Music as gay as that which Straus has written for "The Chocolate Soldier" would, it seems, have come from the pen of a happy man satisfied with life. But such is not true. The searching for a new goal and the chasing of ever-distant horizons has been the theme of the composer's life. Born in Vienna in 1870, Straus stayed in the land of his birth only until he reached his maturity. He then studied in Berlin while conducting choirs and orchestras. In 1913 he went to London to write the operetta "Love and Laughter." Afterward he went back to Germany. In 1927 he left Europe and came to New York. From there he drifted to Hollywood to write music for the movies. Even then he was not satisfied. On Sept. 3, 1939, he became a French citizen. In France the war caught up with him and enveloped him in its coils. When last he was heard from—in the year 1942—he was living at the Hotel Raphael in Paris.

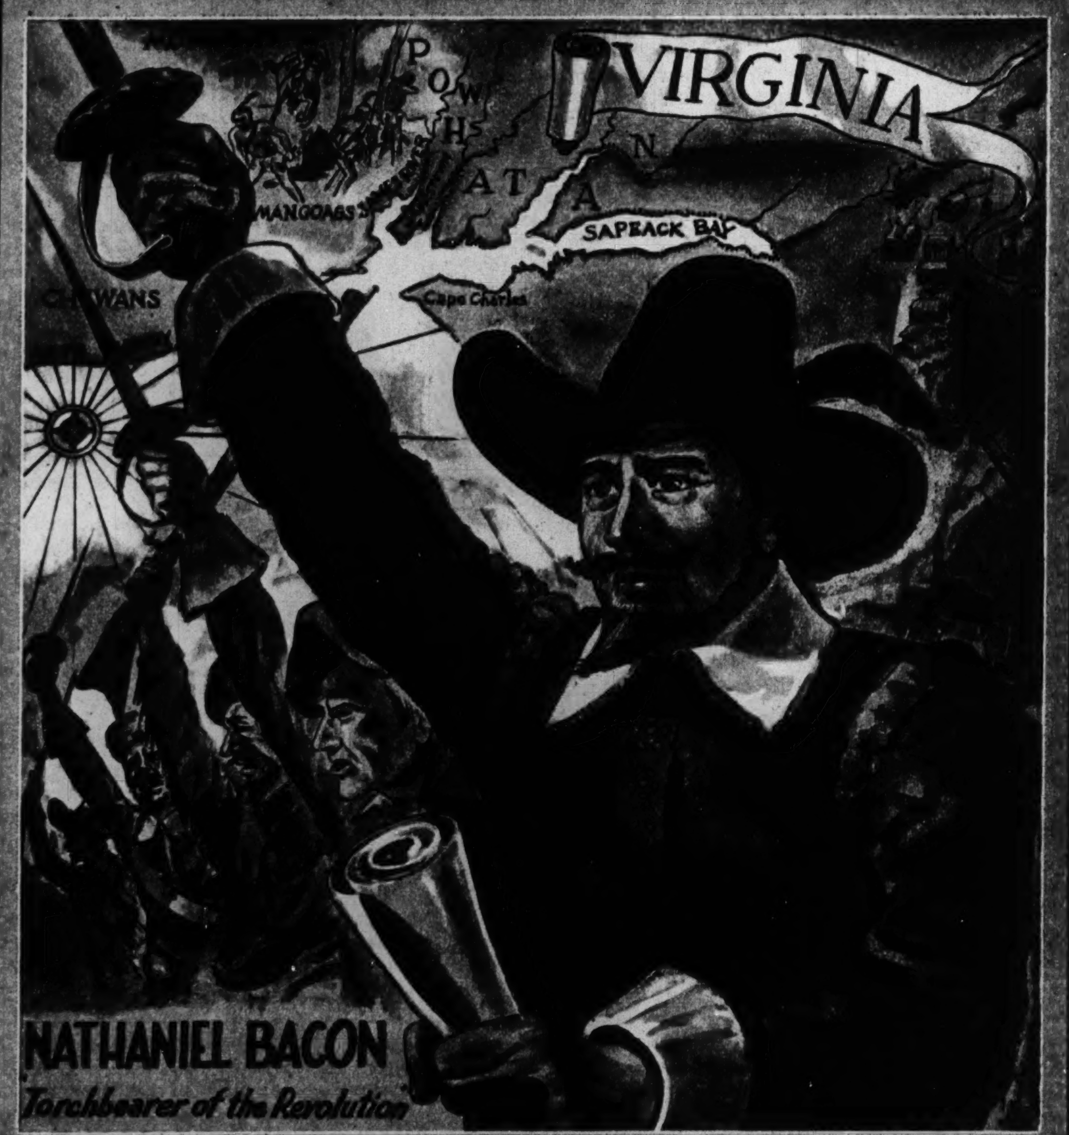
A NEW FEATURE—

ROMANTIC FIGURES of AMERICAN HISTORY



This dramatic illustration by Clara Fargo Thomas, well known New York artist, is the first of a series. They will appear each week in the Graphic Section, accompanied by historical sketches. Watch for this feature every Sunday.

FIRST OF ALL PERSONS in America to invoke the spirit of liberty and actively oppose the governmental abuses in the colonies was Nathaniel Bacon, leader of the Bacon rebellion.

It was in 1676, when William Berkeley, the king's governor of Virginia, failed to check Indian depredations in the colony, that Bacon was chosen by the people to lead them against the savages. The conquest of the Indians, however, was not all that he planned. He proposed to reform the entire system of colonial government and eliminate the inequalities therein.

Without waiting for a military commission from the governor, he led a small army against a tribe of Indians. Next he forced the governor to summon a new assembly for the purpose of instituting the needed reform measures. Before the assembly could meet he struck and dispersed two other tribes of Indians which had been threatening the colonists.

Elected to the assembly, Bacon appeared at Jamestown, where he was seized on the order of Berkeley and severely rebuked by the governor. Fleeing from Jamestown, Bacon assembled a formidable body of his supporters and returned to the colonial capital, where he extorted from the governor a commission to march against the Indians. Hardly had he set about to raise a new force, however, when he learned that Berkeley was attempting to form an army to oppose the "rebels."

Bacon called upon the principal colonial planters to support him and help him restore order. He marched to Jamestown, but the governor had fled before him. While Bacon and his soldiers were off on another expedition against the savages Berkeley returned to Jamestown. Hearing of this, Bacon retraced his steps to the town with his soldiers and, after a brisk battle on its outskirts, entered the place and burned it to the ground.

Drafting an oath of fidelity to himself, he forced every citizen within his reach to sign it. Virtually all opposition to him now disappeared, but while he was consolidating his support in a spirit of conciliation he suddenly was taken ill and died. He was buried in one of the rivers of Virginia, no one now knows where.

Bacon was born in England on Jan. 2, 1647, and educated at Cambridge university. He died some time in October, 1676.

It was of Governor Berkeley that King Charles II. of England once said:

"The old fool has killed more people in that naked country than I have done for the murder of my father."

Stewardess

seats. I went thru the closets and even looked in the baggage compartment. The dog still was barking, but we couldn't tell where the sound was originating.

Just as I was about to call the ship's captain one of the passengers, the leader of the search for the dog, caught my arm. He was laughing so hard he scarcely could speak. He was a ventriloquist, he said, and had been the cause of the uproar. All the passengers thought the affair was a great joke, and he finally agreed to entertain us with more imitations.

With the exception of the ventriloquist, the most colorful passenger aboard was a bearded veteran of several sea battles. Just before we were scheduled to land at North Platte, Neb., he asked to borrow a razor.

"I promised my wife I'd shave this thing off before I got home," he told me, "so here goes."

He emerged clean shaven and returned to his seat. The man in the chair next to his looked up. Three times he cast puzzled glances at his seat companion. Later he confessed he was quite annoyed at a stranger taking some one else's chair, but recognized the occupant of the seat just in time.

At North Platte a heavy snowstorm had taken hold and we were notified that the flight would be canceled until the weather cleared. That meant I had to make hotel reservations for every passenger and for crew members as well.

When the passengers had been safely deposited at their respective lodging places, and when they all had been notified that the flight might depart on short notice in the middle of the night if the storm cleared, I joined the rest of the crew in a tour of the town.

We stopped for coffee in one of the few places that still were open. It was vacant except for one or two workers who seemed to be having early breakfasts, so we stayed on and talked about our trips, shouting to make ourselves heard above the din of the ever-playing juke box.

I barely had got my bag unpacked in my hotel room when my phone rang. It was the pilot calling to tell me that the plane was scheduled to take off in an hour. Fortunately I still was wearing my uniform, so I immediately started to call our passengers. Fifteen minutes later I was on my way to the airport in a taxi.

I often wonder how I could have been happy in my prestewardess days. I'm certain that I wouldn't trade my job for any other, except perhaps for marriage.

United Air Lines says that its average stewardess works approximately 18 months before she resigns to be married. Some of my classmates—we were graduated from training school only 10 months ago—already have become engaged or married to pilots or passengers they met on flights. I still am receiving letters from the ferry command pilot who proposed to me on my first trip as stewardess. Almost every stewardess has received at least one proposal during a flight.

Just the other day I was confiding to some of my co-workers that I would like to work three more years. One of the stewardesses pointed to her engagement ring and laughingly said, "Do you want to make a bet?"

EYE JINKS

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1943: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

1 A smart girl begins to light the drama of her eyes by first applying eye shadow very carefully to her lids.

2 Next, eyebrow pencil on the brows, and if you're extremely smart a hair line around the eyes themselves.

3 Even naturally long lashes will need the accent of mascara: those that aren't long and lush will look so.

EVEN THO the usual appreciative audience may be lacking, it's a wise girl who keeps up to her old beauty tricks, so she'll be something for the boys to admire when Johnny comes marching home. And one of the most important and valuable beauty tricks we know is the one done with eyes!

It will be your eyes he looks at first and longest when he does return, you know, and it's up to you to see that they are bright and sparkling and able to tell him what he wants to know.

Of course eye health is the basis of all lovely eyes. Enough sleep, a well balanced diet, cleansing with mild eye wash, brief moments of closing and resting them, will help make the eyes clear, their whites unclouded.

But no matter how great their natural beauty, eyes still need makeup to bring out all their charm and brilliance, just as the tenderest mouth will look pale and wan until lipstick is applied. Eyes without makeup are like a painting that has never been completed. They look as if the artist had sketched in the barest outlines, then had failed to finish the job.

The first step in learning to apply eye makeup properly is to experiment with your eye shadow. Eye shadow is supposed to be just what it's called—a faint shadow that serves as background for the eyes themselves. Therefore it should never be applied with a heavy hand so that it shows. Instead it should be delicately blended on the lids and upward and outward to the brows until it gently fades away at the brows themselves.

After you've blended your eye shadow you can go to work with your eyebrow pencil to make your brows as lovely as you'd like them to be.

While thin-plucked brows went out of style years ago along with the artificial oversized mouth, it's still a good idea to tweeze away some of the straggly hairs that usually lurk on both sides of the brows to spoil their clean, natural sweep.

Then, after you've achieved a neat straight line, darken it skilfully by feather-stroking your eyebrow pencil on the hairs of your brows. The pencil should never, never touch your skin, which would cause a smudgy dark line, but should be touched only to the hairs of the brows. Only if your brows end abruptly, and fail to extend the ideal quarter inch beyond the corners of your eyes, should you touch the pencil to your skin to give your brows a tapering conclusion.

Once you've mastered the application of pencil to your brows, you're ready to tackle the even more expert job of lining your eyes. This, by the way, is a step most brunettes ignore, but one that is almost a "must" for blondes and redheads.

It consists of drawing a fine line around the eyes just inside the lashes, and it will make your eyes seem twice as large!

After your shadow and pencil have been applied you're ready for mascara. This should be applied with a not too wet brush, starting at the base of the lashes and swooping outward toward the tips. Then, while the mascara is still wet, take another clean brush and go over your lashes to remove all surplus mascara and make each hair stand separate from the others. The next and last step in really doing a job on your eyes is to hold your mascara brush against the tips of your lashes as they do their final drying. This will give them quite an appealing upward curl!

Simple Unit Converts Home Furnace to Downdraft Type

By LOUISE BARGELT

HOME OWNERS and home renters who have a hand-fired coal burning furnace or boiler in their basements will welcome the news that a downdraft conversion unit has been perfected which makes it possible to burn soft coal without smoke, and to cut heating bills from 25 to 50 per cent.

This practical device, the invention of Prof. Julian R. Fellows, department of mechanical engineering, University of Illinois, can be placed in any furnace now in use which has a firing door large enough to permit its insertion. The installation of this unit is simple. It can be completed by two workmen in 10 minutes, without making any alterations in the furnace or interfering with its output of heat.

This conversion unit is not intended as a replacement for the convenience of stokers or for the oil or gas fuels. It has been developed for those home owners who must burn inexpensive coal and who do their own firing. With it, the most inexperienced fire tender can burn soft coal without producing smoke, and by burning the smoke increase heat from the fuel by 25 per cent. The unit will retail at from $50 to $75 and pay for itself in fuel saved, and in allowing cheaper fuel to be burned. Some householders even may cut their fuel bills in half, and housewives who put up a constant struggle against the grime of smoke and soot on draperies and decorations will benefit from this device as well as will their husbands who pay the winter's coal bill.

This is definitely the first major improvement in hand fired fuel burning for home heating since Benjamin Franklin invented the stove in 1740. Prof. Fellows says that he began the study of the combustion of soft coal in hand fired furnaces in the fall of 1935 because the smoke and unsatisfactory results he was getting from his own furnace suggested that there was a crying need for furnaces, boilers, and stoves capable of burning this low cost fuel smokelessly and efficiently.

Prof. Fellows also has incorporated the downdraft burner into a new home furnace, a unit of the future which will burn cheap soft coals without smoke. The downdraft principle is a method for causing all smoke and gas to pass thru the burning coals, where they are mixed with preheated auxiliary air so that they burn completely. This releases their heat, otherwise lost, and eliminates smoke. Tests with and without the conversion burner show smoke reductions as great as 99 per cent.

War-time restrictions prohibit the manufacture of the conversion unit until after the war, when alloys for it become available. Limited commercial production of the furnace is expected to begin soon with certain critical alloys replaced by ceramic materials. It is planned to replace furnaces which are beyond repair or for necessary building in war plant areas. After the war production of both furnace and adapter will be unlimited.

Prof. Fellows has worked out the principle of downdraft thru many experiments these last eight years. For the last three years J. C. Miles, also a member of the mechanical engineering department of the University of Illinois, has collaborated with Prof. Fellows in an effort to apply the "downdraft coking principle" in the design of all types of hand fired furnaces, boilers, stoves, and water heaters.

The conversion burner is a boxlike affair which is pushed into the fire door of a conventional furnace. The box has a door in front, hollow walls, and no bottom. It divides the furnace firepot into two chambers. Fresh fuel is placed inside the box. The fire is outside the box, coming up from the bottomless sides.

Heat from the fire releases smoke and gases from the fresh coals. The draft takes the smoke and gases under the box sides. There they must pass thru the fire. The hollow walls of the box bring air to the point where smoke and gases meet the fire. They burn with the air and the smoke is eliminated and heat released.

All types of low-cost bituminous coal can be burned without smoke in a furnace or boiler equipped with a downdraft burner, and the fire can be controled better and held longer than when conventional methods of burning are used.

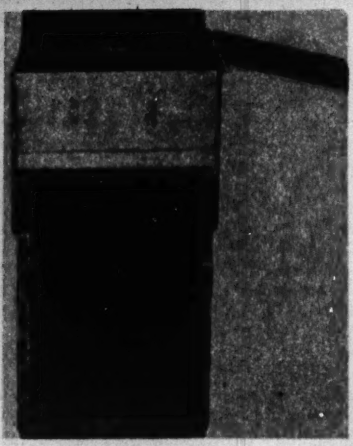
Prof. Julian R. Fellows of the University of Illinois placing the conversion unit he developed into firing door of furnace.



Bottom view of downdraft burner.

Prof. Fellows explains that three things are necessary to get full heat value from soft coal by burning the smoke. These are: 1. A control rate at which volatile matter from soft coal is released. 2. The mixing of it with sufficient pre-heated air. 3. The ignition of the mixture. It was to accomplish this that he developed what he called the downdraft coking principle.

This involves a hollow baffle wall in the firebox. The wall hangs from the top of the firebox and extends down to the burning coals, which are concentrated in that part of the firebox directly connected with the smoke pipe. In the part of the firebox into which the firing door opens is the fresh fuel.

Air is admitted to the fire thru the firing door below the grate as in a conventional furnace, and also thru the hollow baffle wall. As the firebox heat drives smoke and gas from the fresh coal, the air coming thru the firing door carries these down under the baffle and thru the burning coals on the way to the smoke pipe. Air coming thru the hollow baffle is preheated, and mixes with the smoke and gas, which is heated and ignited, and burns while going thru the fire.

Professor Fellows pours coal into another design of the downdraft burner.

It was after studying combustion and determining the essentials to burning smoke that Prof. Fellows developed the idea of the hollow baffle wall combined with the downdraft coking principle. The next problem was to make a baffle which could withstand the heat resulting when the gas and smoke burn. An alloy has been developed and tested for this use in the conversion unit, and ceramic materials for the furnace with the downdraft coking principle built into it.

Several other ideas have been incorporated into this "smokeless furnace of the future." For one thing, the furnace doesn't resemble conventional furnaces. It is square-cornered and appears much like a refrigerator. Not only the appearance but also the method of inserting fuel and removing ashes is streamlined. The shovel and furnace are divorced and coal is inserted by the bucketful thru a conveniently slanted door. Ashes are removed dustlessly in a pan and an automatic damper keeps wind changes from affecting the draft. A device may be added to give automatic temperature control. The same basic furnace "chassis" can be fitted for three different types of home installation. Depending upon the outer shell and attachments, the "chassis" can be used in a gravity warm air furnace, a forced circulation hot air furnace, or a space heater.

Prof. Fellows believes that with the conversion unit in all present hand fired furnaces and boilers and the downdraft principle built into new heating plants, heating costs not only will be cut but smoke nuisance may be eliminated from American cities with resulting benefits in cleanliness and health. To quote Prof. Fellows:

"If all new hand-fired heating devices were made to utilize the downdraft coking principle of burning, and all the conventional types still in use could be equipped with downdraft conversion burners, smoke palls and smogs would become but a bad memory from the unenlightened past."

Both conversion unit and furnace are developments which have now gone beyond technical circles and promise to go into the basements of countless homes—to cut fuel costs and offer a real solution to the smoke problem.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS

By BOB BECKER

DOG OWNERS continue to ask for help on their problems. Here are some typical letters that can be taken out of the mail bag most any day in the week:

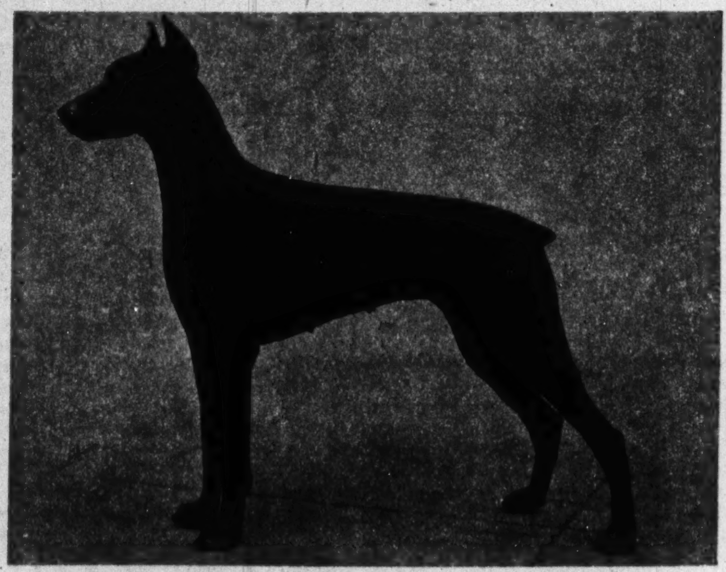
We have a wire-haired puppy 10 months old, and he is beginning to look quite badly for want of some barbering. Do you have any instructions readily available for trimming the coats of these dogs?—F. M. B.

No, this department has no instruction leaflets on how to trim the coats of terriers. Anyway, we doubt if such a leaflet would be much of a help, because the best way to learn how to trim your dog's coat is to take lessons from a handler. It's necessary to get the knack of using a stripping knife.

We have been steady readers of your dog articles, but, not having had a dog at the time, we haven't retained all that we read. Now we are acquiring a 6-week-old cocker spaniel, and we need information on the feeding and care of a dog.—W. F. W.

We are sorry we do not have the space in this department to give you and scores of other readers who have written us similar letters complete information on care and feeding. It would take about 15,000 words to tell you how to feed, train, and care for your puppy. Our advice to every owner of a new dog is to get a book on dog care and read it carefully. Such reading will enable you to raise a healthy, well behaved dog and enable you to avoid many problems of canine misbehavior. Books like "How to Raise and Train Your Puppy," "Care of Your Dog," or "Training Your Dog" are recommended.

I have had a Boston terrier for five years and cannot break him of the habit of barking when the doorbell rings. We keep him in the kitchen when company comes, and he either barks or whines continually. We have spanked him for this, but he still persists. Could you send me any suggestion on how to overcome this problem?—ALICE H. M.



This Doberman pinscher, Ch. Dow's Dodie v. Kienlesberg, has been a consistent winner in recent dog shows. It's owned by Bert D. Dow of Davenport, Ia.

It's important first that you know why your dog behaves as he does. Our guess is he has not been taught obedience, which means he doesn't respect your haphazard discipline or commands. You don't have to lay a hand on a dog that's thoroly trained in obedience. You speak and the dog obeys. In this case one word from you and the dog would keep quiet in the kitchen if he had been trained correctly. The cure is to have the dog trained in obedience. Then you never will have to banish him to the kitchen when company comes. All you have to do is tell him to lie down and he will stay where you want him to stay in the room.

I gave my dog to the army, hoping he may serve his country. Can you tell me how long it takes to train them? I was told I can't see my pet, but I know he is being well cared for. —MRS. L. N.

The average training period of a dog in the K-9 corps is six to eight weeks. You may not see your dog, but the corps will send you a report on your dog if you write and ask for it. Yes, the dogs are well fed and well cared for. We saw them in training, and they thrive on the routine.

Please send me the information on where I can buy books on dog training. I have a German shepherd that is 1 year old.—HAROLD L.

Drop into any book store for your dog training books. Look for "Dog Training Made Easy," by Duncan. It's a good book, and illustrated, too. This department has prepared a small handbook on training entitled "Training the Dog." It tells how to teach a dog to come when called, sit, walk at heel, and obey other commands that every dog should know. The book also gives information on the teaching of tricks. It is sold thru the Public Service Office of The Tribune, 1 South Dearborn street, Chicago, for 30 cents.

My terrier is nearly crazy with fleas. The powders and soaps I have bought only make the fleas jump farther and faster. Can you recommend something which will really kill them?—MRS. S. B. C.

We rely on a dip to kill both fleas and ticks. First you buy the liquid at any pet shop or drug store. It's easy to identify because it has a strong sassafras oil odor. You mix this with water. Put the dog in a metal tub and sponge him with the mixture for several minutes. This will kill fleas at once and ticks in a few hours. We used this preparation all summer to kill ticks. It is nonirritating to the dog's skin.

Chicago Flat-Top, the Wolverine

Carriers must have wind to operate unless they are fitted with catapults; they need the wind's lifting power to get their planes in the air. The Wolverine has no catapult.

In a moment five irregularly shaped black specks were visible against the western sky. They all looked precisely alike, but an officer on the bridge with Captain Lee, glancing at them, announced, "Four J's and an SBD!"

He was right. The J's—"Yellow Peril" navy trainers—circled the carrier, then raced ahead in echelon, followed by the heavy Douglas Dauntless dive bomber. All had their wheels down but the lead dog, piloted by an instructor. In a moment, far ahead, the first two planes peeled off. They made a 180 degree turn and flashed along a mile off the port side. Completing their circle, they roared over the deck.

By that time other J's had peeled off up ahead, and the SBD was completely out of sight. One by one the planes completed their big circles and zoomed the carrier. Now it was time for serious business.

J-19 was coming in again. Standing near the stern against a canvas wind screen, the Wolverine's signal officer extended a round paddle in each hand. J-19's right wing was high, and the right paddle moved up. The pilot dropped his wing and continued the approach. The paddles now warned that he was coming too high. But in a moment they lowered, then the right paddle was smartly brought across the signalman's body in a horizontal plane.

"That tells him to cut the gun," observed Captain Lee, himself a qualified carrier pilot. "This is when a pilot's skin leaves his flesh."

Just past the big yellow "W" on the stern, J-19 dropped sharply and hit the deck, traveling perhaps 65 miles an hour. The hook in its tail engaged a cable, secret arresting gear did its job, and J-19 was at a standstill within a few feet.

Lt. Jimmy Rigg, the deck officer, helmeted and sweatered in brilliant yellow, raced over from the catwalk and spoke a few words to the pilot. Then he ducked under the wing, signaled for the pilot to rev up his engine, and sent him away. The J's wheels were off the wooden deck before the end of the 558 foot runway.

Jig 20 ("Jig" is navy for J) came in next—so high and fast it almost missed the last cable, which would have meant crashing into the barriers. J-17 was wide and outside on the approach and was waved off to try again. Then B-3 roared in, faster than the J's, flaps partially down. The big Dauntless hit hard, bounced once, but was braked to a stop as quickly as the little yellow trainers. A dozen sailors on each wing pushed it back toward the stern to lengthen the take-off run. But the bomber's great engine had lifted it into the air by the time the plane passed the control island.

"These planes, of course, are all based at Glenview naval air station northwest of Chicago," explained Captain Lee. "The pilots have had a great deal of instruction. They have been thru pre-flight, primary, and advanced training and are graduates of carrier qualification training units such as the one at Fort Lauderdale, Fla. They have practiced landing and taking off from strips the size of a carrier deck, but it's a little trick to land on something that's moving out from under you. They catch on quickly, tho. The first two landings are sometimes a little shaky. The third is usually all right, and the men are full of confidence after that."

J-20, waved off, zoomed overhead. "That Jig 20 is a wild man—cut his own gun," somebody complained. "He didn't wait for the signal." J-19 came in with a perfect landing, right down the middle. Captain Lee smiled. "We land every plane ourselves," he said. "We wish 'em on board."

Men lined along the catwalks, four feet below the flight deck, looked like pirates in their bright colored garb, but each color had a meaning. Officers are able to tell any man's job at a glance.

Pilots of the yellow J's and the combat bomber all qualified as carrier men without incident.

They had big grins on their faces as they took off one by one for Glenview. A J pilot shook hands with himself ostentatiously, as a boxer does.

The Wolverine continued plowing into the wind, awaiting more planes. "Bearing to Point Oboe at 10:15 is 276 degrees, 19 miles," announced Lt. John J. Manley, the navigator, drawing a light line in the chartroom. "We use Bahai temple on Point Oboe, in Wilmette, as a bearing point," he explained. "We have other reference points, too—the Palmolive building downtown, water intake cribs, and the radio tower at Great Lakes."

He nodded toward the skipper, who stood on the bridge. "Captain Lee has been in command here since June 3," he said. "Before that he was executive officer on the escort carrier Charger in combat zones. He's served at one time or another on almost every carrier there is since he finished at Annapolis in 1924. He's one of the youngest four-stripers in the navy."

Gulls circled the Wolverine, but vanished when a distant drone was heard. This time there were five TBF's (Grumman Avenger torpedo bombers), led by a Jig. Gray-blue and huge, T-2 plumped solidly onto the deck right between the broken yellow guide lines. As it was being pushed back to take-off position there was a sudden outcry and a sailor was led limping to the side lines.

"Got his foot pinched under a tire," some one explained. The ship's medical officer, a lieutenant, examined the injury and found it was nothing serious. Nevertheless, to make certain, an X-ray examination was scheduled ashore.

T-5, approaching low, was waved off. The wind had risen to 32 knots by now. Torpedo bombers landed one by one on the high-pitching stern and roared away again, becoming air-borne before they reached the control island.

Now T-8, who had made good landings before, was coming in again, a shade low, but apparently headed for a satisfactory landing. The tail hook engaged the first cable—and then things happened! The cable seemed to yield. T-8 careened wildly over to port, and seamen's heads disappeared like magic into the safety shelters beside the catwalk.

In an instant the plane was half-way over, hanging dangerously, its propeller chopping into the cyclone fencing of the catwalk. Two things had kept it from going over the side—its hook had belatedly caught No. 2 cable, and its nose had nudged into one of the steel beams which support the catwalk.

The propeller chattered to a stop. Captain Lee had already given orders to slow the Wolverine and for sailors to get a line on the bomber's near wing. The voice of the Wolverine's air officer, Lt. Comdr. W. L. Blatchford of Winnetka, Ill., boomed reassuringly over the bull horn. Captain Lee next ordered the ship to be swung around easily to get the wind on the port side. "I don't want to blow him over," he explained tersely.

Fire lines had been strung across the deck and asbestos-suited men watched as the pilot climbed slowly from his cockpit. He jumped to the deck, swept his helmet off, and looked at the damaged bomber anxiously. "Not so bad," commented a plane handler. "New prop and some fixing on the landing gear and she'll be ready to go again."

The pilot stood there fingering his helmet, the Mae West life preserver still around his neck. He was a slight kid of about 20 with big ears and brown hair.

"Were you scared?" some one asked. "Hell, no," the kid answered. "I was too busy shutting off switches."

Captain Lee had now come down from the bridge. "Get that heavy line on the starboard side," he ordered. Lieutenant Manley cleared the vicinity of idle spectators. The four remaining TBF's circled in formation while all this was going on, and a red flag was placed at the Wolverine's stern.

"It felt just like an ordinary landing," the pilot said. "I could feel the cable take hold—then all of a sudden she gave, and over I went. I'm not hurt a bit, tho—those new shoulder straps are really a deal."

Captain Lee's examination convinced him that here was a job for the Commerce and her crane. "Head standard," he ordered. "Head for home."

It was time for noon chow, and almost everybody filed below. Captain Lee dined alone. In their wardroom officers talked moodily of the accident. "The cable didn't really break," said Lieutenant Rigg. "The threads were pulled out of a metal fitting. We might as well go in, because it'll take several hours to repair the fitting, anyway."

On the wall hung a wooden plaque which showed that more than 15,000 landings had been made on the Wolverine's deck up to that day. The old ship's two side wheels, each 30 feet in diameter, churned the lake rhythmically, rotated by 8,700 horsepower from the coal-fired boilers. Three visiting officers from the navy's advanced aviation mechanics school at 87th street and Anthony avenue in Chicago asked shrewd questions between bites.

"Almost every kind of navy plane has landed on the old girl's deck," was the answer to one question. "We've had, besides what you saw today, F4F's (Grumman Wildcats), F6F's (Hellcats, an improved Grumman fighter), and the F4U (Corsair), which comes in plenty hot."

Chow was soon over, and the Wolverine was approaching Navy pier. "Request permission to anchor," ordered Captain Lee, who was on the bridge again. A radio message was sped to Capt. Warren K. Berner, commander of the Sable and SOPA (senior officer present afloat). Permission granted, the Wolverine soon hoisted its black "at anchor" ball several hundred yards from the Sable, which had herself remained at anchor that day.

The doughty Commerce was already approaching. To get the TBF onto her deck appeared an impossible job, but it was handled with dispatch and skill. Soon the Commerce was headed for Navy pier, where mechanics would repair the plane, and the Wolverine was steaming northward into the wind again.

Three of the TBF's whose qualification had been interrupted in the morning returned from Glenview as the afternoon's work began. They were accompanied by two F4F Wildcats—stubby fighters whose high torque often veered them to port side on take-offs when handled by inexperienced pilots.

These five pilots qualified with but a single incident; a Wildcat's tire blew out on landing. It was replaced with breathtaking swiftness by a spare which had been ready on the starboard catwalk. It was a routine example of navy efficiency.

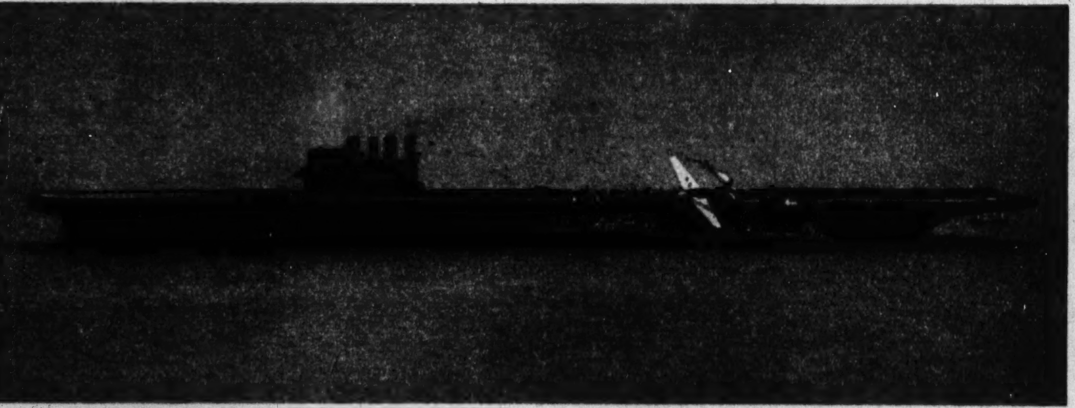
At 4:15 p. m. landlubber's time Captain Lee ordered the Wolverine swung in a wide circle. Something had happened to the Lark; she was falling far behind. In a moment she messaged that a seam had opened and she was shipping water faster than her pumps could expel it.

The circle brought the Wolverine closer, and men on the Lark could be seen bailing with buckets. She flashed a dot-dash message with lights. Captain Lee spelled it out:

"We're . . . trying . . . but . . . we're . . . shipping. . . more . . . water . . . than . . . we . . . can . . . handle."

He radioed to shore for another crash boat as the Lark pulled forlornly alongside. She did not appear in any great danger. After some consideration the captain ordered additional bailing buckets to be tossed over. All hands were using them as the Lark headed slowly for home.

The Wolverine continued circling to avoid getting too far from the rendezvous point. The replacement crash boat soon arrived—another fast, shapely cabin cruiser. The carrier again headed northeast into the wind, which had shifted and was beginning to die down. Ten pilots had been qualified so far, and two hours remained until sunset.



"T-8 careened wildly over to port, and the seamen's heads disappeared like magic into the safety shelters beside the catwalk." Actual photo of landing accident on the Wolverine on "black Tuesday."

"This is the worst day we've ever had," growled Lieutenant Manley, a Chicago veteran who was once marine superintendent of the company which operated the Wolverine as a pleasure craft.

Tho more Wildcats were expected from Glenview, the men were allowed to go below for evening chow. Soon the Wildcats were overhead and the routine of landings began again as men returned to their posts.

F-15 came in beautifully—a stubby Grumman, like the others, painted sky blue on the belly and ocean blue above. In a moment Lieutenant Rigg waved it off again.

With an ear-splitting roar the Wildcat raced down the deck. Toward the bow something went wrong. The plane veered to the left—tho its rudder was hard right. As it was about to go over the side the pilot attempted a desperate wingover. But he was too low and lacked speed. Before any one could blink the plane had struck on its right wing and was in the water off the starboard bow.

All this happened more quickly than you have read these words. The Grumman sank a split second after the Wolverine's stern passed the spot. The pilot went down with his plane, but in a moment bobbed up again, supported by his Mae West. Seconds later he was rescued by the crash boat.

A buoy was thrown out to mark the sunken plane's location for salvage crews. The crash boat pulled alongside, and the pilot, soaked but unhurt, was helped aboard. He was escorted at once to the sick bay for examination.

"This," repeated Lieutenant Manley, emphasizing every word evenly, "is the worst day I've ever seen."

The 300 officers and men on the Wolverine, from Captain Lee down, were gloomy as their ship headed for home. The loss of the fighter ended the day, for already sunset was at hand. Every one was tired and edgy.

It had been a luckless day from beginning to end. Few planes have been lost in carrier training operations on the lake, and each loss is regarded as a personal one by the men on the carriers.

Down below in the wardroom the Wildcat pilot entered from the sick bay, wearing flappy slippers and brown service coveralls. He was a lithe youngster with an erect bearing, bold chin, and crew haircut. He sat down to a plate of chow. Officers gathered around to listen as he told matter-of-factly of his experience.

Up on the bridge Captain Lee, with tired eyes and commands not quite so crisp as those of the morning, was bringing the Wolverine home in the advancing dusk. He kept a sharp lookout for sailboats without proper lights or with red and blue sails invisible in the dark. The eccentrics who sail these boats are a nightmare to carrier officers, as are the curiosity seekers who sail daringly across their bows "to have a look."

The men of the Wolverine had had a weary, long day—twice as long as that of most workers ashore. They had endured, besides, nearly every kind of misadventure which could happen to an aircraft carrier. But tomorrow would be better; the Wolverine would be back in the groove again.

Her anchor chain clanked. In the distance the lights of the Commerce bobbed on the water and her stout chug-a-chug-chug could be heard.

The Wolverine's unlucky day was over.

KNOW YOUR CAMERA

By ANDREW B. HECHT, Ph. D.

Even an action picture can assume the qualities of glamor if it is based on the same meticulous care in preparing the model and selection of angle and lighting which characterize the studio variety of glamor portraits.

YOU CAN MAKE glamor pictures like the ones you see on the covers of movie magazines. The tricks that make these photos click are no more difficult to learn than those used in other types of photography.

Whatever the source of your model's charm is, make it the highlight of your picture. It may be her eyes, hair, neckline, mouth, smile, hands, or figure. Use every step of the picture-taking process to help emphasize her best qualities.

Makeup is necessary, before you even set up your camera. Clothes and accessories are important, too. If your model is wearing jewelry it must be correct—even tho it hardly shows at all in the picture.

Select a setting that is appropriate, and don't let anything out of keeping with your picture creep into the background. Avoid distractions of any sort.

Where "props" are a part of the picture, select them with care. They must fit in with the subject, with her pose, and with the clothes she is wearing.

Lighting is the next thing to consider, and it, too, must be used to bring out your model's charm. Highlight her best qualities, and let the shadows go dark. Flat lighting from the front is to be avoided, of course. It illuminates your subject uniformly, bringing out all features uniformly. Lighting from the side, above, or back is better, for it can be used to select the characteristics you want to emphasize. Spotlights are ideal for this purpose. They leave dark shadows, too, which usually are desirable in pictures of this type.

Camera angle is important. A low angle will emphasize chin and mouth, an eye-level camera position will bring out the eyes, and a high angle will make forehead and hair more important. In full-length pictures a low angle emphasizes the legs and can be used to make the face subordinate to the figure.

The job isn't done when you have tripped the shutter. There are still many ways in which you can improve the picture.

It is a good idea to make a straight print first, to use as a guide, and then see how much you can use your knowledge of control to improve on it.

Every Friskies Cube contains 19 essential food elements . . . 19 vital food factors that dogs need for health and pep. Ample amounts of the proteins, minerals, carbohydrates and vitamins that authorities recommend to help keep your dog's health up to par.

But equally important to you, Friskies has the approval of thousands of dogs as an appetizing daily diet.

You see, Friskies is not a wartime substitute. For ten years, this dog food has proved its goodness and food value.

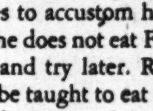
HERE'S HOW TO INTRODUCE YOUR DOG TO FRISKIES

First, give him a few cubes of Friskies from your hand, so he learns their appealing flavor.

Next, mix a little Friskies just as it comes from the package, with his accustomed food.

And Finally, increase the quantity of Friskies in your dog's regular feedings, at the same time reducing the amount of his former food until Friskies is the major item in his daily diet.

Your dog will eat Friskies eagerly, if you follow these simple rules to accustom him to Friskies. If now and then he does not eat Friskies readily, remove his dish and try later. Remember, just as children must be taught to eat the most beneficial foods, so dogs must be trained to new eating habits.



Remember, Friskies is solid food without an ounce of waste. It's thrifty, it's quick, it's ready to use!

Friskies comes in 12 oz. tubes, 2 lb. packages, 4½ lb. and 50 lb. bags.

Dean's has that Country Charm

Because It's Bottled in the Country with All the Cream Left In

YOU'LL never know the utmost satisfaction in milk until you've tried the super-quality Dean's. You'll never know the enjoyment of fresher flavor. You'll never know the glorious goodness of richer creaminess.

But Dean's is not only the milk with that country charm: it is also the milk protected for purity by every modern advance known to dairy science. Dean's is pasteurized immediately upon receipt at dairy—never tank-trucked 50, 60 or 70 miles before pasteurization. And watchfully dairy-tested every day, besides.

Compare Dean's country-bottled milk with any city-bottled milk. You'll be surprised at the difference you will find, a difference you probably do not fully realize could be possible. And a difference you will be glad to discover. Many a housewife will tell you that once you try Dean's no other milk will do.

Dean's never has that tired out taste you have sometimes noticed in other milk. It couldn't have and possess the country charm which tens of thousands of families praise!

Illustrated: A beautiful sculptured carpeting woven by a patented Karagheusian process: Renaissance Carpeting, approximately $11.95 per sq. yd.

Beautiful Carpeting gives a "lift" to the charm of a room. Furniture, dresses, drapes...and human beings too!...all look a little finer because of the good color, texture and design beneath them. Today, because of war work, the rug looms of Gulistan are way behind in satisfying America's demand for this loveliness. And the supplies in the stores are far below the usual level. But the Day of Victory will come at last when happy warriors and their families will set about remaking interiors from the floor up. On that great day, ask for a rug "by the Makers of Gulistan." But in the meantime, check what your dealer has. He may be able to help you re-carpet now!

Pillsbury's HONEY-SPICE SLICES

TEMPERATURE: 375° F. Fills 9x5x3-inch pan. TIME: about 35 to 40 minutes

- 3 tablespoons sugar
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons shortening
- ⅓ cup milk, scalded
- 1 cake compressed yeast or 1 package granular yeast
- ¼ cup lukewarm water
- 1 egg, well beaten
- 3 cups sifted PILLSBURY'S BEST Enriched FLOUR
- 2 tablespoons butter, melted
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- ¾ teaspoon cinnamon
- 2 tablespoons strained honey
- 1⅓ teaspoons butter, melted

1. Add sugar, salt, and shortening to cooled milk. 2. Soften yeast in lukewarm water; add to milk mixture. Add egg. 3. Sift flour once; measure. Add to yeast mixture in two portions, mixing well. 4. Knead about 5 minutes on lightly-floured board until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl. Cover and allow to rise in a warm place (80° to 85° F.) until double in bulk (about 1¼ hours). 5. Roll out in 20x8-inch rectangle. Spread with 2 tablespoons melted butter. Sprinkle with combined sugar and cinnamon. Cut dough into twenty 4x2-inch strips. 6. Form into loaf by placing strips in well-greased loaf pan, arranging them so sugar-coated surface is next to plain surface. Cover and let rise in a warm place until double in bulk (about ¾ hour). 7. Combine honey and remaining 1⅓ teaspoons butter. Drip over top of dough evenly.

8. Bake in hot oven. And there you are . . . your coffee cake looks like a million, tastes like a million. To serve, just break off the slices, each packed with stepped-up, wartime nourishment of Pillsbury's Best.

I was Dead

—AND NOW I AM ALIVE AGAIN

I WAS always a friendly person. I always liked people and they liked me. I got out of high school and went into business, and I got to be the best salesman our firm had. I married a swell girl; we had two kids; and I figured the world was just about right.

Then came the shadow. I could feel it approaching like a storm cloud on the distant horizon. I tried to push it away from me. When somebody spoke to me and I couldn't hear them, I'd smile in a friendly sort of way—hoping that I was getting away with it.

Pretty soon, though, my sales began to drop. I noticed I wasn't getting the welcome that I'd always been accustomed to. When the other fellows got together telling stories, I was always on the outside of the circle, grinning and trying to feel that I was in on the party—but I knew all the time I wasn't.

Pretty soon the shadow that had begun to darken my business life spread into my home. Soon my wife and I didn't swap jokes the way we used to. I noticed that the children talked to me a lot less; maybe they were talking to me and I didn't hear them.

The war came along and I was wild to do whatever I could. Everywhere I went people were kind —but there was nothing doing.

Of course I had been to my doctor, and he just shook his head and said there wasn't anything he could do. I asked him if it would get worse. He was an honest man. He said, "Yes, it very probably may." At that I was just about ready to take the count.

I guess he saw the look of despair on my face, because he leaned forward and patted me on the knee.

"Bill," he said (I've known him ever since I was a kid), "you're just a little behind the times, that's all." I got pretty mad at that—I thought he was kidding me.

"Don't you know," he went on, "that your own Government has tackled this whole problem of deafness and knocked it for a loop? You trot right down to this address," he said, handing me a card, "and get yourself an Acousticon. That hearing aid is based on those same Government findings. Maybe I can't cure your deafness but I certainly know what to do about it now."

Well, I did the three blocks between his office and the Acousticon Institute in my home town in nothing flat. When I came out of that place I felt I could lick the world. I heard sounds I hadn't heard for years. I went right home, although it was the middle of the afternoon. As I let myself in the front door I heard my wife say to the kids, "Here's your father—now don't bother him." Away at the bottom of the stairs I yelled up, "I heard you, and nothing's ever going to bother me any more."

The same thing happened next day when I got to the office. We had a sort of a celebration, and I realized that my friends were just about as happy as I was that I could hear again and that I could get into all their parties and that nobody had to make any allowances for me. I got a part-time job in war work that made me feel I belonged—at last!

Nobody who's never been deaf knows what it means to have a shadow spreading over his whole life, shutting him off from the whole world! Nobody who's never been deaf knows what it means when that shadow begins to lift and the sun begins to shine again.

I was dead—and I am now alive!

Listen, the Thor even got the corporal's socks clean!

The corporal had on a pair of new-issue shoes that fitted him "too soon" in spots. We were slogging through some pretty muggy stuff and he took his shoes off. We bet he'd never get his socks clean, but the laugh was on us after he had used the Thor Washer we've got in camp.

Imagine having a Thor away out here, just like the one at home. Only here it works every day and all day, with guys standing in line. Every day is Monday here for the Thor. It sure takes a beating, like washing the corporal's socks, but nothing fazes it.

• The only Thors being made now are being built for the Army and Navy. The Thor you might have owned is probably in some far off camp or outpost—just where you'd want it to be.

Day after day these Thors are fighting dirt for men who fight—in steaming jungles or frozen uplands of the north.

In the meantime, our engineers have completed plans for an Automatic Thor that does things you never dreamed were possible—and does them automatically. Wait till you see it!

Buy bonds and more bonds now, to hurry the day of peace, and to be sure of a new Thor right after the war. One will be ready for you then . . . and it will be the pride and joy of your household.

"Even under photographers' 1000-watt lights I have to look exquisite!" Pat Boyd says. "What's more, I simply can't risk injury to the expensive clothes I model in. So it was a load off my mind when I found a deodorant that really did the job—Odorono Cream!

"The point is, Odorono Cream contains a really effective perspiration-stopper. It simply closes the tiny sweat glands and keeps them closed—up to 3 days.

"Odorono Cream is safe, too. Even after shaving it is non-irritating—it actually contains soothing emollients. Also, I've proved that it won't rot fabrics. I just follow directions and use it as often as I like. And think of it! Odorono Cream gives you up to 21 more applications for 39¢ than other leading deodorant creams. What a saving!

"So to every girl who'd like to be 'Cover-Girl glamourous' . . . here's my advice: use Odorono Cream!"

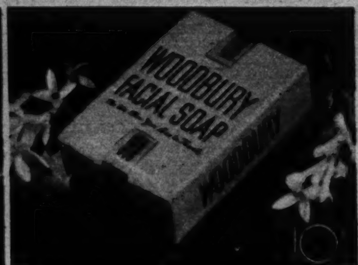
HER AMBITIONS...TO WIN THE WAR and Romance

CLOSING whistle is war worker's cue for a Woodbury Facial Cocktail. Lovely Evana Vance, of Curtiss-Wright Propeller Plant, Caldwell, N. J., says: "Comes closing time, I can look fresh as a deb, by giving my skin a Woodbury Facial Cocktail." For gentle cleansing care, for a smoother, lovelier complexion, try Woodbury—a true skin soap.

1. Proud of her job, Evana helps make propeller blades for pursuit planes. Her beauty soap is pure, gentle. Contains a costly ingredient for extra mildness.

2. "I fluff up a rich lather of Woodbury Soap," says Evana. "Smooth it over my face, being careful to remove tiny shavings and oil smudge . . . then rinse."

3. "If my face looks radiant, it's partly love—but mostly Woodbury," says Evana. Mild Woodbury helps soften flaky skin; helps freshen too-oily skin.



4. "For the skin you love to touch," try Woodbury. Let this famous soap uncover the glamour in your complexion, as it has for America's loveliest girls.

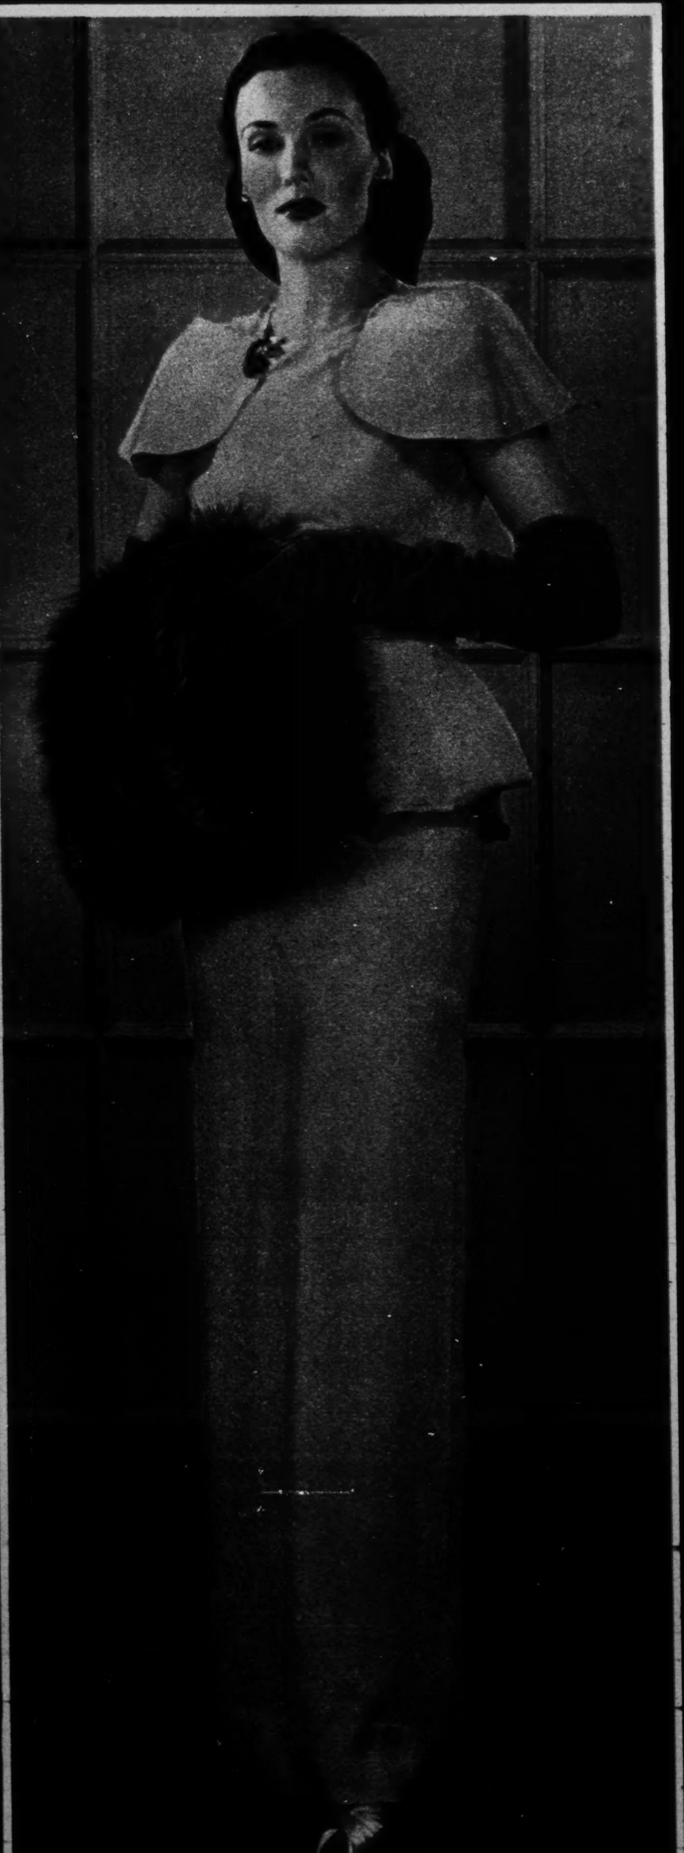
ANNUAL

AN UNUSUAL THREE-PIECE COSTUME, one of the winners of prizes in The Tribune's American Fashions competition, features a daring contrast of colors, shocking pink and black. Under the detachable long skirt of shocking pink is a day time length skirt of dull black crepe. The same jacket is worn with both skirts. Rows of rolled bands of the shocking pink edge the cuffs of the three-quarter length sleeves and the lower jacket line, and flowers of the same color are attached on each side of the chest. Long gloves combine the two colors and fabrics of the costume. The designer, Nancy Layton of New York City.



An orange colored dull crepe dinner gown combines a long, straight sheath skirt with a deftly detailed bodice top. Folds of the crepe fashion the flattering peplum as well as the shallow cape effect. The designer, Shirley Fernamburg of New York City.

IT SURE WAS SWELL O' YOUR FOLKS, JOCKO, TO TAKE US IN…
AW, YOU'RE FRIENDS O' OURS, AIN'TCHA?
WE AIN'T BIG SHOTS, ANNIE! I'M JUST A BROKEN-DOWN OLD EX-FIGHTER TRYIN' TO BE A CONTRACTOR!
OUR SHACK AIN'T NO GILDED PALACE! BUT IT'S OUR HOME! IN MY BOOK, THAT MEANS IT'S OUR FRIENDS' HOME, TOO!

BUT WHY? WE HARDLY KNEW YOU… YET IT WAS YOU WHO CAME FORWARD WHEN OUR WORLD WENT TO PIECES…
IT DOESN'T TAKE SOME FOLKS FORTY YEARS TO SPOT RIGHT PEOPLE!
YOU WERE AWFULLY GOOD AND KIND TO OUR CHILDREN…
ER… IT REALLY WAS ANNIE WHO ASKED JOCKO AND SIS TO OUR PLACE…
WE FIGGER YOU'RE ALL OFF TH' SAME SHELF! …TH' TOP ONE!
BUT TO CROWD IN ON YOU THIS WAY!
IT'S JUST BETWEEN ROUNDS! WE'LL SOON HAVE SPIKE BACK IN, SLUGGIN' FER KEEPS! YOU'LL SEE!

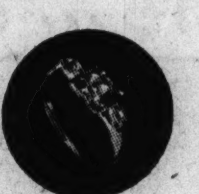
MURIEL LUNGER'S BEAUTY is serene and poised. Small and slight, her eyes are a dreamy grey-blue, her hair light gold, her soft-smooth Pond's complexion fine-grained as a rose petal.



HER RING—the diamond is set in platinum with a small diamond either side. The slender band is gold.

SHE'S ENGAGED!

She's Lovely! She uses Pond's!

CHARMING MURIEL LUNGER, daughter of the well-known Mr. and Mrs. William S. Lunger of Washington, D.C., engaged to Raymond W. Hitchens of Baltimore—both he and Muriel have essential war jobs at Bendix.

WAKING up at 8:30 P.M., eating lunch at 3 in the morning, seems quite natural to Muriel now. She's simply reversed her clock.

"I've discovered one thing," she says. "Long hours working on a war job have made me extra fussy about how I look. I just love slipping into something pretty at home, and adore creaming my face with Pond's to make my skin feel all glowy—and so clean and soft!"

Copy Muriel's soft-smooth beauty care—like this:

SMOOTH on Pond's Cold Cream and pat briskly to work its softening creaminess all over your face and throat. This softens and releases dirt and make-up. Now—tissue off.

"RINSE" with more Pond's for extra cleansing and softening. Whirl your Pond's coated fingertips around in little spirals—over your eyebrows, your cheeks, your nose and mouth. Tissue off again.

Give your face this twice-over Pond's creaming every night, every morning—and for daytime clean-ups!

It's no accident lovely engaged girls like Muriel, noted society beauties like Mrs. Geraldine Spreckels and Britain's Viscountess Milton are so devoted to Pond's! Get your jar today!

WAR WORKER—Muriel Lunger and her mother have both taken war jobs at Bendix. Muriel is testing altimeters, her mother is on the assembly line.

OFFICIAL WAR MESSAGE

There's a war job for you—in a plant, store, office, restaurant, transportation company, community service. Check your local Help Wanted ads for specific needs. Then see the local United States Employment Service.

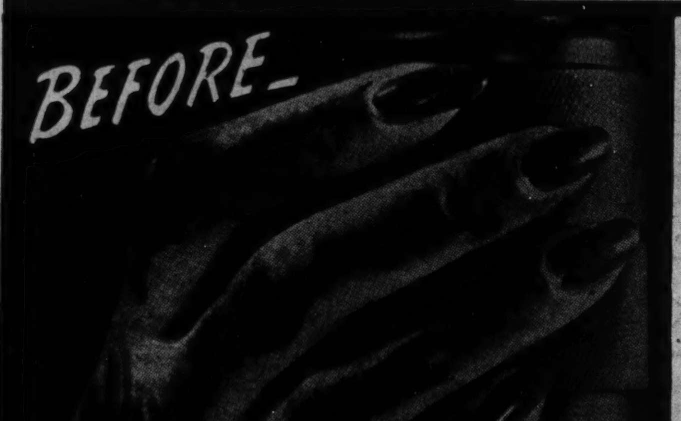
LICK STUBBORN GRIME IN 30 TO 50 SECONDS WITH LAVA

Gets Hands Cleaner—Faster—Easier—than Ordinary Wash-ups Ever Can!



DOUBLE Action Soap—Fast, Yet Amazingly Gentle!

HERE'S why LAVA Soap goes deep—and gets ground-in grime that ordinary toilet soaps miss:

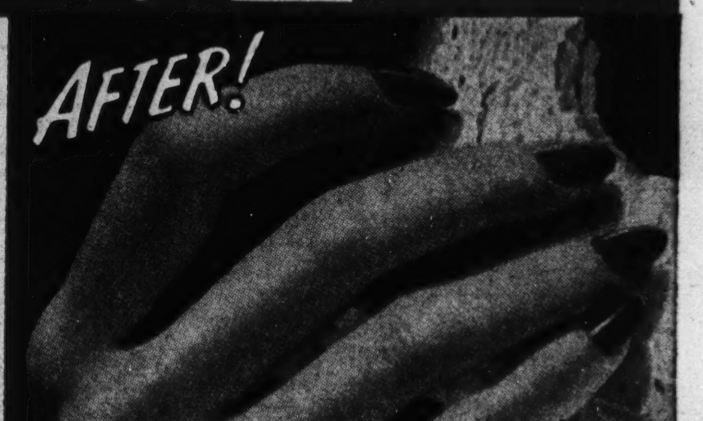
1. FAST-ACTING SOAP—like fine castile...(with same soothing ingredient as in costly face creams)...
2. PLUS SPECIAL ACTION! Same super-fine cleaner dentists use to clean precious tooth enamel.

That double LAVA action thoroughly cleans even skin creases, around nails, knuckles—in 30 to 50 seconds! ... Routs many germs, helps nicks and cuts to heal!

Fast as it cleans, LAVA's amazingly gentle—even for Mother's skin, or children's grimy hands, arms, legs. Its satin-smooth lather leaves skin soothed, smoother. Saves towels plenty, too!

Even on economy, LAVA beats ordinary toilet soaps. So get plenty—for Mom—Dad—and the kids. At your regular store.

WAR WORKERS—GUARD YOUR HANDS! Healthy hands boost war production. Help guard nicks and cuts from infection. Wash hands thoroughly and often.



Nothing Cleans Better than—

LAVA

LAVA SAVES TOWELS, plenty! Gets kids clean quick! Dirt's washed off, not "toweled" off!

NOTE: When dry, bar feels slightly rough—but instantly, when wet, it's THE GOOD GRAY BAR WITH THE CREAMY, SNOW-WHITE LATHER!

ZINGO! DIRT'S GONE...even around nails and knuckles...and hands feel fine, actually smoother! LAVA's fast—yet amazingly gentle. Lathers creamy-smooth in hot or cold water, hard or soft.

THE POLICEMAN HUNTED GINKY.

IN JAIL

THE pint glass fruit jar which the Teenie Weenies had found made a very respectable jail. The Turk and the Old Soldier, with a wooden leg, had cut a door thru the metal top and it was now as mouseproof as a jail could be.

"Now," said the General when the jail had been finished, "we must catch Ginky and get him in there. We can't let him break into our houses without punishment. It is a very serious thing to break into folks' houses and the mouse must be made to understand that."

"Just give me a little time and I'll arrest him," said the Policeman, "but I'll need some help for Ginky is a very clever and powerful mouse and he'll put up quite a fight before he can be put into jail."

The Policeman chose the Turk, the Sailor, Gogo and the Cowboy to help him hunt down and arrest Ginky. The little men hunted for days without ever seeing Ginky for he seldom stayed long in one place. You might say he was a sort of tramp for he slept in hollow trees, under boards and even in big people's houses. One day a friendly sparrow told the Policeman that he had seen Ginky going into a hole under a stump.

"He's been hanging around that stump for a couple of days," the bird told the Policeman.

The Policeman and his helpers found the stump and they could see that it was a likely place for Ginky to be in. There was a bush growing quite near the stump and the Cowboy suggested that he could catch the mouse by hiding in the bush with his lasso.

"I can crawl out on that limb right over the hole," said the Cowboy, "and when Ginky comes out of the hole I can easily drop my rope over his head and then we'll have him."

The little men knew that Ginky was in the hole for they could see fresh tracks leading under the stump, and so the Cowboy quietly climbed the bush and worked his way out onto the limb directly over the hole while the other Teenie Weenies hid in the tall grass near-by ready to grab the mouse when he had been lassoed. The Teenie Weenies waited for nearly three hours before Ginky appeared. He stuck his head out of the hole and sniffed the air.

"He probably smells us and won't come out now," thought the Cowboy.

Ginky stood for several minutes just inside the hole and it was plain to see that he was very suspicious, but presently he came out a little way and the Cowboy dropped his lasso over the mouse's head and jerked the rope tight. Ginky squealed loudly and frantically pulled at the rope, but the Cowboy had tied the end of the lasso securely to the bush and the mouse was caught. The Policeman, the Turk, Gogo and the Sailor came running in and they finally subdued Ginky but it was a terrible tussle. In fact, the Policeman had to club the mouse several times over the ears to make him be quiet. Then the Teenie Weenies tied the mouse's front paws together and started for the Teenie Weenie village. Ginky went along quietly with the Teenie Weenies until they tried to put him into the Teenie Weenie jail and then he fought like fury, but at last the Teenie Weenies got him in the jar.

When the door was shut and locked Ginky lay down on a bed of dry grass which the Teenie Weenies had made for him. He didn't seem to mind being in jail for he soon curled on the grass and went to sleep. He never awakened when the Policeman brought in two grains of corn and an acorn bucket of water for his supper. The next morning he was still sleeping altho the corn had been eaten and the acorn was nearly empty.

"Ginky doesn't seem to mind being in jail," the Doctor said after the mouse had slept thru four days of prison life.

"I should think he wouldn't," said the Dunce. "I think he's having it pretty soft with no work to do, his food brought to him and having all the sleep he wants."

"Maybe you'd like to change places with Ginky?" laughed the General.

"Not on your life," answered the Dunce. "I'd rather have my freedom even tho I have to work for it."

Watch the dreft miracle clean dishes without wiping!

ENDORSED BY LEADING AUTHORITIES

"I've seen it with my own eyes," says Barbara Reid Robson, famous home economist. "When dishes are as clean as Dreft gets them, they just don't need wiping." U. S. Health Authorities heartily endorse this modern dishwashing made practical by Dreft. Say it is far more sanitary than the old soap washing way.

See even glasses wash so sparkling clean they don't need wiping!

See for yourself—dishwashing can now be easier, quicker, cleaner, than with any soap you've ever used. That's an amazing statement—but see with your own eyes that Dreft washes even glassware so crystal clear that wiping is needless. Dreft is first to do this.

Modern advance in dishwashing made possible by Dreft

Dreft washes dishes clean as no soap can, because Dreft is different. 7 patents in the U. S. Patent Office prove this. And you will see the difference, yourself. For with any soap you've ever used dishes dry streaked, cloudy, dull, if you don't wipe them. With Dreft dishes come out of rinse water really clean—so clean they dry streakless, cloudless, dazzling clean.

Even Dreft suds are different

Dreft makes 5 times more suds than any soap in hardest water. And these mild Dreft suds won't redden or roughen hands. For Dreft is non-alkaline—neutral as pure drinking water. So for easier, quicker, cleaner, dishwashing—with a new kind of mildness for hands—try Dreft. You'll say Dreft is a new miracle.

NOTE: As the war limits the amount of Dreft available, use it wisely. Measure it out. A little will go a long way.

dreft The amazing suds discovery!

GETS DISHES SO SHINING CLEAN THEY DON'T NEED WIPING

Dreft works wonders for dishes! No soap you've ever used could do what DREFT does!

SICILY VETERAN HEADS COLORED SELFRIDGE UNIT

Trains More Negro Combat Pilots.

BY ROSCOE SIMMONS.

Lt. Col. Davis.

Selfridge Field, Mich., Oct. 23—It was more silver lining than cloud for Selfridge field when Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr. was inducted as executive officer of the 332d fighter group.

All Selfridge put on its best for the occasion, glad that the more pleasant hour had struck for a place harassed by a chain of circumstances that got out of hand.

Talk of Sicily Action.

Visitors who had come in for the event dwelt on the recent exploits of Col. Davis in the Sicilian campaign, but there were those who felt that the war department was anointing him with an authority new to the customs of the army.

But the day was not entirely one for Col. Davis, regarded by many as the model West Pointer. A father stepped into the scene, and that father went back to the Spanish-American war. It was for that conflict that Col. Davis' father, Gen. B. O. Davis Sr., enlisted as a private from Washington, D. C.

Now he was present as a brigadier general on the staff of the inspector general of the army, an official witness to the induction of his only son as an executive officer in one of the great air fields of the country, this beginning a new era for the American Negro soldier.

Star in His Eyes.

At dinner a Negro soldier, waiting on the officers and their party, had fixed his eyes on the star which decorates the expensive shoulders of Gen. Davis. He seemed blind to all else about him. He tipped a cup of coffee, which spilled over two officers.

"Excuse me, please do," he said, a great smile playing a chubby countenance. "But I was just looking. I heard talk of the colored general. I have seen him; now I'm ready for any questions either Hitler or the Japs want to ask me," is the way he put it to comrades.

A dozen officers' hands went up in forgiveness and he went his way rejoicing.

Col. Davis was ordered home from Sicily to undertake the training of American flyers. He had led the 99th squadron in a campaign nothing short of an eye-opener to the command in Africa. Within four months the 99th had proved all talk of unreadiness of the American trained Negro flyers for combat against any foe was but dumb doubt.

Win Fellows' Respect.

The conduct of the 99th in the air won the admiration of their fellow American flyers and the surprised respect of the British.

"They were the gallant boys," said Col. Davis, "alert under fire, brave enough, holding back nothing. Americans thru and thru, and I hated to leave them, but I'll be seeing them soon again, I hope."

Of his own exploits Col. Davis would say nothing, with him it was "we" for even the little he would consent to tell of the conduct of his comrades.

"We landed at Casablanca in April," he said, "and we were busy with the enemy until we reached Sicily. We undertook every mission assigned to us and it is said we failed in none."

Daily Deadly Task.

Engagements took the 99th from Tunis to the Italian boot, and for 11 days over Pantelleria the 99th fighters threw their ships thru the air in ceaseless combat. Dive bombing, the deadliest warfare in the air, became a daily dask. "They didn't miss and they didn't flinch," said Col. Davis.

"Every opportunity was afforded us," he said, "to show what we could do, and we stand on the record." Col. Davis was sent home to ready other colored flyers for air war in both the Atlantic and Pacific.

From the hard engagement over Pantelleria the 99th moved to defensive routine patrol, but soon began to provide escort of protection for the movement against Sicily. It became a major air support unit, and as such participated in the battle of Salerno.

For 13 days Col. Davis and his fighters covered the movements and landings of the troops bound for Sicily. "Those are days we can never forget," he said. "We had 37 pilots, and every pilot was an American soldier.

"We saw all the soldiers engaged with us, the French, the British, and the utterly fearless Gourmerliers, but we had every reason to be proud of the boys in the uniform of the United States," said Col. Davis.

When early in September the allied forces began its movement on Italy the 99th was called on to cover. "It was the highest hour for our fighters," said Col. Davis.

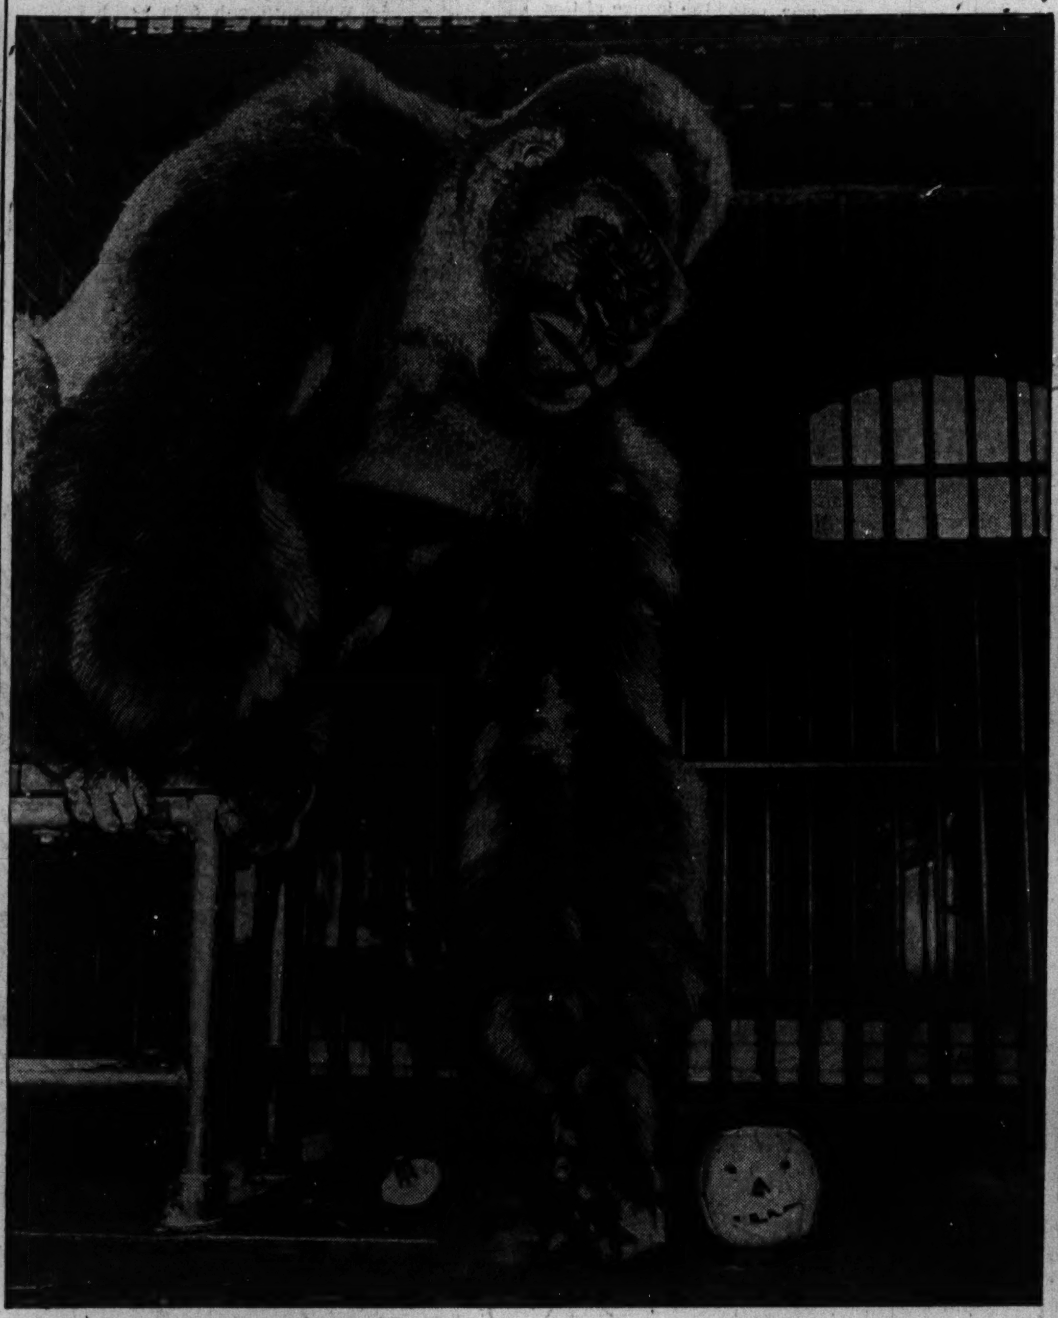
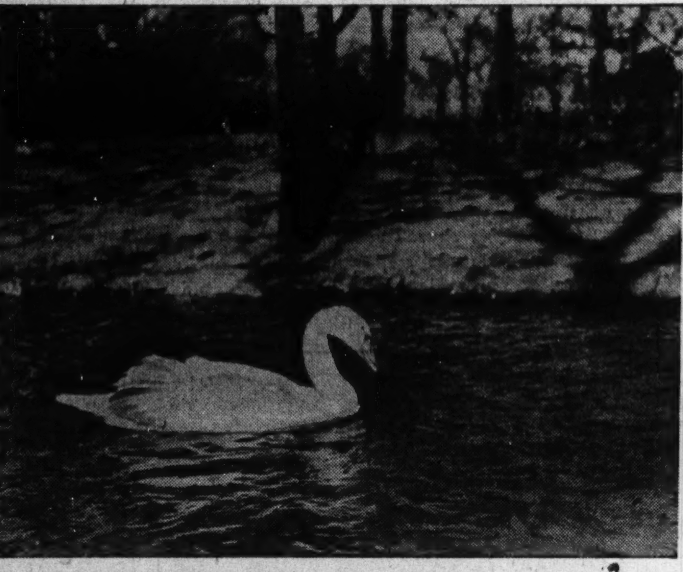
Lincoln Park Zoo, Now 75 Years Old, Is City's Pride with 750 Animals and Birds



Bushman, the finest specimen of gorilla in captivity, reaches for a jack o' lantern in his cage in Lincoln Park zoo. He wasn't too much impressed with the idea of Halloween, for, as soon as he got his hand on the pumpkin, he threw it out of the cage. Bushman is close to 7 feet tall and weighs about 550 pounds. He is a vegetarian and lives on a diet of fresh fruits and vegetables and boiled potatoes. Grapes are his favorite food. His disposition has been described as "quite good for a gorilla," but he is extremely jealous if he isn't always the center of attention. Bushman is 1 of 750 animals, birds, and reptiles at the zoo, which this year is celebrating its 75th anniversary.

She's the only Diana monkey known to have been born in captivity, but about all of Diane that can be seen here is a pair of eyes peering out from behind her mother's leg, and a white fluff, a distinguishing mark of the species. Diane ran to her mother for protection when the photographer appeared. She was born April 15 and is one of the great attractions of the zoo. Floyd Young is the present director. The zoo covers 25 acres and includes five exhibition halls, five barns, a sea lion pool, many dens and pits, and fenced-in yards for fowl.



This swan in the bird sanctuary is 1 of 13—9 white and 4 black—now in possession of Lincoln Park zoo. In 1868 the zoo was opened with 2 pairs of white swans, donated by Central park of New York, as the first exhibit. Owners of animals and birds that were too much trouble to keep at home began giving their pets to the zoo. In 1874 the park commissioners bought a kangaroo, a condor, 2 bears, and 2 peafowl, and in the same year a traveling circus donated a lion. The zoo became a popular place. Over three million persons now attend annually.

Judy, with wisps of straw on her forehead, curls her trunk for her keeper, Harvey Carlisle. Judy is Lincoln Park zoo's most recent acquisition. In July she was bought from the Brookfield zoo for $2,500. She had to walk 18 miles to her new home, after she had smashed the sides of a truck trailer intended to convey her in style to Lincoln park. Aside from this outburst, however, Judy has been dignified and sedate in her new home.

CLUB OF BOYS, FORMED YEARS AGO, TO GATHER

Monarchs Meet Old Chums Tomorrow.

BY LEWIS WILLIAMS.

Tomorrow they'll be Dick, Hank, and Freddy, not Mr. Pritchard, Mr. Cassriel, and Mr. Green. Once more the members of the Monarch club will revert to the roles of summer vacationing boys, casting aside their usual part as successful business men.

The occasion, a dinner in the Union League club, will mark the 40th anniversary of the forming of the club by a group of 12 to 15 year old boys.

For 40 years, rain or shine, peace or war, transportation difficulties or not, the 14 living members of the original group of 19 have met for an annual dinner. The 10 still living in the Chicago area have kept up a schedule of meeting once a month in each other's homes.

Group Were Playmates.

For a group shaped so informally the Monarch club has enjoyed an exceptional life. Forty years ago the members were just a group of west side boys playing ball on a vacant lot at Van Buren street and Hermitage avenue. A summer crowded with pleasant memories of association was drawing to a close on the day that a sudden squall drove the boys from their playground to the shelter of an awning in front of a grocery store across the street.

There J. Earl Pringle, who is now in the printing business, suggested the formation of a club to insure continued good times for the group. His motion was quickly seconded by Henry E. Cassriel, now in the dental supply business, and the rest of the boys shouted immediate approval. Casting about for a name for the newly formed unit the boys spied a catsup bottle in the store window and named their club after the Monarch brand.

Continues Thru Years.

Thru grade school, high school, and college the group continued its recreation activities. During the World war, in which one of its members was killed, the club launched a philanthropic program which has continued to this day. Then the members were struggling for places in the business world. Now they have all attained places of prominence and are much more able to back a program of charity which is centered in the preparation of Christmas baskets. Cases worthy of consideration by the club are selected by the Deaconess home of the Epiphany Episcopal church at Adams street and Ashland avenue, in the club's old home territory.

The big meeting of the year is the annual anniversary of the club's founding, and tomorrow's, which

3d Generation Goes to War on Germany

BY AGNES AHERN.

In 1871 Michel Schalck, 1722 North Mozart street, donned the uniform of the French marines to fight against Germany in the Franco-Prussian war. Since that time fighting against Germany has become a tradition in the Schalck family. Michel's son, Arthur, was a corporal in the United States army in World War I. His grandson is now wearing the uniform of a lieutenant in the navy.

Today, from the vantage point of his 96 years, Michel Schalck is wondering if his great-grandson, Michael Robin Schalck, will find it necessary to carry on the military tradition that three generations of wars have established in the family.

Summers on Fruit Farm.

Michel Schalck, who was born in Alsace Lorraine Dec. 24, 1846, served as a private in the war of 1871. He came thru the conflict unscathed and emigrated to Chicago in 1872. Here he established his own business as a building contractor, making his home on Mozart avenue. After his retirement at the age of 65, he spent the next 10 summers operating a fruit farm at Benton Harbor, Mich. During the winters he made his home in Chicago, as he has continued to do in recent years.

At the time of the Iroquois theater fire in 1903, Mr. Schalck distinguished himself by his heroic rescue of a woman. An account of the incident, published in the CHICAGO TRIBUNE of Dec. 31, 1903, follows:

Face, Hands Burned.

"M. Schalck of 709 North Mozart street was in the balcony with his wife. With one arm around her, he fought his way to a place of safety and then turned to save a woman who was caught between a seat and a dead body. He wrenched the woman free, though she fainted. Schalck found his first avenue of escape cut off as he returned, and his face and hands were badly burned as he bore out the unconscious victim."

When Germany opened hostilities against the United States during the first World war, Michel Schalck's son, Arthur, became a member of the 56th army engineers. He was in the army for a year and a half, serving as a corporal overseas for 11 months. Like his father, he came back from the wars uninjured. Now a resident of North Chicago, he is vice president and general manager of the Cyclone Fence company.

Stationed in Detroit.

Arthur's son, Walter S. Schalck, was graduated from Purdue university just five months after Pearl Harbor. On his commencement day he was commissioned an ensign in the navy, and a year later, in May, 1943, he was made a lieutenant [j. g.]. He is assigned to the bureau of ships in Detroit, Mich., where he is making his home with his wife, Elaine, and their infant son, Michael Robin.

It is not often that the four generations of the Schalck family are able to get together these days. But when they do here is always an unspoken question in the minds of Michael Robin's great-grandfather, grandfather, and father. Will this baby, born into a world at war, attain his majority during another world conflict? The Schalcks wonder—and hope.

DANCES, GAMES IN PARKS MARK ANNUAL REVELS

Program to Abate Mischief.

Emphasizing the importance of planned recreation in a program designed to provide relaxation from war strain, the park district has planned a series of Halloween parties in 96 fieldhouses during the coming week. The program will serve a dual purpose as the parties are expected to lessen considerably the destruction caused by mischievous pranksters.

The parties will feature the usual games, dances, parades, stunts, costume contests, treasure hunts, community singing, apple bobbing, and candy scrambles. Most of the prizes offered in contests this year will be in the form of war bonds and stamps.

Programs on Week-end.

Highlights of the week's program will be Saturday night parties, but some parks are planning equally big celebrations for Friday night. As usual prizes, refreshments, and decorations are being provided by civic leaders and business men.

The fullest schedule of activity on the north side is slated at Welles park, Montrose and Western avenues, where festivities start Tuesday and conclude Saturday.

Tuesday the Victory Mothers of Boys in Service will stage a special Halloween gathering under the leadership of Emmanuel Schwartz, Marie Bassi, and Mrs. Mary F. Heimsoth. Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. the Welles Park Square Dancing club will devote its evening to Halloween features and events.

Plan Girl Programs.

On Thursday afternoon the midget and junior girls gym classes will hold a Halloween frolic under the direction of Norma Jeffrey. The same afternoon Girl Scouts will gather in the park. Thursday night Miss Jeffrey will direct an intermedite girls party in the gym at 7 p. m. and the Welles Park Social Dance club will gather at 8 p. m.

Friday the midget, junior, and intermediate boys gym classes will hold parties as will Boy Scout troop 903. The Artcraft class has scheduled a special Halloween event for Saturday at 1 p. m. to be followed by a senior artcraft group party at 3:30.

Sponsoring groups for the Welles park programs include the Lincoln Square, North Center, and Ravenswood OCD, the Welles Park Woman's club, Boy Scouts, Service Men's club, Social Dancing, and Square Dance clubs.

Chase Park Parade.

A gigantic parade, expected to draw 2,000 youngsters, will highlight the program at Chase park, 4701 North Ashland avenue, Saturday night. The parade will start at 7:45 o'clock and its line of march lies along Leland avenue to Racine avenue, on Racine to Wilson avenue, on Wilson to Ashland avenue, and north on Ashland to the park. Costumes of paraders will be judged on the route and prizes will be awarded at the park where community singing, movies, and other entertainment are planned. Refreshments will be served.

Paul B. Joring, Ravenswood OCD zone captain, is chairman of the judging committee on which will serve Ald. Frank O. Hilburn [47th]; Ald. Robert Quirk [48th]; Richard Westerberg, president, Uptown Clark Street Business association; Frank Lyman, Democratic committeeman of the 48th ward; Carl P. Wagner, and Robert Burton, Ravenswood OCD captains; Walter R. Briggs, scoutmaster of troop 902; Frank A. Hunt, president of the Community club of Sheridan park; Fred Schenck, president, Sheridan Park Neighborhood club, and A. L. Hoffman, Central Uptown association.

Seward Park Plans.

Seward park, [illegible]75 West Elm street, will also stage a parade around its playfield [illegible] a chamber of horrors. Games and refreshments are being planned under the direction of John Merlo and with the cooperation of the North Side Civic committee. The party will be held Friday night.

Climaxing the week's activities at Lake Shore park, Chicago avenue and Lake Shore drive, will be a Halloween party Saturday starting at 7 p. m. Games and dancing have been planned and prizes will be awarded for the best costumes. Richard Russell, park supervisor, is in charge of arrangements.

WINNETKA PLAN GROUP REVEALS POST-WAR AIMS

Village Finances Shown in Fiscal Report.

In the recently published annual report for the last fiscal year, the village of Winnetka has set forth in its plans for its post-war future and its accomplishments during the first full year of the country's participation in the war.

Of greatest relative importance to village residents is the section dealing with "planning for the future" which lists five projects which will receive immediate consideration once the war is won.

Heading the list of projected improvements is a plan for adequate sanitary and storm sewer facilities for improved sections of Winnetka and vacant subdivisions in the west part of the village. Water supply will be provided for these undeveloped areas in anticipation of post-war expansion.

Plan Street Extension.

Also being designed is a practical plan for the extension of Lincoln avenue from Elm street to Oak street, which calls for the improvement of adjacent property by the railroad and private owners.

The village also hopes to acquire the old Horace Mann school site from the board of education. Present plans call for the conversion of the plot into a public parking lot. Repaving and widening of nearby streets is also being considered.

Motor fuel tax projects planned include the improvement of Willow road from Provident avenue to the west village limits and the installation of a uniform system of traffic signals along Green Bay road.

Rummler Heads Commission.

The Winnetka plan commission is headed by Eugene A. Rummler and includes Arthur E. Bryson, Louis H. Northrup, Beverly B. Vedder, W. Lindsey Suter, Margaret Buchen, R. D. Wood, Arthur C. F. Gedge, and B. F. Affleck.

The zoning commission and board of appeals is headed by Beverly Vedder and includes Frank F. Fowle, J. L. Hamilton, Horace W. Armstrong, and Joseph E. Fitch.

The annual report of village finances showed total assets of $4,707,865. In his report, Treasurer Holland F. FlaHavhan said revenue receipts for the year, exclusive of special assessments, totaled more than $807,000 while disbursements were approximately $552,000. The village continued to operate under budget control with all accounts audited semi-annually.

Crime Rate Is Low.

The report showed that the police department enjoyed unusual success and in no instance was the crime rate as high in Winnetka as in other United States cities of comparable size. No cases of murder, rape, or aggravated assault were reported and there was less than one robbery per 10,000 population whereas two is the average for cities of between 10,000 and 25,000 population. Only two automobiles were stolen in Winnetka last year whereas 16 is about the national average for cities of the same size. The police department, which is headed by Chief W. M. Peterson, was able to report a high percentage of stolen good recovered.

Fire Marshal George M. Houren's department was also able to file an excellent report, showing the fire per capita loss in Winnetka to be $1.07 as compared to the national average of $1.35 in similar towns.

In a letter included in the report and addressed to the residents of Winnetka, Arthur E. Bryson, village president, said, "As Winnetka sends forth her sons and daughters to distant battle fronts, it is a responsibility for us at home to make certain that there remains an informed and unselfish citizenry on which the perpetuation of free institutions depends. For that reason your village government has prepared this report."

SICILY VETERAN HEADS COLORED SELFRIDGE UNIT

Chief of 99th to Train New Negro Flyers.

They were up in the thickest of the conflict. They knew that they had done well and had won the attention of Gen. Eisenhower's command.

When the 5th army effected its crossing and moved into Italy the 99th moved in with them. The American command gave every evidence of pride in the skill and faithfulness of its daring colored fighters in the air.

Now Col. Davis is back as chief executive to Col. Robert Selway Jr., commander of fighter units at Selfridge field. He will train the 332d fighter group, which is the heart of men at Selfridge getting ready for air combat.

"Two things," said Col. Davis, "I would like to speak of. First, the morale of our boys both as exhibited in Africa and in Italy; then, the comforting gallantry and kindness of Josephine Baker, a great American girl, who took us to her heart and became our friend, our monitor, and our comrade. Our country will owe much to her, and in Africa she was all the world to us."

The entire base at Selfridge, without race or color distinction, gave Col. Davis a soldier's reception, the warmest yet seen at this field.

No one, not even Col. Davis' soldier-father, seemed happier than base commander Col. William Boyd and Col. Selway.

KEEP WARY EYE ON OVERHEAD—YOUR ROOFING

Repairs Should Be Made in Next Few Weeks.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Now is the time to be keeping an eye on the overhead, for the roof, and what happens to it, this coming winter is of considerable importance. If repairs are to be made, or a new roof is needed, the weeks before ice and snow arrive are the best to have the work done.

In roof inspection, one of the first things to check is the condition of shingles. If any are loose, they should be nailed tightly and any that are missing should be replaced.

Wood Shingle Repairs.

Sometimes a wood shingle roof which has a tendency to leak can have its life extended by application of a compound of asbestos and asphalt fibers. A good roofer could advise on whether or not this is practical, or whether a new roof is needed.

There are definite advantages in placing a new roof directly on top of the old one. Some added heat resistance and stiffness is afforded, in addition to saving on labor costs and the avoidance of dirt outside and inside the house.

Where there is roll roofing there is need for application of roof coating every four or five years. This will renew the dried out oils which in time can make the roofing brittle. If this type roofing is too badly dried or rotted a coating will not restore it.

Paint the Tin Roof.

A tin roof should be kept well painted to guard against rust. Red lead gives excellent protection. If there are holes they can be closed with plastic roofing cement. Liquid asphalt roofing cement also can be used for a tin roof in place of paint.

The condition of flashing should be most carefully checked. These flashings, which are the metal protection placed at angles and corners where shingles cannot give proper coverage, must be kept free from leaks. They can be kept in good condition by painting with lead or oil paints. Where signs of wear are evident it is advisable to trowel on a coat of asbestos roof putty.

Any roofing material of ordinary weight can be selected for a new roof which is to be laid over an old one such as wood shingles, asphalt slate singles, or asbestos shingles.

New WPB Ruling.

Of interest to home owners is a new ruling by the war production board which has removed the restrictions on the use of asbestos shingles for reroofing of homes where repairs are necessary. This was done so that long fibered asbestos might be obtained for essential war products.

To obtain the long fibers it is necessary to mine many tons of short fibers which are utilized chiefly in asbestos shingles. The same ruling holds good where repairs are needed when it comes to re-siding of homes.

Before the new order roof and siding repairs were permitted, but the extent of the work was limited to the area actually in need of attention.

The new amendment exempts asbestos shingles and siding from the $200 limit and permits a complete reroofing or re-siding job to be done provided some repairs or painting are required.

The 100th anniversary of the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America will be observed this afternoon by the 30 churches of the denomination in the Chicago area, in the auditorium of the Carl Schurz High school, Milwaukee avenue and Addison street. The Rev. Lars O. Anderson, pastor of Trinity Lutheran church of Evanston, is general chairman of the arrangements committee.

Rev. L. O. Anderson.

This afternoon's program, at 3:40 o'clock, will open with an organ prelude by Arnold L. Schultz, director of music at the United Lutheran church in Oak Park. The Rev. Gordon Nasby, pastor of the Edison Park Lutheran church, will lead the assembly in singing the national anthem.

Chorus of 300 Will Sing.

Instrumental music will be presented by Helen Rovelstad Rognlie, pianist, of Zion Lutheran church, Elgin. The Chicago Circuit Centennial mixed chorus of 300 voices will appear, under direction of the Rev. Alvin Snesrud, pastor of Moreland Lutheran church.

Dr. Martin Anderson, president of the Eastern district of the national church body, will preside at ceremonies introducing the Rev. George Aus of Luther Theological seminary, St. Paul, Minn. Admission to the services is free.

The history of the church body dates back to 1843, when a group of Norwegian immigrants settling in Waukesha county, Wis., decided to establish a Lutheran church in their community. The first structure was of rough hewn logs, erected at Muskego, Wis. The Rev. Claus L. Clausen was the first pastor.

Number 3,000 Churches.

From this focal point the Norwegian Lutheran church in America has grown to 3,000 affiliated churches, with 350,000 members. The Rev. J. A. Aasgaard of Minneapolis is president of the national organization.

In the Chicagoland area, the group maintains the Edison Park Children's home, the Bethesda home for the aged, the Deaconess hospital and home, a children's home finding society, a mission home, a radio station at Elgin, and an institutional missionary station.

Largest Is in Oak Park.

The first Chicago church was organized in 1848, in what is now known as Lake View Lutheran church, Roscoe and Osgood streets. The largest of the Chicagoland congregations is that of the United Lutheran church of Oak Park, of which the Rev. Edwin M. Hegge is minister.

Among local church leaders assisting in arrangements for the services are the Rev. Gordon Nasby, Victory Nordhem, Lars S. Kildahl, and Garfield Stensland. Others who will be present include Magnus Ronning, Peter Cleven, Harry Ekeberg, Theodore Dahlstrom, Axel Jensen, Adolph H. Norland, Neal S. Conroy, Mrs. Andrew Benson, Ralph Blaha, all of Chicago, and Adolph Ensrud, Earl B. Torland, Dr. Martin O. Juel, Andrew Benson, and Fred Benson of Oak Park.

GHOSTS TO HAUNT NORTHWEST SIDE

YANK COURAGE IN SO. PACIFIC INSPIRES NURSE

Park Ridger Calls It Contagious.

BY MAURINE MYERS.

Courage is contagious. If you don't believe that, try a six months' stint as a nurse on New Caledonia, or the New Hebrides. Jeanne Sawyer, R. N., 320 Fairview avenue, Park Ridge, did just that. Stiff upper lips spread like epidemics thru the wards full of war wounded, Nurse Sawyer declares, and no matter how excruciating their pain, the boys seldom murmur.

Nurse Sawyer doesn't say much about the courage of the 51 nurses she accompanied to New Caledonia a year ago this month. She doesn't elaborate on the fact that they had to face an inhuman climate, dirt, and insects—that several of them sacrificed their health because there was a job of work to be done and they were the ones qualified to do it. Courage operated on a 24 hours a day, seven days a week basis for those 52 women, in spite of the self-effacing efforts of Nurse Sawyer and her like.

Contracts Tropic Ailment.

A graduate of Columbia hospital in Milwaukee, Nurse Sawyer joined the outgoing unit of nurses last October. For four months she was stationed on New Caledonia and for two months on Esparito Santo in the New Hebrides. At the latter place she contracted the tropical illness which necessitated her return to the United States and her subsequent medical discharge from the army nurses corps.

Despite the 135 degree temperatures, the bugs that are an ever-present plague, and the primitive working conditions, Nurse Sawyer claims "you learn to like it there." Even now, she would be back on the job if it weren't certain her illness would recur. Since her recovery, she has taken a post in the dispensary at the Douglas Aircraft plant, where she can "help the people who are building the planes to help them over there."

There's a knack to learning to live in the tropics, Nurse Sawyer says. The nurses learn to wear GI shirts, pith helmets, and khaki trousers, and to sleep with the trousers under the mattress so they'd keep their press. The nurses wore heavy GI shoes, too, and found they could keep comparatively clean by bathing in streams and doing their laundry in GI steel helmets.

Food Arrived Regularly.

The forces on New Caledonia didn't pay much attention to food. "It was simply something to fill the cavity which complained every few hours," Nurse Sawyer recalls. The bakery was 30 miles away in the hills, so the Japs couldn't spot the smoke and zoom down and bomb the camp. That made bread deliveries a week apart. It wasn't the Ritz-Carlton, but nobody starved.

The bugs were terrific. Mosquitoes and fleas and flies, and lots more nobody knew the names of. The mess tent was screened, but the other tents were mercilessly open to their savage onslaught every night. "There were two kinds of fleas," Nurse Sawyer grins, "the human fleas and the dog fleas. We were luckier than the dogs, because they got both kinds."

This insect menace couldn't get the United States forces down—it was just one of those things to be joked about. In fact, the recreation tent got itself nicknamed the "Flea Hut."

A Merry Yuletide.

It was in the "Flea Hut" that Christmas, 1942, was celebrated with a party the like of which New Caledonia had never seen. A resourceful Red Cross worker, armed with a few mangy decorations mail-ordered from Australia and a store of "gifts" which ranged from a stick of gum to a borrowed book, put on an affair which still has them talking at Southwest Pacific posts.

When Nurse Sawyer was transferred to the New Hebrides, the 1,500 bed hospital was opened at 7 o'clock one morning, and had 1,000 patients by 7 o'clock the next morning. These patients were brought in by ship and plane from battlefields of Guadalcanal and New Guinea.

No matter how badly these boys were hurt they seldom asked for sympathy—for a sympathetic ear, yes. The nurses became veritable wailing walls, as the boys unfolded their innermost selves, their problems, and aspirations.

Star Studded Party.

It was only a few weeks after she had reached the New Hebrides that Nurse Sawyer became incapacitated. Before she left in February, Adm. Halsey's staff threw a farewell party in her honor, and the guests included Joe E. Brown, stopping off from his whirlwind tour thru Southwest Pacific bases.

In the six months she served overseas Nurse Sawyer declares she didn't see one boy die of wounds received on the battlefields. There were deaths from malaria and other tropical diseases, but to her, those who came back from the front for treatment seemed imbued with one purpose only, an all-consuming passion to get the filthy job over, and get back home.

Park Ridge Juniors to Reveal the Latest Modes in Fashion Show Thursday

When the Twentieth Century Juniors of Park Ridge hold their fall fashion show Thursday evening, these fine feathers will be part of the fun. Miss Annette Jernberg, 7 Wisner street, Park Ridge, left, models a tiny pillbox of black felt and white ostrich feathers, to complement her white blouse trimmed with colored sequins. Atop the blonde curls of Miss Harriet Houck, 1033 Vine street, Park Ridge, is a tiny black and fuchsia velvet tricorn, complete with a purple and fuchsia parrot. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

Indian summer days which may still be ahead will see many a light wool suit like these modeled by Mrs. William Van Keuren Jr., 728 Merrill avenue, Park Ridge, left, and Miss Zoe Seator, 701 South Prospect avenue, Park Ridge. Mrs. Van Keuren's tailored dress is of black wool, with a Kelly green jacket, and a green felt hat, green lizard bag, gloves, and shoes. Miss Seator wears a wine wool dressmaker suit, with bag, gloves, and shoes in brown alligator, and a steel blue hat with a wine veil.

Formal dinners this winter will be graced by such gowns as these at left modeled by Miss Ruth Croasdale, 227 Lake street, Park Ridge, left, and Mrs. Robert Grigsby, 314 Grand boulevard, Park Ridge. Miss Croasdale's gown, of lime green silk jersey, has gold rings setting off the low square cut neck line, and in her hair she wears a tiny green feathered bird. Mrs. Grigsby's black faille dinner dress is lavishly embroidered in fuchsia, and matching velvet loops are pinned in her hair. The smartness of brown and black combined is shown in the costume of Mrs. Carl P. Wiese, 239 Northwest highway, Park Ridge, left. Her black wool crepe dress is trimmed with narrow silk braid fringe, and set off with a huge rhinestone pin. Her black felt hat is banded in mink to match the neckpiece she carries. Black broadcloth bag, suede gloves and shoes complete the costume. Mrs. Wallace Anderson, 413 South Crescent drive, Park Ridge, on the right, wears an olive green tweed coat with raccoon collar, just right for the first snappy fall days. Her hat, of brown felt, bears jaunty green and red feathers, and her bag, gloves, and shoes also are in brown.

No small wonder that Mrs. Robert Redifer, 7037 Osceola avenue, is admiring her reflection in the mirror. Any smart young matron would do so, similarly attired. Mrs. Redifer's simple afternoon frock is of flame colored crepe, set off with black sequin buttons and belt. A black felt butterfly and tiny forehead veil make up her hat, and her gloves and bag are of black suede. Black sequin earrings and a heavy gold bracelet complete the costume.

Yank Meets Girl Pen Pal on U. S. Leave

Altho Shirley Richards of 1733 North Lawndale avenue and Sgt. George O. Jackson of Paris, Tenn., have been corresponding for a year and a half, they met only recently while Sgt. Jackson was in Chicago on his first furlough in 23 months. During the greater part of their long distance friendship, he was braving the arctic winds of the Aleutians, and was grateful for Shirley's frequent letters which kept him in touch with happenings in the United States.

Shirley Richards.

Sgt. Jackson.

Their correspondence began 18 months ago when Shirley saw Sgt. Jackson's picture in a group photo taken while he was stationed at Camp Grant. Shirley's best friend was going with his buddy, so introductions were made by mail. Before they could meet, Sgt. Jackson was sent to the Aleutians, so they had to get acquainted with the postman as intermediary.

Here on Furlough.

Invalided back to this country last Aug. 6, Sgt. Jackson spent several weeks at the Baxter general hospital in Spokane, Wash., where he was treated for bone trouble resulting from frozen feet. After recovery, he was given a 30 day furlough. On his way to visit his family in Tennessee he stopped off in Chicago to meet Shirley, and more recently he spent the last three days of his furlough as the guest of Shirley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Richards.

Had Little Entertainment.

"The greatest factor to contend with in the Aleutians was boredom," Sgt. Jackson says. "We were well fed and well clothed, but didn't have much in the way of entertainment. Just before I left, a post theater was built, but aside from that we had to depend on our own resources for recreation.

"There were some good musicians in the company," he said, "so we got together some fairly decent musical shows. In fact we were the singingest outfit I ever heard of. We sang practically all the time."

There were no women on the island, and a group of entertainers who came in by plane for U. S. O. shows were the first American girls the men had seen in 11 months.

"No one had a date with them, tho," Sgt. Jackson says. "They were guarded better than the gold at Fort Knox."

Sgt. Jackson is certain about one thing. Once the victory is won, he's going to spend the rest of his life in the United States.

SCHOOL SELLS BONDS, STAMPS TO BUY 20 JEEPS

Edgebrook school, 6525 Hiawatha avenue, with its enrollment of less than 350 pupils, is one of the smallest grammar schools in Chicago, but already, since September, it has bought 20 jeeps as its contribution to the war.

"By Dec. 7, when the campaign closes, we will have purchased enough stamps and bonds for many more jeeps," Miss Gladys Sampson, principal, said. Since last spring the school has flown the Minute Man flag. All of the teachers buy bonds each month and 94 per cent of the children buy stamps.

The seventh grade leads the school in the sale of stamps and bonds. William Sheldon, 6527 Tahoma avenue, school mayor, congratulated the pupils and their teacher, Mrs. Lillian Murray. Howard Robbins, 6944 Mendota avenue, has the highest class record in the group, having sold approximately $10,000 worth of bonds and stamps.

11TH BLOOD DONATION GIVEN PLASMA BANKS BY N. W. SIDE MOTHER

Among top ranking donors to the Red Cross blood bank is Mrs. Anna S. Carlson, 1728 Ohio street, who recently gave her eleventh pint of blood to the service. She will make her 12th donation in December.

Mrs. Anna S. Carlson.

Her son, Daniel, who is in the merchant marine, follows his mother's example. Every time he puts into port one of his first stops is at the blood bank. He has already given five pints of blood.

Mrs. Carlson, who works in the alteration department of an apparel store, employs much of her leisure time knitting and making bandages for the Red Cross.

HOLD MEMORIAL RITES TODAY FOR YOUNG SEAMAN

Memorial services will be held at 2:30 p. m. today in the Edison Park Evangelical and Reformed church for Frank H. Eager Jr., 19 years old, seaman first class, who was killed in action two months ago. The Rev. Glenn G. Gumm will officiate at the ceremonies, in which the Edison Park post of the American Legion will participate.

Seaman Eager, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Eager, 7048 Oriole avenue, was inducted into the navy in September, 1942. After receiving his basic training at Great Lakes he was sent to Norfolk, Va., and later to Key West, Fla., where he was a radioman in the communications office. Last June he was assigned to convoy duty on the Atlantic.

An alumnus of Taft High school, he worked for the Gibson Spring company during the three month interval between his graduation and his induction.

American Women at War

Shirley Busch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Busch, 4811 North St. Louis avenue, was recently commissioned an ensign in the WAVES at Northampton, Mass. She is a graduate of the University of Illinois, from which she received the bachelor of science degree in 1939. Ensign Busch was employed as a serologist by the Chicago health department from 1939 until 1942, and as a bacteriologist by an East St. Louis firm until last July.

In the North African theater of operations Sgt. Mildred V. Allibone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Allibone, 5024 Argyle street, has been assigned as chief clerk at the adjutant general's headquarters.

Sgt. Allibone, formerly a section manager in a loop department store, joined the WAC last February. After finishing basic training she worked as chief clerk in the classification office at Camp Polk, La.

Among the northwest side residents aiding the lecture as patrons or members of committees are Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Faucher, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. John Karas, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Trucco.

DRAFT SPIRITS OF HALLOWEEN TO BACK WAR

Plan Park Frolics to Boost Morale.

Hobgoblins, ghosts, and witches, traditional motifs for Halloween celebrations in Chicago's 96 park district fieldhouses, will be drafted this year to back the war. Promotion of civilian morale and relaxation from war strain will be the keynote of all parties. Prizes this year will have a definite war time accent, since in most cases they will be war bonds and stamps. Conservation of materials also will be stressed, and a constructive program of fun will be provided for children in an effort to eliminate destructive Halloween pranks.

In all fieldhouses on the northwest side, games, dances, dramatics, stunts, and simulated witchcraft will be featured. Also there will be parades, apple bobbing contests, costume judging, community singing, candy scrambles, and treasure hunts.

Civic Groups Sponsors.

The parks will sponsor parties and special events Friday and Saturday evenings. Local civic, business, and improvement associations are assisting the park directors in providing prizes, refreshments, and material for decorations.

Wicker park, Damen avenue and Schiller street, stages its Halloween party Friday afternoon and evening. The Milwaukee Avenue Business Men's association and the neighborhood OCD are acting as joint sponsors with the park district. The children's party will begin at 4 o'clock, continuing into the evening with a dance in the assembly hall. Refreshments will be served, and prizes will be awarded for the most original costumes. David Henderson, park supervisor, is in charge of the program. Those assisting are Henry Smith, zone captain, 1947 Schiller street, and all block captains of the community surrounding Wicker park.

Kilbourn Park Parade.

Kilbourn park's Halloween party will begin at 7:30 Saturday evening. Coöperating in the program are the Belmont-Cragin and the Avondale OCD, the Scammon school PTA, the Milford theater and ballroom, and the local Girl Scouts and Cub Scout packs. Festivities will begin with a parade of costumed party-goers who will proceed from the fieldhouse at 3501 North Kilbourn avenue thru the main streets of the community. Auxiliary OCD policemen will protect the line of march. On returning to the fieldhouse the young people will take part in a treasure hunt and then pass thru a "chamber of horrors" in the basement. Each guest will receive a bag of refreshments including apples, candy, popcorn, and other goodies. Other events will include a blackberry pie eating contest, a balloon blowing competition, and a slippery pole sitting contest. Arrangements for the party are in the hands of Herbert Buell, park supervisor.

At Humboldt park, 1400 North Sacramento avenue, the Halloween party under the direction of Orrin B. Wais is scheduled for Friday evening at 7:30. Oscar Nudelman, commander of the Humboldt park OCD is coöperating in arrangements. There will be a parade, movies, games, and a variety of other entertainment. Children under 14 will compete for prizes to be awarded for games of skill and for unusual costumes.

Parade and Movies.

The principal Halloween event at Kosciuszko park, 2732 North Avers avenue, will begin at 7:30 Saturday evening. Prizes will be awarded for the most original, comic, and patriotic costumes and impersonations. A parade, spook jamboree, and movies, together with games and contests will comprise the program. Ernest Useman, park supervisor, will direct activities.

Edison park fieldhouse, 6755 Northwest highway, will be the scene of a party Saturday evening at 7:30. Features of the celebration will be an amateur show, costume judging and awards, and a gift bag for each boy and girl. The Edison park community council is assisting Beulah Muelhausen, playgrounds supervisor, in arrangements for the event.

An old fashioned Halloween costume party will be held at Gladstone park, 5421 North Menard avenue, Friday at 7 o'clock. Ducking for apples, a chamber of horrors, and games for guests of all ages are promised by Rose Sorensen, playground supervisor.

Avondale Park Party.

At Avondale park, 3516 School street, George Bicanich, park supervisor, will be host at the celebration to be held Saturday at 7 o'clock. The Logan square drum and bugle corps will lead a parade of merry makers to the fieldhouse, where they will be entertained with a holiday menu of movies, stunts, and games.

Special parties for various age groups will be held at Jefferson park, Higgins and Long avenues. Youth of high school age will be guests at a Friday night party, at

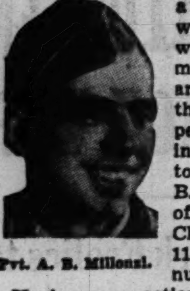
INVADING YANK VISITS FAMILY'S HOME ON SICILY

Meets His Relatives for the First Time.

Not often does a soldier of an invading army have an opportunity to take time out for an old home week reunion with grandmother, cousins and aunts. But that's what happened during the invasion of Sicily to Pvt. Anthony B. Millonzi, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Millonzi, 1148 Grand avenue.



Pvt. A. B. Millonzi.

Having seen action in the North African campaign, young Millonzi was one of a signal corps unit engaged in the Sicilian invasion. When his group neared the village from which his parents came in their youth, Millonzi asked for and received a brief pass. This enabled him to reach Montemaggiore bel Cito, and to drop in, unexpected, to see his grandmother.

Grandmother Now 77.

Mrs. Angela Millonzi, the grandmother, is 77 now. Since the war, communication with her son in America had become increasingly difficult. The visit from Anthony was her first touch with her American descendants in more than two years, and her first knowledge that Anthony was married and in the army.

The Millonzis hadn't even hoped for such luck as having Anthony visit his relatives, and there was much rejoicing in the household when his letter arrived, telling that their childhood village was still intact, and the family well tho suffering privations. The village is 20 miles from Palermo, and in the same province.

Owned Electric Shop.

Until he entered the army nearly two years ago, Millonzi owned and operated a small electrical goods shop in the neighborhood in which his parents live. While in training, he was stationed at Will Rogers air base outside of Oklahoma City, Okla. It was there that he met and married Nadine Hamilton of that city.

Overseas a year next month, Millonzi has sent back many souvenirs to his parents and four younger brothers and sisters. There were blankets from Tunis, and vases and gifts for all the family.

Charles Millonzi, the father, now a worker at the Douglas Aircraft plant near Park Ridge, hasn't seen Sicily since he was 17, and Mrs. Millonzi was 8 when she left the island, but their native village has come much closer to them in the letters of their son.

Northwest Sider Pilot of Plane on Life Saving Trip

Co-pilot in the recent mercy flight of an army plane from Cleveland, O., to New York City was Lt. Michael J. Piatnitza, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Piatnitza, 4043 Parker avenue. His plane, scheduled to deliver airplane parts at La Guardia field, was drafted into service by army officials who had been informed that Max Shapiro, 53 year old Cleveland contractor who was suffering from an unusual bone disease, needed emergency treatment from New York specialists.

Lt. Piatnitza.

The plane was transformed into a flying ambulance as Mr. Shapiro's stretcher was placed inside and lashed securely to prevent it from moving about. Great care had to be exercised to prevent undue jolting during the flight because it was feared that the slightest jar might fracture the patient's fragile bones, weakened by the encroachments of the disease.

Arriving at La Guardia field, Mr. Shapiro was transferred to a waiting ambulance and taken to Memorial hospital in Manhattan for immediate treatment.

Lt. Piatnitza, who helped bring the patient safely to New York, is a graduate of Kelvyn Park High school and the University of Illinois, where he received his bachelor's degree in 1941. He was inducted into the army shortly after graduation and served in the armored division until August, 1942. At that time he was accepted for pilot training, and received his wings last March at Columbus, Miss.

PLAN CONCERT FOR BENEFIT OF BOHEMIAN HOME

A concert for the benefit of the Bohemian Old People's Home and Orphanage, 5061 North Pulaski road, will be given at 2:30 p. m. Sunday in the auditorium of Morton High school, Austin boulevard and 24th street, Cicero.

The program, under direction of Harry Gilman, violinist and conductor, will include Josephine Antoine, prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera company, and Reinhold Schmidt, bass-baritone of the Chicago Civic Opera company.

Mr. Schmidt will sing a number composed by Robert Dvorak, former Morton High school student, now a staff sergeant in the West Point band. The Carnation chorus also will give several numbers.

Three Generations Fight Germans

MARINES

With AMERICA'S FIGHTERS

The picture of Lt. Eugene H. Nielsen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Nielsen of McHenry, was featured on the cover of a recent British edition of Yank, the army weekly. Lt. NORTHWEST MEN OVERSEAS MAKE SELVES AT HOME

Take Parts in Movies, on Radio Shows.

With traditional Yankee adaptability, northwest side service men are making themselves right at home at their overseas posts. In England, where many of them are stationed, they are participating in the life of the community, taking part in discussion groups, acting as extras in movies, and even going in for a bit of higher education in England's ivy-covered halls of learning.

When Pvt. Alois Koziol, husband of Mrs. Dolores Koziol of 3731 Shakespeare avenue, received his overseas orders he did not know that they would lead indirectly to his first appearance on the silver screen. SCHALCKS FIGHT 3 WARS AND EYE PEACE PROSPECT

Great-Grandfather Hero of Iroquois Fire.

BY AGNES AHERN.

In 1871 Michel Schalck, 1722 North Mozart street, donned the uniform of the French marines to fight against Germany in the Franco-Prussian war. Since that time fighting against Germany has become a tradition in the Schalck family. Michel's son, Arthur, was a corporal in the United States army in World War I. His grandson is now wearing the uniform of a lieutenant in the navy.

Today, from the vantage point of his 96 years, Michel Schalck is wondering if his great-grandson, Michael Robin Schalck, will find it necessary to carry on the military tradition that three generations of wars have established in the family.

Summers on Fruit Farm.

Michel Schalck, who was born in Alsace Lorraine Dec. 24, 1846, served as a private in the war of 1871. He came thru the conflict unscathed and emigrated to Chicago in 1872. Here he established his own business as a building contractor, making his home on Mozart avenue. After his retirement at the age of 65, he spent the next 10 summers operating a fruit farm at Benton Harbor, Mich. During the winters he made his home in Chicago, as he has continued to do in recent years.

At the time of the Iroquois theater fire in 1903, Mr. Schalck distinguished himself by his heroic rescue of a woman. An account of the incident, published in the CHICAGO TRIBUNE of Dec. 31, 1903, follows:

Face, Hands Burned.

"M. Schalck of 709 North Mozart street was in the balcony with his wife. With one arm around her, he fought his way to a place of safety and then turned to save a woman who was caught between a seat and a dead body. He wrenched the woman free, though she fainted. Schalck found his first avenue of escape cut off as he returned, and his face and hands were badly burned as he bore out the unconscious victim."

When Germany opened hostilities against the United States during the first World war, Michel Schalck's son, Arthur, became a member of the 56th army engineers. He was in the army for a year and a half, serving as a corporal overseas for 11 months. Like his father, he came back from the wars uninjured. Now a resident of North Chicago, he is vice president and general manager of the Cyclone Fence company.

Stationed in Detroit.

Arthur's son, Walter S. Schalck, was graduated from Purdue university just five months after Pearl Harbor. On his commencement day he was commissioned an ensign in the navy, and a year later, in May, 1943, he was made a lieutenant [j. g.]. He is assigned to the bureau of ships in Detroit, Mich., where he is making his home with his wife, Elaine, and their infant son, Michael Robin.

It is not often that the four generations of the Schalck family are able to get together these days. But when they do here is always an unspoken question in the minds of Michael Robin's great-grandfather, grandfather, and father. Will this baby, born into a world at war, attain his majority during another world conflict? The Schalcks wonder—and hope.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Oct. 25.

Plant vines to hide unsightly objects, to clothe the garage in green, to give an air of quietude that can be obtained in no other way. The bittersweet vine is very hardy, does well in shade, and can be increased by sowing seed this fall, by root cuttings or from soft wood cuttings in spring. It does well on a north porch, to twine up an old tree or clamber over a bush.

Tuesday, Oct. 26.

Some of the minor bulbs are excellent for the rock garden. The grape hyacinth is a good subject for banks and pockets among the rocks. They grow low, only 5 to 6 inches, and their delightfully blue color makes them most effective. They do equally well when grown in masses along the perennial border.

The snowdrop and squill furnish good stock between bulbs. Among the hardy lilies, none is more delightful than the regal lily. It is useful when planted between peonies, or in clumps in the border.

Wednesday, Oct. 27.

Try a few plants of unusual interest in the window, such as a sweet potato placed in a bottle of water. It soon will send out strong growths and altho it does not flower, the foliage is attractive and it is a plant that will repay one for the effort.

Thursday, Oct. 28.

Many indoor gardeners find pleasure in a glass garden or terrarium. A large glass globe, fish tank or other form of glass container is most suitable and the many scenes that can be arranged are dependent only on the imagination of the gardener.

Friday, Oct. 29.

The home gardener delights when he grows an unusual plant to perfection, but some plants are so temperamental they fail to respond. Among these is the beautiful gardenia. It should be syringed every day to remove dust particles and to provide a halo of moisture around it.

Saturday, Oct. 30.

The screw pine [pandanus] rests from October to January during which time it requires less water than when in active growth. Just enough water to keep the soil moist is sufficient. If pots of tulips are growing in darkness, be sure the soil is kept moist or they will stand still, making no growth.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield park conservatory.

KEEP WARY EYE ON OVERHEAD— YOUR ROOFING

Repairs Should Be Made in Next Few Weeks.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Now is the time to be keeping an eye on the overhead, for the roof, and what happens to it, this coming winter is of considerable importance. If repairs are to be made, or a new roof is needed, the weeks before ice and snow arrive are the best to have the work done.

In roof inspection, one of the first things to check is the condition of shingles. If any are loose, they should be nailed tightly and any that are missing should be replaced.

Wood Shingle Repairs.

Sometimes a wood shingle roof which has a tendency to leak can have its life extended by application of a compound of asbestos and asphalt fibers. A good roofer could advise on whether or not this is practical, or whether a new roof is needed.

There are definite advantages in placing a new roof directly on top of the old one. Some added heat resistance and stiffness is afforded, in addition to saving on labor costs and the avoidance of dirt outside and inside the house.

Where there is roll roofing there is need for application of roof coating every four or five years. This will renew the dried out oils which in time can make the roofing brittle. If this type roofing is too badly dried or rotted a coating will not restore it.

Paint the Tin Roof.

A tin roof should be kept well painted to guard against rust. Red lead gives excellent protection. If there are holes they can be closed with plastic roofing cement. Liquid asphalt roofing cement also can be used for a tin roof in place of paint.

The condition of flashing should be most carefully checked. These flashings, which are the metal protection placed at angles and corners where shingles cannot give proper coverage, must be kept free from leaks. They can be kept in good condition by painting with lead or oil paints. Where signs of wear are evident it is advisable to trowel on a coat of asbestos roof putty.

Any roofing material of ordinary weight can be selected for a new roof which is to be laid over an old one such as wood shingles, asphalt slate singles, or asbestos shingles.

New WPB Ruling.

Of interest to home owners is a new ruling by the war production board which has removed the restrictions on the use of asbestos shingles for reroofing of homes where repairs are necessary. This was done so that long fibered asbestos might be obtained for essential war products.

To obtain the long fibers it is necessary to mine many tons of short fibers which are utilized chiefly in asbestos shingles. The same ruling holds good where repairs are needed when it comes to re-siding of homes.

Before the new order roof and siding repairs were permitted, but the extent of the work was limited to the area actually in need of attention.

The new amendment exempts asbestos shingles and siding from the $200 limit and permits a complete reroofing or re-siding job to be done provided some repairs or painting are required.

The Rev. Lars O. Anderson, pastor of Trinity Lutheran church of Evanston, is general chairman of the arrangements committee.

This afternoon's program, at 3:40 o'clock, will open with an organ prelude by Arnold L. Schultz, director of music at the United Lutheran church in Oak Park. The Rev. Gordon Nasby, pastor of the Edison Park Lutheran church, will lead the assembly in singing the national anthem.

Instrumental music will be presented by Helen Rovelstad Rognlie, pianist, of Zion Lutheran church, Elgin. The Chicago Circuit Centennial mixed chorus of 300 voices will appear, under direction of the Rev. Alvin Snesrud, pastor of Moreland Lutheran church.

Dr. Martin Anderson, president of the Eastern district of the national church body, will preside at ceremonies introducing the Rev. George Aus of Luther Theological seminary, St. Paul, Minn. Admission to the services is free.

The history of the church body dates back to 1843, when a group of Norwegian immigrants settling in Waukesha county, Wis., decided to establish a Lutheran church in their community. The first structure was of rough hewn logs, erected at Muskego, Wis. The Rev. Claus L. Clausen was the first pastor.

From this focal point the Norwegian Lutheran church in America has grown to 3,000 affiliated churches, with 350,000 members. The Rev. J. A. Aasgaard of Minneapolis is president of the national organization.

In the Chicagoland area, the group maintains the Edison Park Children's home, the Bethesda home for the aged, the Deaconess hospital and home, a children's home finding society, a mission home, a radio station at Elgin, and an institutional missionary station.

Largest Is in Oak Park.

The first Chicago church was organized in 1848, in what is now known as Lake View Lutheran church, Roscoe and Osgood streets. The largest of the Chicagoland congregations is that of the United Lutheran church of Oak Park, of which the Rev. Edwin M. Hegge is minister.

Among local church leaders assisting in arrangements for the services are the Rev. Gordon Nasby, Victory Nordhem, Lars S. Kildahl, and Garfield Stensland. SICILY VETERAN HEADS COLORED SELFRIDGE UNIT

Trains More Negro Combat Pilots.

BY ROSCOE SIMMONS.

Selfridge Field, Mich., Oct. 23—It was more silver lining than cloud for Selfridge field when Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr. was inducted as executive officer of the 332d fighter group.

Lt. Col. Davis.

All Selfridge put on its best for the occasion, glad that the more pleasant hour had struck for a place harassed by a chain of circumstances that got out of hand.

Talk of Sicily Action.

Visitors who had come in for the event dwelt on the recent exploits of Col. Davis in the Sicilian campaign, but there were those who felt that the war department was anointing him with an authority new to the customs of the army.

But the day was not entirely one for Col. Davis, regarded by many as the model West Pointer. A father stepped into the scene, and that father went back to the Spanish-American war. It was for that conflict that Col. Davis' father, Gen. B. O. Davis Sr., enlisted as a private from Washington, D. C.

Now he was present as a brigadier general on the staff of the inspector general of the army, an official witness to the induction of his only son as an executive officer in one of the great air fields of the country, this beginning a new era for the American Negro soldier.

Star in His Eyes.

At dinner a Negro soldier, waiting on the officers and their party, had fixed his eyes on the star which decorates the expensive shoulders of Gen. Davis. He seemed blind to all else about him. He tipped a cup of coffee, which spilled over two officers.

"Excuse me, please do," he said, a great smile playing a chubby countenance. "But I was just looking. I heard talk of the colored general. I have seen him; now I'm ready for any questions either Hitler or the Japs want to ask me," is the way he put it to comrades.

A dozen officers' hands went up in forgiveness and he went his way rejoicing.

Col. Davis was ordered home from Sicily to undertake the training of American flyers. He had led the 99th squadron in a campaign nothing short of an eye-opener to the command in Africa. Within four months the 99th had proved all talk of unreadiness of the American trained Negro flyers for combat against any foe was but dumb doubt.

Win Fellows' Respect.

The conduct of the 99th in the air won the admiration of their fellow American flyers and the surprised respect of the British.

"They were the gallant boys," said Col. Davis, "alert under fire, brave enough, holding back nothing. Americans thru and thru, and I hated to leave them, but I'll be seeing them soon again, I hope."

Of his own exploits Col. Davis would say nothing, with him it was "we" for even the little he would consent to tell of the conduct of his comrades.

"We landed at Casablanca in April," he said, "and we were busy with the enemy until we reached Sicily. We undertook every mission assigned to us and it is said we failed in none."

Daily Deadly Task.

Engagements took the 99th from Tunis to the Italian boot, and for 11 days over Pantelleria the 99th fighters threw their ships thru the air in ceaseless combat. Dive bombing, the deadliest warfare in the air, became a daily dask. "They didn't miss and they didn't flinch," said Col. Davis.

"Every opportunity was afforded us," he said, "to show what we could do, and we stand on the record." Col. Davis was sent home to ready other colored flyers for air war in both the Atlantic and Pacific.

From the hard engagement over Pantelleria the 99th moved to defensive routine patrol, but soon began to provide escort of protection for the movement against Sicily. It became a major air support unit, and as such participated in the battle of Salerno.

For 13 days Col. Davis and his fighters covered the movements and landings of the troops bound for Sicily. "Those are days we can never forget," he said. "We had 37 pilots, and every pilot was an American soldier.

"We saw all the soldiers engaged with us, the French, the British, and the utterly fearless Gourmerliers, but we had every reason to be proud of the boys in the uniform of the United States," said Col. Davis.

When early in September the allied forces began its movement on Italy the 99th was called on, to cover. "It was the highest hour for our fighters," said Col. Davis.

Parachutes and Other War Materials Get Thoro Testing at Illinois Tech Laboratory

PARACHUTE BELT
DIAL

When a flyer is called upon to use his parachute to save his life, he knows that every bit of his 'chute has been tested before it is used. Here William T. Savage, 6709 Cregier avenue, an employe in the Illinois Institute of Technology materials testing laboratory, tests a strip of parachute webbing against strain. The webbing has to take a test of 2,800 pounds of pressure. This piece withstood more than that.

Concrete is important in war construction, and must meet specifications. This particular piece took a pressure of 22,000 pounds before it began to crumble. Savage checks the progressive damage to the concrete as the pressure increases.

This machine at the Tech materials testing laboratory, which Savage is operating as John E. Yoxen, 4449 North Linder avenue, an engineering student, records data, could apply up to 60,000 pounds of pressure, if it were necessary, in making this tension test on steel.

TESTING I BEAM
I BEAM

Dale Doerr, 4139 Ellis avenue, a laboratory employe, measures the deflection of an I-beam as this sturdy machine, capable of applying 120,000 pounds of pressure, is put to work. Deflection is measured by a gauge at the bottom and ends of the beam.

Gary Hospital Opens 130 Bed Section Today

A four story addition which will double the bed capacity of the Gary Methodist hospital will be dedicated at a ceremony at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the cafeteria of the new wing. The facilities of the addition will be put into use immediately after the dedication.

The addition adds 130 beds to the original hospital, which was built 22 years ago. The new wing, built to form an L-shaped building, is constructed of brick and concrete, and is trimmed with Indiana limestone.

Built in a Year.

Of the cost of about $350,000, the hospital borrowed $265,000 from the federal works administration and furnished the remainder of the money itself. Ground was broken a year ago this month. In addition, the hospital has just let a contract to enlarge its laundry at a cost of $45,000, and for new laundry equipment costing $10,000.

Bishop Titus Lowe of Indianapolis, resident Methodist bishop of Indiana, will deliver the dedicatory address. Other speakers will include Joseph E. Finnerty, mayor of Gary; Dr. Joseph E. Gladstone, chairman of the hospital's medical staff; Dr. R. T. Ponton of Chicago representing the American College of Surgeons; Laurence Gillette of Chicago, regional director of the federal works administration; Edgar Blake, superintendent of Wesley Memorial hospital in Chicago and former superintendent of the Gary hospital, and Herschel B. Davis, president of the hospital board.

Demands on the Gary Methodist hospital have taxed its facilities, according to Dr. James Lawson, superintendent, who said the opening of the new wing will provide a dozen eight bed wards, eight wards of three beds each, and two wards of six beds each.

Enlarge Maternity Section.

The entire fourth floor has been utilized to expand the maternity department, making it one of the most modern departments in any hospital in the middle west, Dr. Lawson said. A nursery, built to take care of 70 children, is equipped with oxygen piped in from the basement thru several outlets, eliminating the necessity of moving tanks from storage quarters into the nursery. Ultra violet ray lights also have been installed in the nursery.

The nursing personnel for the new wing will be selected from the 32 members of a cadet nursing corps class which was inducted for training about six weeks ago, and from a similar class which will be inducted in February, Dr. Lawson stated.

Chicagoan, 23, Takes Part in Ploesti Raids

A veteran of 28 bombing flights from bases in England and North Africa, Tech. Sgt. Bernard Regan of Chicago returned home recently after two years abroad and found the United States the most beautiful place in the world.

Sgt. Bernard Regan.

"When I saw the colors of the trees in autumn I felt at home right then, no matter what part of the country it was in," Sgt. Regan said. "I knew I was back in God's country."

Sgt. Regan, who is spending part of a furlough at the home of his brother, Robert, 7329 Wabash avenue, and with other relatives in and near Chicago, took part in the famous raid on the Ploesti, Rumania, oil refineries by American bombers.

Bombers Came in Low.

"We came in low approaching the targets, climbed about 50 feet to drop our delayed action bombs, and then went down again to get out of there," he said. When the plane had returned to its base the crew found weeds caught in the bomb bay doors when they had flown in upon their targets.

"The people stood in the streets and waved at us, and we waved back at them," explained Sgt. Regan. "Haystacks, outbuildings and such just seemed to fall apart and become hidden gun nests as we were going over."

The Ploesti raid was "the roughest I've ever seen," he said, despite the fact that his own plane avoided Nazi fighter opposition by coming in low when the enemy at first expected the bombers to come in from a high altitude. Succeeding waves of planes did not escape fighter opposition.

Sgt. Regan still carries a fragment of an anti-aircraft shell in his hip as a raid memento. He took part in three more raids after he was wounded, before being returned to the United States for assignment as an instructor.

Three Ships—Same Name.

The south side youth, who is 23 years old and a graduate of Parker High school, was an aerial engineer on three bombers, two of which were so badly shot up that he and his mates received new ships.

The first bomber lasted thru 12 raids on France and northern Germany before the pilot set it down for the last time. Two engines were shot out and the plane was a wreck, Sgt. Regan said. "If we'd seen what it looked like before we got down we would have bailed out," he stated.

The second bomber lasted thru only two raids, and the third lasted thru the next 13 raids, but when Sgt. Regan left Africa it was being repaired and "it looked pretty bad."

Wears Several Decorations.

Sgt. Regan wears the air medal with four oak leaf clusters, the distinguished flying cross with cluster, the Purple Heart, and a ribbon with two stars denoting action in England and Africa.

Two of his brothers are in the army. Sgt. John Regan is at Fort Ord, Cal., and Pvt. Vincent Regan is in North Africa. Two sisters, Mrs. Mary Fisher and Miss Margaret Regan, live at 14614 Sacramento avenue, Blue Island. His parents, Mr. and John J. Regan, formerly of 524 West Marquette road, and another sister, Mrs. Helen Schwieger, live in Alhambra, Cal. Sgt. Regan expects to leave Chicago today to spend the rest of his furlough with them.

MATERIALS LAB AT ILLINOIS TECH IN RECORD PACE

Testing Volume Highest in 50 Years.

Faced with unprecedented demands because of the war, the materials testing laboratory on the south campus of the Illinois Institute of Technology now is handling the greatest volume of business in its 50 year history.

The materials that go into the tools of war are run thru the machines at the testing laboratory almost daily, for tests are made upon all materials to check against imperfections and hidden weaknesses, and to remedy defects and faults.

Airplane parts, guns, tank treads, all parts of parachutes, and hundreds of other parts of weapons and equipment which are being tested make the laboratory, in the opinion of Phil C. Huntly, director, one of the busiest in the world in the volume of work being turned out.

Laboratory Has Grown.

Mr. Huntly, head of the civil engineering department, which operates the laboratory thru the Armour Research Foundation, was director of the laboratory during World War I. and has seen it grow as engineering advanced. He also has seen most of its machines idle during the depression years, when testing was at practically a standstill.

More items are being tested to meet government specifications in this war than in the last one, Huntly explained, because the development of the airplane and other tools of war have brought a multitude of new weapons and equipment into use that must be tested before being used on the battlefronts.

The laboratory makes all kinds of tests on materials for pressure and strain, twisting and lasting strength under all sorts of conditions. Tests are run to determine how materials react under temperatures varying from 65 degrees below zero to 2,250 degrees Fahrenheit, and in some cases steel has been tested at temperatures as low as 125 degrees below zero.

Must Meet Specifications.

The government has no testing work done directly, but all parts going into the machines of war must meet specifications set up by the government and private business, and industrial firms send materials to the Tech laboratory to be tested under these requirements.

Despite the great influx of war materials, the laboratory continues to test yard goods and other items destined for civilian use, but these, Huntly explained, are nearly all classified as war materials because of the close connection between civilian and military activities. The laboratory does not know whether items sent in for tests are intended for war work, but applies tests to everything under government specifications.

If there is a wreck or explosion somewhere, the laboratory is likely to receive materials to be tested to determine the cause of the accident. If tests show that design and material were both good in the part examined, officials then look for neglect somewhere as the cause.

Widely Varied Interests.

The laboratory director, Huntly, has been at Illinois Tech since 1914, when he because an instructor of mechanical engineering. In 1934 he was made director of the mechanical engineering department, and in 1938 he became director of civil engineering. In his spare time he is president of the Riverside village board; president of the West Suburban Village Officials association, and reemployment committeeman for a selective service board. He finds time for a number of organizations and societies of which he is a member, and in addition operates a citrus farm in the Rio Grande valley in Texas.

"The first war made people 'testing conscious,' but testing fell away to practically nothing in 1932 and 1933," Huntly explained. "Now, in this war, everything is being tested, and people are learning to demand that tests be made on practically anything put on the market."

99th Squadron Chief in Training Post.

They were up in the thickest of the conflict. They knew that they had done well and had won the attention of Gen. Eisenhower's command.

When the 5th army effected its crossing and moved into Italy the 99th moved in with them. The American command gave every evidence of pride in the skill and faithfulness of its daring colored fighters in the air.

Now Col. Davis is back as chief executive to Col. Robert Selway Jr., commander of fighter units at Selfridge field. He will train the 332d fighter group, which is the heart of men at Selfridge getting ready for air combat.

"Two things," said Col. Davis, "I would like to speak of. First, the morale of our boys both as exhibited in Africa and in Italy; then, the comforting gallantry and kindness of Josephine Baker, a great American girl, who took us to her heart and became our friend, our monitor, and our comrade. Our country will owe much to her, and in Africa she was all the world to us."

The entire base at Selfridge, without race or color distinction, gave Col. Davis a soldier's reception, the warmest yet seen at this field.

No one, not even Col. Davis' soldier-father, seemed happier than base commander Col. William Boyd and Col. Selway.

REPORT 13,000 WAR GARDENS IN SOUTH SIDE AREA

City Will Total 100,000, Says OCD Head.

More than 13,000 war gardens with a total area of 14,293,965 square feet have been reported to the office of civilian defense from the near south side, the far south side, and the southwest side.

With registrations still being made, George T. Donoghue, director of war gardens for the OCD, said Chicago would show at least 100,000 gardens planted in the city last summer, and probably another 45,000 in the suburban areas.

The far south side ranks second only to the northwest side both in the number of gardens reported and the acreage planted, the latest report by Donoghue shows. Altho considerably fewer gardens have been reported in division 2, the far south side, the total acreage for the division is near that of the northwest side.

Acreage Figures Given.

Community figures on gardens and acreage for the three divisions in the south and southwest sides are:

NEW WAR SONG BY SOUTH SIDER IS A HIT IN CAMP

A former Hyde Park High school student, Jean Jacquet, 18 years old, 1661 East 79th street, has written and published a new war song which he believes, from reports he has received from his soldier brother, may be the song of the war. Jacquet wrote the song, "Fly Away with the Army, Sail Away on the Sea," more than a year ago, but only recently had it set to music by Jean Walz, 54 East Randolph street, and published it himself.

His brother, Pvt. Roger W. Jacquet, who is an aviation engineer at an army air field at Boise, Idaho, has written him that the song has been played at the field for army men and has made a big hit there.

The south side youth does not himself play any musical instrument, but wrote the song when he "figured the country needed a good song for the war." Jacquet has been rejected for military service, but will have another examination next month and believes he will soon be in a uniform himself.

TECH STUDENTS PUT NEW LIFE IN CAMPUS PAPER

Launch Sideline Course in Journalism.

A period of transition during which the Technology News, student organ of the Illinois Institute of Technology, developed into The New Technology News with a different approach to the handling of school stories and personalities ended recently with the publication of the last paper for this semester.

Richard Larson.

Several students, including a number of south side residents were initiated as charter members of the Tech chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalistic fraternity, just before the final issue of the semester was published.

Change Last Spring.

The change in the newspaper occurred last April, after several students approached Paul Ridings, director of the Tech news bureau, and asked what could be done to revise the Technology News to present timely, interesting school news and at the same time instill some order into its method of publication.

Heretofore student editors and reporters had written school news and then, the week-end before publication, had written the headlines to fill whatever hole might be left in a type page above the story. No regular headline schedule was in effect, and altho the paper was presumed to appear each Monday generally it was Tuesday before it could be obtained.

Thru the coöperation of Ridings and the managing board of the paper, all this was changed. A headline schedule was put into effect, a new type face and paper adopted, and a news gathering system based on that of a professional newspaper was adopted.

All Study Journalism.

In addition, the board ruled that thereafter every student wno worked on the paper had to take a journalism course which was started last July 6 with Ridings as the teacher. Virtually all the student editors and reporters are engineering students who study newspaper work as an avocation.

Staff members who were initiated into the Tech chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon included: Richard B. Larson, 8209 South May avenue, editor; Arthur Olson, 7734 East End avenue, managing editor; Charles Rowbotham, 7704 Cregier avenue, feature editor, and Ulysses Backas, 819 West 77th street, sports editor. Others initiated included Jerry Houle, 5942 North Paulina street, business manager and navy student who now lives on the campus, and Clifford Oliver, 8342 Drexel avenue.

Dorothy Norvell, 1357 East 50th street, and Sophie Kosziolowski, 1441 West 49th place, are members of the labor-legislative unit. Josephine Newson, 6022 Woodlawn avenue, will assist with the library used by the girls, and Dorothy Handzik, 5411 South Wood street, is committee secretary.

Monday, Oct. 25.

Plant vines to hide unsightly objects, to clothe the garage in green, to give an air of quietude that can be obtained in no other way. The bittersweet vine is very hardy, does well in shade, and can be increased by sowing seed this fall, by root cuttings or from soft wood cuttings in spring. It does well on a north porch, to twine up an old tree or clamber over a bush.

Tuesday, Oct. 26.

Some of the minor bulbs are excellent for the rock garden. The grape hyacinth is a good subject for banks and pockets among the rocks. They grow low, only 5 to 6 inches, and their delightfully blue color makes them most effective. They do equally well when grown in masses along the perennial border.

The snowdrop and squill furnish good stock between bulbs. Among the hardy lilies, none is more delightful than the regal lily. It is useful when planted between peonies, or in clumps in the border.

Wednesday, Oct. 27.

Try a few plants of unusual interest in the window, such as a sweet potato placed in a bottle of water. It soon will send out strong growths and altho it does not flower, the foliage is attractive and it is a plant that will repay one for the effort.

Thursday, Oct. 28.

Many indoor gardeners find pleasure in a glass garden or terrarium. A large glass globe, fish tank or other form of glass container is most suitable and the many scenes that can be arranged are dependent only on the imagination of the gardener.

Friday, Oct. 29.

The home gardener delights when he grows an unusual plant to perfection, but some plants are so temperamental they fail to respond. Among these is the beautiful gardenia. It should be syringed every day to remove dust particles and to provide a halo of moisture around it.

Saturday, Oct. 30.

The screw pine [pandanus] rests from October to January during which time it requires less water than when in active growth. Just enough water to keep the soil moist is sufficient. If pots of tulips are growing in darkness, be sure the soil is kept moist or they will stand still, making no growth.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield park conservatory.

ANTIQUE SALES UP—IF DEALERS CAN GET GOODS

Southwest Side Reports Growing Demand.

BY IRENE PONTO.

Antique dealers of the southwest side, as well as other dealers of this area, report an unprecedented business this fall.

"Is the best it has ever been," said one dealer on Halsted street, adding with a sigh, "If we could only get more stuff to sell."

"Our basement and garage are cleaned out," said Mrs. Alice Hulett Metz, "and the stock in the store is depleted." With her husband, Walter R. Metz, she operates a shop at 9115 Western avenue. As much business is done now in a few hours as was conducted when four people made up the daily sales force, Mrs. Metz said.

Take Larger Quarters.

Johnson and Mackle at 7419 Western avenue have moved to larger quarters at 6341 Western avenue. "We're making money, selling is brisk," smiled Mrs. Kathryn Mackle, 10114 Bell avenue, who supervises the clean and sparkling shop with her sister, Mrs. Alma Johnson, 9804 Damen avenue.

Much of the business conducted by the two Western avenue shops is with antique dealers today, officials said. Dealers who are more centrally located, dealers from downstate, or even from different sections of the country are combing antique shops to replenish stocks or to pick up unusual items unobtainable in their areas.

Explains Big Demand.

Altho the dealer trade is a new development, customer buying has spurted sales and is responsible for the happy smiles found in the "shoppes." Mrs. Metz, a lecturer on old glass, explains the demand this way.

"Antiques are a fine investment when inflation is present because their value increases," said Mrs. Metz, an art teacher in the Chicago schools for several years. "And during war time, patriotism is alive and people become reinterested in the history and life of their forebears and country."

Sought by All Ages.

A third reason, she offered was the fact that "the search for antiques is one amusement that does not affect the war effort. It is followed generally by middle aged couples or older people, settled in their own homes." Fourthly, Mrs. Metz said, the curtailment of furniture manufacture has turned young home furnishers to the old pieces, in which they rediscover beauty and value.

Antique furniture, glass, and art objects are located almost anywhere households are established, the Western avenue shopowners said. A favorite locale is Wisconsin around Whitewater and Oconomowoc, altho Illinois offers "finds" for collectors. Before gas rationing, both the Metzes and Mrs. Johnson used their cars to roam the midwest, visiting out of the way towns and farm homes. Mr. Metz, teacher of electrical engineering at Carl Schurz High school, and his wife once purchased quantities of goods from the Amish of Indiana, around Nappanee and Goshen, Ind.

Get Items from England.

Goods are still arriving satisfactorily from England, and recently Mrs. Metz learned from an English periodical that the antique dealers of the British Isles reported 1943 "the best year they had ever had."

Mrs. Mackle reported heavy demand for old fashioned round globe lamps, highly decorated. "People use them in cottages," she said. Prism hanging lamps are popular, and a high favorite with private buyers who can afford them are the pre-war Dresden and Old Meissen pieces—candlelabra, vases, figurines.

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS C. FRALICK observed their 60th wedding anniversary recently by holding open house at their home, 7715 Colfax avenue. On their anniversary they attended St. John's Methodist church at 74th street and Jeffery avenue, where the pastor, the Rev. Almer Pennewell, read a poem he had written for the couple.

Mrs. Fralick.

Thomas C. Fralick.

They were married in 1883 at Butler, Ind., and moved to Chicago in 1894. Mr. Fralick was a railroad man all his life, retiring as a locomotive engineer in 1927. In the year they moved to Chicago they joined the Cheltenham Methodist church, which later became a part of St. John's church.

The couple have five daughters: Miss Cecile and Miss Norma Fralick, who live at home; Mrs. Doris D. Pask, of the Kimbark hotel; Mrs. Hallie Hair, 7937 Manistee avenue, and Mrs. Beryl Bradbury, 8155 Merrill avenue. They also have five grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

MRS. JEAN K. FOGLE, wife of Col. Jean Fogle, assistant chief of staff of the 11th air force, is entertaining at her home at 7416 Phillips avenue the wives of two army officers who were stationed at Hunter field, Ga., while Col. and Mrs. Fogle were there. Her guests are Mrs. Harold A. Reynolds of Syracuse, N. Y., whose husband is a captain on the general staff in England, and Mrs. Robert N. Taylor of West Lafayette, Ind., whose husband is a lieutenant colonel in the Pacific theater of war.

Miss Arol June Noble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Noble, 10140 Rhodes avenue, is a member of the girls' chorus at the College of Wooster in Wooster, O. The club prepares two complete programs of sacred and secular numbers and trips are taken to near-by cities for appearances and give two home concerts each season.

A unique gift was received by Mrs. Frieda Hiestand, 409 East 75th street, when she celebrated her 61st birthday recently. Her youngest daughter, Mrs. Adilade Schnaekel, 3454 Elaine place, gave her mother one silver dollar for each year of her life.

Mr. and Mrs. Erwin C. Keller of 8143 Manistee avenue celebrated their silver wedding last night by entertaining friends at a buffet supper in their home.

KEEP WARY EYE ON OVERHEAD—YOUR ROOFING

Repairs Should Be Made in Next Few Weeks.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Now is the time to be keeping an eye on the overhead, for the roof, and what happens to it, this coming winter is of considerable importance. If repairs are to be made, or a new roof is needed, the weeks before ice and snow arrive are the best to have the work done.

In roof inspection, one of the first things to check is the condition of shingles. If any are loose, they should be nailed tightly and any that are missing should be replaced.

Wood Shingle Repairs.

Sometimes a wood shingle roof which has a tendency to leak can have its life extended by application of a compound of asbestos and asphalt fibers. A good roofer could advise on whether or not this is practical, or whether a new roof is needed.

There are definite advantages in placing a new roof directly on top of the old one. Some added heat resistance and stiffness is afforded, in addition to saving on labor costs and the avoidance of dirt outside and inside the house.

Where there is roll roofing there is need for application of roof coating every four or five years. This will renew the dried out oils which in time can make the roofing brittle. If this type roofing is too badly dried or rotted a coating will not restore it.

Paint the Tin Roof.

A tin roof should be kept well painted to guard against rust. Red lead gives excellent protection. If there are holes they can be closed with plastic roofing cement. Liquid asphalt roofing cement also can be used for a tin roof in place of paint.

The condition of flashing should be most carefully checked. These flashings, which are the metal protection placed at angles and corners where shingles cannot give proper coverage, must be kept free from leaks. They can be kept in good condition by painting with lead or oil paints. Where signs of wear are evident it is advisable to trowel on a coat of asbestos roof putty.

Any roofing material of ordinary weight can be selected for a new roof which is to be laid over an old one such as wood shingles, asphalt slate singles, or asbestos shingles.

New WPB Ruling.

Of interest to home owners is a new ruling by the war production board which has removed the restrictions on the use of asbestos shingles for reroofing of homes where repairs are necessary. This was done so that long fibered asbestos might be obtained for essential war products.

To obtain the long fibers it is necessary to mine many tons of short fibers which are utilized chiefly in asbestos shingles. The same ruling holds good where repairs are needed when it comes to re-siding of homes.

Before the new order roof and siding repairs were permitted, but the extent of the work was limited to the area actually in need of attention.

The new amendment exempts asbestos shingles and siding from the $200 limit and permits a complete reroofing or re-siding job to be done provided some repairs or painting are required.

FALL CONCERT AT MUNDELEIN SLATED TODAY

Grill, will play Beethoven's "Largo" and an excerpt from "London Suite" by Eric Coates. The college trio will play selections from the works of Haydn, Sabelius, and Brahms.

Mary L. Gulick, 5940 Newburg avenue, and Muriel Meinkin, 6336 North Claremont avenue, will play piano solos. Bernice Bielewa, 1501 Superior street, will play a violin solo. Members of the college trio are Lillian Muza, 3237 North Leavitt street, Barbara Ann Frick, 7141 Yates avenue, and Dorothy Grill of Berwyn.

The Rev. Lars O. Anderson, pastor of Trinity Lutheran church of Evanston, is general chairman of the arrangements committee.

This afternoon's program, at 3:40 o'clock, will open with an organ prelude by Arnold L. Schultz, director of music at the United Lutheran church in Oak Park. The Rev. Gordon Nasby, pastor of the Edison Park Lutheran church, will lead the assembly in singing the national anthem.

Chorus of 300 Will Sing.

Instrumental music will be presented by Helen Rovelstad Rognlie, pianist, of Zion Lutheran church, Elgin. The Chicago Circuit Centennial mixed chorus of 300 voices will appear, under direction of the Rev. Alvin Snesrud, pastor of Moreland Lutheran church.

Dr. Martin Anderson, president of the Eastern district of the national church body, will preside at ceremonies introducing the Rev. George Aus of Luther Theological seminary, St. Paul, Minn. Admission to the services is free.

The history of the church body dates back to 1843, when a group of Norwegian immigrants settling in Waukesha county, Wis., decided to establish a Lutheran church in their community. The first structure was of rough hewn logs, erected at Muskego, Wis. The Rev. Claus L. Clausen was the first pastor.

Number 3,000 Churches.

From this focal point the Norwegian Lutheran church in America has grown to 3,000 affiliated churches, with 350,000 members. The Rev. J. A. Aasgaard of Minneapolis is president of the national organization.

In the Chicagoland area, the group maintains the Edison Park Children's home, the Bethesda home for the aged, the Deaconess hospital and home, a children's home finding society, a mission home, a radio station at Elgin, and an institutional missionary station.

Largest Is in Oak Park.

The first Chicago church was organized in 1848, in what is now known as Lake View Lutheran church, Roscoe and Osgood streets. The largest of the Chicagoland congregations is that of the United Lutheran church of Oak Park, of which the Rev. Edwin M. Hegge is minister.

Among local church leaders assisting in arrangements for the services are the Rev. Gordon Nasby, Victory Nordhem, Lars S. Kildahl, and Garfield Stensland. INFANT SMILES LIGHT HAVEN OF 9,000 MOTHERS

Hospital Gives Aid to Poor, Unwed.

BY IRENE PONTO.

Nine thousand poor or unwed mothers have found comfort at the Misericordia Hospital and Infants' home, home of the Sorrowful Heart, established in 1921 by the late Cardinal George W. Mundelein at 2916 47th street and conducted by the Sisters of Mercy for poor and unmarried mothers.

During the last 22 years, 6,021 poor mothers, 3,589 unwed girls, and 9,633 babies have been tenderly cared for by the kindly sisters and by physicians from Loyola university, who donate their services. A large number of married women were patients at the hospital during the depression, which raised the total number for that classification. Twins and babies brought in for care from other sources account for the total of 9,633 babies.

Many Infants Adopted.

Of this total, 837 babies have been given out for adoption under the auspices of the Catholic home bureau of the Catholic Charity bureau of the archdiocese of Chicago, whose director is the Rev. William A. O'Connor. One third of the unwed mothers leave their infants for adoption, Sister Grace Marie, R. N., superintendent, estimated. Another third take their babies with them, and the last third are not eligible for adoption, she said, because of mental or disease barriers in the family history. They become wards of the bureau.

Thoro obstetrical care is available to the mothers and an equally thoro pediatric department looks after the infants from the time of birth to the age of two years. Monthly clinics are conducted for resident patients and expectant mothers who come from their homes for the hospital examinations.

12 Nurses on Staff.

The 20 bed hospital has a staff of 12 graduate nurses, 10 secular nurses and two sisters, a chief cook and assistant, two laundresses, and six sisters. Sister Grace Marie came from the eye, ear, nose, and throat department of Mercy hospital last year. Sister Jane Frances, head nurse, and Sister Mary Gilberta also are graduates of Mercy hospital. When possible, the girl patients assist the staff.

Word of Misericordia's services reaches an unwed girl thru her priest, thru physicians, and, today, particularly, thru the Red Cross. Arriving a short time before the birth of the child, she remains from one to two or three weeks with the baby. The hospital accepts Protestant girls as well as Catholic and accepts all races.

Many of the patients are in their teens, from 17, 18, to 19 years. Records, however, show that the range of ages is from 11 to 42 years. Patients unable to pay for their care, as is true of nearly 90 per cent, receive free treatment. Those who can, pay $50.

"Value Baby's Soul."

Speaking at the dedication exercises 22 years ago, Cardinal Mundelein said:

"We have built this maternity hospital not for sentiment or philanthropy, or to shield the sinner, but because we realize the great value of a baby's soul."

An anniversary booklet, in stressing the twofold aim of the hospital, adds that "poverty should not be allowed to rob motherhood of its necessary safeguards. Financial embarrassment in the home should not be permitted to endanger the lives of the children of honest people."

Many unwed mothers return to visit the sisters from time to time. They never are told the whereabouts of their children, if adopted, to avoid emotional disturbances. But the girls return. "They never mention their babies," Sister Grace Marie recounted soberly, "but you know they are thinking of them."

Joy to the Sisters.

Holding a dimpled toddler, she smiled, "The babies are our greatest joy. We have so much sorrow."

A group of Catholic women has raised funds annually for the hospital. First named the ladies' auxiliary, it now is known as the executive board. Mrs. Grey Sullivan is president. The South Side Catholic Woman's club and the Daughters of Isabella both maintain four bed wards.

Sisters of Mercy Give Children Loving Care at Misericordia Hospital and Home

On the grounds of Misericordia hospital and Infants' home, 2916 West 47th street, a frolicsome 2 year old, Tommie, is watched by Sister Grace Marie, R. N., superintendent. Similarly, countless other babies have been cared for by the Sisters of Mercy since 1921 at the southwest side home for poor or unwed mothers, which is under the direction of the Catholic Charity bureau. Sturdy Corinthian pillars of the red brick colonial building suggest the strength developed by troubled hearts during their brief stay.

Mike, 1 year old, is famous for a gentlemanly disposition and wide grin, reaching from ear to ear. The executive board will hold a benefit breakfast next Sunday at the Drake hotel to raise funds for necessary equipment and service at the home.

Canvas swings for the very young babies feature the sunny playroom on the third floor. Encouraged by Sister Mary Gilberta, R. N., Loretta, Juanita, and Gregory rock gently to and fro. Juanita was celebrating a monthly birthday when the picture was taken.

Sister Jane Frances, R. N., head nurse, turns a loving smile on a tiny infant cradled in a pink satin and dotted Swiss bassinet fashioned and donated by high school girls of St. Xavier's academy, 49th street and Cottage Grove avenue. Catholic groups contribute regularly to the home or provide special equipment.

Formulae for 30 babies is prepared in formula rooms by Sister Mary Monica and assistants. White tiled walls, an autoclave for sterilizing milk, bottle warmer, and foot pedals for sinks make the formula kitchens up to date. Here sister is about to begin placing utensils away in cupboards.

Chicagoan, 23, Takes Part in Ploesti Raids

A veteran of 28 bombing flights from bases in England and North Africa, Tech. Sgt. Bernard Regan of Chicago returned home recently after two years abroad and found the United States the most beautiful place in the world.

Sgt. Bernard Regan.

"When I saw the colors of the trees in autumn I felt at home right then, no matter what part of the country it was in," Sgt. Regan said. "I knew I was back in God's country."

Sgt. Regan, who is spending part of a furlough at the home of his brother, Robert, 7329 Wabash avenue, and with other relatives in and near Chicago, took part in the famous raid on the Ploesti, Rumania, oil refineries by American bombers.

Bombers Came in Low.

"We came in low approaching the targets, climbed about 50 feet to drop our delayed action bombs, and then went down again to get out of there," he said. When the plane had returned to its base the crew found weeds caught in the bomb bay doors when they had flown in upon their targets.

"The people stood in the streets and waved at us, and we waved back at them," explained Sgt. Regan. "Haystacks, outbuildings and such just seemed to fall apart and become hidden gun nests as we were going over."

The Ploesti raid was "the roughest I've ever seen," he said, despite the fact that his own plane avoided Nazi fighter opposition by coming in low when the enemy at first expected the bombers to come in from a high altitude. Succeeding waves of planes did not escape fighter opposition.

Sgt. Regan still carries a fragment of an anti-aircraft shell in his hip as a raid memento. He took part in three more raids after he was wounded, before being returned to the United States for assignment as an instructor.

Three Ships—Same Name.

The south side youth, who is 23 years old and a graduate of Parker High school, was an aerial engineer on three bombers, two of which were so badly shot up that he and his mates received new ships.

The first bomber lasted thru 12 raids on France and northern Germany before the pilot set it down for the last time. Two engines were shot out and the plane was a wreck, Sgt. Regan said. "If we'd seen what it looked like before we got down we would have bailed out," he stated.

The second bomber lasted thru only two raids, and the third lasted thru the next 13 raids, but when Sgt. Regan left Africa it was being repaired and "it looked pretty bad."

Wears Several Decorations.

Sgt. Regan wears the air medal with four oak leaf clusters, the distinguished flying cross with cluster, the Purple Heart, and a ribbon with two stars denoting action in England and Africa.

Two of his brothers are in the army. Sgt. John Regan is at Fort Ord, Cal., and Pvt. Vincent Regan is in North Africa. Two sisters, Mrs. Mary Fisher and Miss Margaret Regan, live at 14614 Sacramento avenue, Blue Island. His parents, Mr. and John J. Regan, formerly of 524 West Marquette road, and another sister, Mrs. Helen Schwieger, live in Alhambra, Cal. Sgt. Regan expects to leave Chicago today to spend the rest of his furlough with them.

GAMES, STUNTS WILL HIGHLIGHT WEEK-END FUN

Programs Offered to Tempt Children.

Halloween witchery will ride thru the crisp October air to descend upon the city parks next week-end for a two night stay. Merrymaking will begin Saturday, altho Halloween is Sunday night, Oct. 31, the eve of All Saints' day. The feast of All Saints of Hallowmas ushers in the Hallowtide, or first week of November.

Emphasis of park programs this year is upon relaxation from war strain and the opportunity to add war bonds and stamps thru prizes and awards. Among the host of attractions will be games, dances, dramatics, stunts, and simulated witchcraft, parades, apple bobbing contests, costume judging, community singing, treasure hunts, and candy scrambles.

In this manner park district recreation leaders plan to prevent mischievous destruction from Halloween pranks. Local civic, business, and improvement associations are coming forward to aid the parks in providing prizes, refreshments, decorative materials, and necessary funds.

Details of activities in several southwest parks are as follows:

OGDEN PARK.

Saturday evening will be the highlight of the celebration at Ogden park, 56th street and Racine avenue. The Kiwanis club of Englewood will be hosts with Ralph Bodin, park supervisor. Five parties, the first starting at 6:30 p. m. are planned. The girls' gym group program will start out with Genevieve Valvoda at 6:30 p. m., and simultaneously the boys' gym groups will begin their frolics under Adolph Gentiel. The dramatics group will start with Grace Keleher as leader, the art crafters will lead off with Florence Cavanaugh, and the craft groups will open their special festivities with Robinson Johnson.

At 8:30 p. m. all groups will combine in the assembly hall for mass entertainment, including a movie with cartoon and full length feature. Apples and donuts will have their inning at the conclusion of the program.

There will be a children's art craft party at 3:30 p. m. Thursday and a party for adults Thursday evening.

McKINLEY PARK.

Friday evening at 7 o'clock is the starting time for the Halloween celebration. The entire recreation staff will join with William Hoff, park supervisor, to stage games, stunts, singing contest, and dancing for community youngsters. As a grand finale all the boys and girls will particpate in a witch hunt thruout the park.

BRAINERD PARK.

The neighborhood is invited to the Saturday evening entertainment, and several hundred residents, young and old, are expected to cut capers thru square dances and the general party which will begin at 8 p. m. Costumes are in order and will be judged for originality. Games and other entertainment will mark the Saturday celebration.

JOLIET GROUPS JOIN DRIVE FOR YOUTH CENTER

Joliet civic, church, and school groups have joined forces to stage a city-wide drive for a youth center costing $10,000. Designed for students of three Joliet high schools and two junior colleges, the center will be open to all creeds and races, Paul E. Mapes, chairman of the sponsoring committee and principal of Farragut Junior High school, said.

Joliet Youth Center, Inc., will be located in the gymnasium of the Central Presbyterian church and will offer Friday and Saturday evening entertainment and dancing. It also will be available for small group activities from 4 to 8 p. m. during the week, Mapes said. While the building has been given rent free, extensive remodeling and decorating will be done upon completion of the drive.

Working with Mr. Mapes are Mrs. William Leser, clubwoman, vice president; Miss Dew Dailey, Joliet Township High school teacher, secretary, and Elmer E. Geissler, treasurer, and other civic leaders. The Will County Ministerial association will represent the churches of the area. Richard Matteson, Joliet Township High school senior, is acting president of the young people's committee, which meets with the adult workers to plan future recreation programs and facilities.

TECH STUDENTS PUT NEW LIFE IN CAMPUS PAPER

Launch Side Course in Journalism.

A period of transition during which the Technology News, student organ of the Illinois Institute of Technology, developed into The New Technology News with a different approach to the handling of school stories and personalities ended recently with the publication of the last paper for this semester.

Richard Larson.

Several students, including a number of south side residents were initiated as charter members of the Tech chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalistic fraternity.

Change Last Spring.

The change in the newspaper occurred last April, after several students approached Paul Ridings, director of the Tech news bureau, and asked what could be done to revise the Technology News to present timely, interesting school news and at the same time instill some order into its method of publication.

Heretofore student editors and reporters had written school news and then, the week-end before publication, had written the headlines to fill whatever hole might be left in a type page above the story.

Thru the coöperation of Ridings and the managing board of the paper, all this was changed. A headline schedule was put into effect, a new type face and paper adopted, and a news gathering system based on that of a professional newspaper was adopted.

All Study Journalism.

In addition, the board ruled that thereafter every student who worked on the paper had to take a journalism course which was started last July 6 with Ridings as the teacher.

Staff members who were initiated into the Tech chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon included: Richard B. Larson, 8209 South May avenue, editor; Arthur Olson, 7734 East End avenue, managing editor; Charles Rowbotham, 7704 Cregier avenue, feature editor, and Ulysses Backas, 819 West 77th street, sports editor. Others initiated included Jerry Houle, 5942 North Paulina street, business manager and navy student who now lives on the campus, and Clifford Oliver, 8342 Drexel avenue.

ANTIQUE SALES UP—IF DEALERS CAN GET GOODS

Southwest Side Reports Growing Demand.

BY IRENE PONTO.

Antique dealers of the southwest side, as well as other dealers of this area, report an unprecedented business this fall.

"Is the best it has ever been," said one dealer on Halsted street, adding with a sigh, "If we could only get more stuff to sell."

"Our basement and garage are cleaned out," said Mrs. Alice Hulett Metz, "and the stock in the store is depleted." With her husband, Walter R. Metz, she operates a shop at 9115 Western avenue. As much business is done now in a few hours as was conducted when four people made up the daily sales force, Mrs. Metz said.

Take Larger Quarters.

Johnson and Mackle at 7419 Western avenue have moved to larger quarters at 6341 Western avenue. "We're making money, selling is brisk," smiled Mrs. Kathryn Mackle, 10114 Bell avenue, who supervises the clean and sparkling shop with her sister, Mrs. Alma Johnson, 9804 Damen avenue.

Much of the business conducted by the two Western avenue shops is with antique dealers today, officials said. Dealers who are more centrally located, dealers from downstate, or even from different sections of the country are combing antique shops to replenish stocks or to pick up unusual items unobtainable in their areas.

Explains Big Demand.

Altho the dealer trade is a new development, customer buying has spurted sales and is responsible for the happy smiles found in the "shoppes." Mrs. Metz, a lecturer on old glass, explains the demand this way.

"Antiques are a fine investment when inflation is present because their value increases," said Mrs. Metz, an art teacher in the Chicago schools for several years. "And during war time, patriotism is alive and people become reinterested in the history and life of their forebears and country."

Sought by All Ages.

A third reason, she offered was the fact that "the search for antiques is one amusement that does not affect the war effort. It is followed generally by middle aged couples or older people, settled in their own homes." Fourthly, Mrs. Metz said, the curtailment of furniture manufacture has turned young home furnishers to the old pieces, in which they rediscover beauty and value.

Antique furniture, glass, and art objects are located almost anywhere households are established, the Western avenue shopowners said. A favorite locale is Wisconsin around Whitewater and Oconomowoc, altho Illinois offers "finds" for collectors. Before gas rationing, both the Metzes and Mrs. Johnson used their cars to roam the midwest, visiting out of the way towns and farm homes. Mr. Metz, teacher of electrical engineering at Carl Schurz High school, and his wife once purchased quantities of goods from the Amish of Indiana, around Nappanee and Goshen, Ind.

Get Items from England.

Goods are still arriving satisfactorily from England, and recently Mrs. Metz learned from an English periodical that the antique dealers of the British Isles reported 1943 "the best year they had ever had."

Mrs. Mackle reported heavy demand for old fashioned round globe lamps, highly decorated. "People use them in cottages," she said. Prism hanging lamps are popular, and a high favorite with private buyers who can afford them are the pre-war Dresden and Old Meissen pieces—candlelabra, vases, figurines.

Mrs. Mackle and her sister, both housewives, collected antiques for their homes for many years. Boxes and boxes accumulated, interest of both ladies grew, and the shop on Western avenue materialized two years ago.

Heads Trade Chamber.

Bernard Thompson, 7618 Vernon avenue, has been elected president of the Grand Crossing-Chatham Chamber of Commerce.

COURSE IN U. S. DEMOCRACY NOW OPEN AT U. OF C.

A seminar course in American democracy, based on a study of fundamental documents and writings around which the United States was built, has been started at the University of Chicago and at University college, 18 South Michigan avenue. Registration for the classes will continue until Nov. 1.

In past years the coursese have begun with the study of great books in a chronological pattern, but this year the university adopted a plan of presenting the complete works of great democratic thinkers in the nation's early days, so that present day Americans may know what the pioneers had in mind when the Republic was founded.

Prof. Joseph T. Schwab, director of the courses, said students without a college education were encouraged to enroll. "Paine and Jefferson approached the problems of their time with fresh minds," he said. "We desire fresh, but alert minds as students of Paine and Jefferson."

SICILY VETERAN HEADS COLORED SELFRIDGE UNIT

Chief of 99th to Train New Negro Flyers.

BY ROSCOE SIMMONS.

Lt. Col. Davis.

Selfridge Field, Mich., Oct. 23—It was more silver lining than cloud for Selfridge field when Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr. was inducted as executive officer of the 332d fighter group.

All Selfridge put on its best for the occasion, glad that the more pleasant hour had struck for a place harassed by a chain of circumstances that got out of hand.

Talk of Sicily Action.

Visitors who had come in for the event dwelt on the recent exploits of Col. Davis in the Sicilian campaign, but there were those who felt that the war department was anointing him with an authority new to the customs of the army.

But the day was not entirely one for Col. Davis, regarded by many as the model West Pointer. A father stepped into the scene, and that father went back to the Spanish-American war. It was for that conflict that Col. Davis' father, Gen. B. O. Davis Sr., enlisted as a private from Washington, D. C.

Now he was present as a brigadier general on the staff of the inspector general of the army, an official witness to the induction of his only son as an executive officer in one of the great air fields of the country, this beginning a new era for the American Negro soldier.

Star in His Eyes.

At dinner a Negro soldier, waiting on the officers and their party, had fixed his eyes on the star which decorates the expensive shoulders of Gen. Davis. He seemed blind to all else about him. He tipped a cup of coffee, which spilled over two officers.

"Excuse me, please do," he said, a great smile playing a chubby countenance. "But I was just looking. I heard talk of the colored general. I have seen him; now I'm ready for any questions either Hitler or the Japs want to ask me," is the way he put it to comrades.

A dozen officers' hands went up in forgiveness and he went his way rejoicing.

Col. Davis was ordered home from Sicily to undertake the training of American flyers. He had led the 99th squadron in a campaign nothing short of an eye-opener to the command in Africa. Within four months the 99th had proved all talk of unreadiness of the American trained Negro flyers for combat against any foe was but dumb doubt.

Win Fellows' Respect.

The conduct of the 99th in the air won the admiration of their fellow American flyers and the surprised respect of the British.

"They were the gallant boys," said Col. Davis, "alert under fire, brave enough, holding back nothing. Americans thru and thru, and I hated to leave them, but I'll be seeing them soon again, I hope."

Of his own exploits Col. Davis would say nothing, with him it was "we" for even the little he would consent to tell of the conduct of his comrades.

"We landed at Casablanca in April," he said, "and we were busy with the enemy until we reached Sicily. We undertook every mission assigned to us and it is said we failed in none."

Daily Deadly Task.

Engagements took the 99th from Tunis to the Italian boot, and for 11 days over Pantelleria the 99th fighters threw their ships thru the air in ceaseless combat. Dive bombing, the deadliest warfare in the air, became a daily dask. "They didn't miss and they didn't flinch," said Col. Davis.

"Every opportunity was afforded us," he said, "to show what we could do, and we stand on the record." Col. Davis was sent home to ready other colored flyers for air war in both the Atlantic and Pacific.

From the hard engagement over Pantelleria the 99th moved to defensive routine patrol, but soon began to provide escort of protection for the movement against Sicily. It became a major air support unit, and as such participated in the battle of Salerno.

For 13 days Col. Davis and his fighters covered the movements and landings of the troops bound for Sicily. "Those are days we can never forget," he said. "We had 37 pilots, and every pilot was an American soldier.

"We saw all the soldiers engaged with us, the French, the British, and the utterly fearless Gourmerliers, but we had every reason to be proud of the boys in the uniform of the United States," said Col. Davis.

When early in September the allied forces began its movement on Italy the 99th was called on to cover. "It was the highest hour for our fighters," said Col. Davis. They were up in the thickest of the conflict. They knew that they had done well and had won the attention of Gen. Eisenhower's command.

Now Col. Davis is back as chief executive to Col. Robert Selway Jr., commander of fighter units at Selfridge field. He will train the 332d fighter group, which is the heart of men at Selfridge getting ready for air combat.

"Two things," said Col. Davis, "I would like to speak of. First, the morale of our boys both as exhibited in Africa and in Italy; then, the comforting gallantry and kindness of Josephine Baker, a great American girl, who took us to her heart and became our friend, our monitor, and our comrade. Our country will owe much to her, and in Africa she was all the world to us."

The entire base at Selfridge, without race or color distinction, gave Col. Davis a soldier's reception, the warmest yet seen at this field.

No one, not even Col. Davis' soldier-father, seemed happier than base commander Col. William Boyd and Col. Selway.

Three Generations Fight Germans

Engaged to Marine

The betrothal of Stella Mae Dolezal to Marine Corp. Leo Lacey, southwest Pacific area, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mont Lacey of 6618 May street, has been made known by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Dolezal of 6501 Morgan street. Miss Dolezal attended Sacred Heart High school and her fiance attended Tilden Technical High school.

MATERIALS LAB AT ILLINOIS TECH IN RECORD PACE

50 Year High Set in Testing Volume.

Faced with unprecedented demands because of the war, the materials testing laboratory on the south campus of the Illinois Institute of Technology now is handling the greatest volume of business in its 50 year history.

The materials that go into the tools of war are run thru the machines at the testing laboratory almost daily, for tests are made upon all materials to check against imperfections and hidden weaknesses, and to remedy defects and faults.

Airplane parts, guns, tank treads, all parts of parachutes, and hundreds of other parts of weapons and equipment which are being tested make the laboratory, in the opinion of Phil C. Huntly, director, one of the busiest in the world in the volume of work being turned out.

Laboratory Has Grown.

Mr. Huntly, head of the civil engineering department, which operates the laboratory thru the Armour Research Foundation, was director of the laboratory during World War I. and has seen it grow as engineering advanced. He also has seen most of its machines idle during the depression years, when testing was at practically a standstill.

The laboratory makes all kinds of tests on materials for pressure and strain, twisting and lasting strength under all sorts of conditions. Tests are run to determine how materials react under temperatures varying from 65 degrees below zero to 2,250 degrees Fahrenheit, and in some cases steel has been tested at temperatures as low as 125 degrees below zero.

Must Meet Specifications.

The government has no testing work done directly, but all parts going into the machines of war must meet specifications set up by the government and private business, and industrial firms send materials to the Tech laboratory to be tested under these requirements.

If there is a wreck or explosion somewhere, the laboratory is likely to receive materials to be tested to determine the cause of the accident. If tests show that design and material were both good in the part examined, officials then look for neglect somewhere as the cause.

Widely Varied Interests.

The laboratory director, Huntly, has been at Illinois Tech since 1914, when he because an instructor of mechanical engineering. In 1934 he was made director of the mechanical engineering department, and in 1938 he became director of civil engineering. In his spare time he is president of the Riverside village board; president of the West Suburban Village Officials association, and reemployment committeeman for a selective service board.

"The first war made people 'testing conscious,' but testing fell away to practically nothing in 1932 and 1933," Huntly explained. "Now, in this war, everything is being tested, and people are learning to demand that tests be made on practically anything put on the market."

SCHALCKS FIGHT 3 WARS AND EYE PEACE PROSPECT

Great-Grandfather Hero of Iroquois Fire.

BY AGNES AHERN.

In 1871 Michel Schalck, 1722 North Mozart street, donned the uniform of the French marines to fight against Germany in the Franco-Prussian war. Since that time fighting against Germany has become a tradition in the Schalck family. Michel's son, Arthur, was a corporal in the United States army in World War I. His grandson is now wearing the uniform of a lieutenant in the navy.

Today, from the vantage point of his 96 years, Michel Schalck is wondering if his great-grandson, Michael Robin Schalck, will find it necessary to carry on the military tradition that three generations of wars have established in the family.

Summers on Fruit Farm.

Michel Schalck, who was born in Alsace Lorraine Dec. 24, 1846, served as a private in the war of 1871. He came thru the conflict unscathed and emigrated to Chicago in 1872. Here he established his own business as a building contractor, making his home on Mozart avenue. After his retirement at the age of 65, he spent the next 10 summers operating a fruit farm at Benton Harbor, Mich. During the winters he made his home in Chicago, as he has continued to do in recent years.

At the time of the Iroquois theater fire in 1903, Mr. Schalck distinguished himself by his heroic rescue of a woman. An account of the incident, published in the CHICAGO TRIBUNE of Dec. 31, 1903, follows:

Face, Hands Burned.

"M. Schalck of 709 North Mozart street was in the balcony with his wife. With one arm around her, he fought his way to a place of safety and then turned to save a woman who was caught between a seat and a dead body. He wrenched the woman free, though she fainted. Schalck found his first avenue of escape cut off as he returned, and his face and hands were badly burned as he bore out the unconscious victim."

When Germany opened hostilities against the United States during the first World war, Michel Schalck's son, Arthur, became a member of the 56th army engineers.

Stationed in Detroit.

Arthur's son, Walter S. Schalck, was graduated from Purdue university just five months after Pearl Harbor. On his commencement day he was commissioned an ensign in the navy, and a year later, in May, 1943, he was made a lieutenant [j. g.]. He is assigned to the bureau of ships in Detroit, Mich., where he is making his home with his wife, Elaine, and their infant son, Michael Robin.

GARY HOSPITAL ADDS $350,000 IMPROVEMENT

Methodist Bishop to Speak Today.

A four story addition which will double the bed capacity of the Gary Methodist hospital will be dedicated at a ceremony at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the cafeteria of the new wing. The facilities of the addition will be put into use immediately after the dedication.

The addition adds 130 beds to the original hospital, which was built 22 years ago. The new wing, built to form an L-shaped building, is constructed of brick and concrete, and is trimmed with Indiana limestone.

Of the cost of about $350,000, the hospital borrowed $265,000 from the federal works administration and furnished the remainder of the money itself. Ground was broken a year ago this month. In addition, the hospital has just let a contract to enlarge its laundry at a cost of $45,000, and for new laundry equipment costing $10,000.

Bishop Titus Lowe of Indianapolis, resident Methodist bishop of Indiana, will deliver the dedicatory address. Other speakers will include Joseph E. Finnerty, mayor of Gary; Dr. Joseph E. Gladstone, chairman of the hospital's medical staff; Dr. R. T. Ponton of Chicago representing the American College of Surgeons; Laurence Gillette of Chicago, regional director of the federal works administration; Edgar Blake, superintendent of Wesley Memorial hospital in Chicago and former superintendent of the Gary hospital, and Herschel B. Davis, president of the hospital board.

Demands on the Gary Methodist hospital have taxed its facilities, according to Dr. James Lawson, superintendent, who said the opening of the new wing will provide a dozen eight bed wards, eight wards of three beds each, and two wards of six beds each.

Y. M. C. A. Open House.

An open house and members induction program will be held Friday at the Grand Crossing-Chatham Y. M. C. A. Several new members will be inducted into the community branch organization.

KEEP WARY EYE ON OVERHEAD— YOUR ROOFING

Repairs Should Be Made in Next Few Weeks.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Now is the time to be keeping an eye on the overhead, for the roof, and what happens to it, this coming winter is of considerable importance. If repairs are to be made, or a new roof is needed, the weeks before ice and snow arrive are the best to have the work done.

In roof inspection, one of the first things to check is the condition of shingles. If any are loose, they should be nailed tightly and any that are missing should be replaced.

Wood Shingle Repairs.

Sometimes a wood shingle roof which has a tendency to leak can have its life extended by application of a compound of asbestos and asphalt fibers. A good roofer could advise on whether or not this is practical, or whether a new roof is needed.

There are definite advantages in placing a new roof directly on top of the old one. Some added heat resistance and stiffness is afforded, in addition to saving on labor costs and the avoidance of dirt outside and inside the house.

Where there is roll roofing there is need for application of roof coating every four or five years. This will renew the dried out oils which in time can make the roofing brittle. If this type roofing is too badly dried or rotted a coating will not restore it.

Paint the Tin Roof.

A tin roof should be kept well painted to guard against rust. Red lead gives excellent protection. If there are holes they can be closed with plastic roofing cement. Liquid asphalt roofing cement also can be used for a tin roof in place of paint.

The condition of flashing should be most carefully checked. These flashings, which are the metal protection placed at angles and corners where shingles cannot give proper coverage, must be kept free from leaks. They can be kept in good condition by painting with lead or oil paints. Where signs of wear are evident it is advisable to trowel on a coat of asbestos roof putty.

Any roofing material of ordinary weight can be selected for a new roof which is to be laid over an old one such as wood shingles, asphalt slate singles, or asbestos shingles.

New WPB Ruling.

Of interest to home owners is a new ruling by the war production board which has removed the restrictions on the use of asbestos shingles for reroofing of homes where repairs are necessary. This was done so that long fibered asbestos might be obtained for essential war products.

To obtain the long fibers it is necessary to mine many tons of short fibers which are utilized chiefly in asbestos shingles. The same ruling holds good where repairs are needed when it comes to re-siding of homes.

Before the new order roof and siding repairs were permitted, but the extent of the work was limited to the area actually in need of attention.

The new amendment exempts asbestos shingles and siding from the $200 limit and permits a complete reroofing or re-siding job to be done provided some repairs or painting are required.

The 100th anniversary of the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America will be observed this afternoon by the 30 churches of the denomination in the Chicago area, in the auditorium of the Carl Schurz High school, Milwaukee avenue and Addison street. The Rev. Lars O. Anderson, pastor of Trinity Lutheran church of Evanston, is general chairman of the arrangements committee.

This afternoon's program, at 3:40 o'clock, will open with an organ prelude by Arnold L. Schultz, director of music at the United Lutheran church in Oak Park. The Rev. Gordon Nasby, pastor of the Edison Park Lutheran church, will lead the assembly in singing the national anthem.

Chorus of 300 Will Sing.

Instrumental music will be presented by Helen Rovelstad Rognlie, pianist, of Zion Lutheran church, Elgin. The Chicago Circuit Centennial mixed chorus of 300 voices will appear, under direction of the Rev. Alvin Snesrud, pastor of Moreland Lutheran church.

Dr. Martin Anderson, president of the Eastern district of the national church body, will preside at ceremonies introducing the Rev. George Aus of Luther Theological seminary, St. Paul, Minn. Admission to the services is free.

The history of the church body dates back to 1843, when a group of Norwegian immigrants settling in Waukesha county, Wis., decided to establish a Lutheran church in their community. The first structure was of rough hewn logs, erected at Muskego, Wis. The Rev. Claus L. Clausen was the first pastor.

Number 3,000 Churches.

From this focal point the Norwegian Lutheran church in America has grown to 3,000 affiliated churches, with 350,000 members. The Rev. J. A. Aasgaard of Minneapolis is president of the national organization.

In the Chicagoland area, the group maintains the Edison Park Children's home, the Bethesda home for the aged, the Deaconess hospital and home, a children's home finding society, a mission home, a radio station at Elgin, and an institutional missionary station.

Largest Is in Oak Park.

The first Chicago church was organized in 1848, in what is now known as Lake View Lutheran church, Roscoe and Osgood streets. The largest of the Chicagoland congregations is that of the United Lutheran church of Oak Park, of which the Rev. Edwin M. Hegge is minister.

Among local church leaders assisting in arrangements for the services are the Rev. Gordon Nasby, Victory Nordhem, Lars S. Kildahl, and Garfield Stensland. Others who will be present include Magnus Ronning, Peter Cleven, Harry Ekeberg, Theodore Dahlstrom, Axel Jensen, Adolph H. Norland, Neal S. Conroy, Mrs. Andrew Benson, Ralph Blaha, all of Chicago, and Adolph Ensrud, Earl B. Torland, Dr. Martin O. Juel, Andrew Benson, and Fred Benson of Oak Park.

SPOOKS TO HAUNT WEST SIDE LAIRS

FAST SUBURBAN TRAINS PASS UP A RURAL SHOW

Auctioneer's Spiel Draws Crowds.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

Both Lombard and Downers Grove are well within the perimeter of the west suburban area. Commuters of either community, reaching home on Wednesday nights, are aware that their towns are closely linked with a string of towns to the great city. The change of environment has been a matter of degree. But between the two villages there remains a farming country, far more remote in atmosphere than is signified by actual distance from the loop.

Should a Lombardian take the highway south and continue to Roosevelt road, there turn a bit east where Highland avenue leads into Downers Grove, he would come upon the farm of the Walsh brothers.

Weekly Center of Interest.

The Walsh farm, with its cluster of house and barn and windbreak, appears no different on the horizon than other farms in the open country between two main lines of railway transportation. But on Wednesday nights the Walsh barn is the scene of an activity which dwellers on the nearby farms seem to prefer for its excitement above that offered by any sporting event.

Interior of the barn has been whitewashed clear to the rafters. A strong electric light in the center of the roof gives the place the brightness of day. There is a placard that reads "People entering salesring at own risk." The ring is covered with sawdust. On either side there are tiers of seats where the men, women, and children visit with one another and wait expectantly.

The talk has to do with the soybean crop, canning, experience in fattening live stock. A youth, who gives evidence of having worked in the fields all summer, boasts to his companions that he is planning to buy a combine. A neighbor boy in a sailor uniform, home on furlough, lends a war time touch. Over all, hangs the hint of the importance of food in a time of shortages.

Masters Flourish Whip.

Patrick V. Walsh, Chicago business man who resides at 524 South Ridgeland avenue, Oak Park, and his brother, Martin F. Walsh, who runs their farm, each carrying long bamboo whips, move about with the glamour of circus ringmasters. There is the impression of suspense that goes with preliminaries leading up to an anticipated attraction.

Finally, the leading character mounts the rostrum at one end of the arena to stand beneath an American flag. He is Elmer Blecke of Addison. He peers at the spectators from under the brim of his slightly tilted felt hat. He begins to talk, simultaneously with the pounding of a bit of hose for a gavel. His words rise and fall and run together as seven Iowa beef steers, finished and ready to butcher, are pushed from their pens to bellow and all but stampede in the arena.

"All right, folks. Ready to start. What do I hear? Start it out at something."

Auctioneer Catches a Nod.

The jumble of sharp sentences accomplish their purpose, altho the novice at auctions is bewildered by what seems a lack of response from the crowd. "They let him know with a nod of their heads," a farm boy explained.

Those at the auction sprawl leisurely on the whitewashed seats, but in the eyes of the men and the boys there is shrewd appraisal. It is a matter of pride with them that they know a good steer. The art of judgment has not been learned easily. It is a fascinating study.

Among those at the auction are Mr. and Mrs. Archie McPherson of Downers Grove; Mr. and Mrs. William Hoeppner and two sons of Lombard; L. E. Boecker of Naperville; the Venard family of Downers Grove; Eddie McMahon of Downers Grove; the Gus Thielk family of Lombard; and the George Voss family of Hinsdale. Dr. Olin Wheaton, Naperville veterinarian, attends the sale as a requirement of a state law. Not all are farm folk. The group includes Charles Burdick, Chicago business man and Downers Grove farmer. Interested spectators are Sen. James B. Leonardi and his wife from Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Houha of Oak Park.

Bank on Human Nature.

After the steers have been disposed of, crates of poultry are brought into the ring. Now, even the smallest of the boys and the girls from the farms have their moments. They are given the privilege of grasping the fowls by their legs so that they may flutter and display their merits.

Merchandise auctioned off included tables, garden implements, an ornamental plant stand, and a smoking stand.

"We've been holding the auctions Wednesday nights for the last two years," explained Patrick Walsh. "Human nature seems to like an auction, especially when the bidding gets hot. It's an old institution."

Auction at Farm Near Lombard Attracts City and Country Residents Alike

Bidding began at the Wednesday night auction on the Walsh brothers farm south of Lombard when a herd of white face feeder cattle was brought into the ring. Inspecting the calves, left to right, are Martin Walsh, William Hoepner, and Archie McPherson. Each week, farmers in the neighborhood attend the auction. Some come to buy. Some come to sell.

Junior McPherson displays a duck for the benefit of prospective bidders while merits of the precious fowl are proclaimed by Martin Walsh. Dr. Olin Wheaton, at right, attends the auctions as a veterinarian.

All ages are attracted by the auction. Among those in the grandstand were Mr. and Mrs. Archie McPherson and family, Mr. and Mrs. William Vienard, Edward McMahon, and Charles Budrick.

At the peak of the bidding, Patrick V. Walsh, left, takes a place beside Auctioneer Elmer Blecke.

Among those listening closely to the auctioneer were Mrs. Elmer Blecke, Mrs. Olin Wheaton, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Boecker, James Malone, Miss Ann Lehman, Mrs. Lillian Anderson, Miss Romona Anderson, and Miss Ann Walsh.

State Senator James B. Leonardi and wife are among the interested spectators.

The sprinkling of city folks included Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Houha, Mrs. Patrick V. Walsh, Mrs. Tom Casey, Mr. and Mrs. James Walsh, and Cy Kennedy.

PLAN PARADES, CELEBRATIONS ON HALLOWEEN

Communities, OCD, Parks Take Part.

Witches, goblins, jack-o'-lanterns, and spooks will be on the march again next week-end as west side boys and girls celebrate Halloween. The west side parks will be the scene of much activity Friday and Saturday nights as communities stage parades and costume parties for their young people.

As has been the custom for the past several years residents of Austin are planning a large parade and party for their boys and girls. The parade this year, however, will be restricted only to boys and girls in the elementary school grades. Beginning at 7 o'clock 1,000 children are expected to march down Central avenue to Lake street and wind up at Austin Town hall.

Teachers to Judge.

Teachers from the various schools and churches in the community will act as judges, awarding prizes to the most original, funniest, and most grotesque costume. The schools also will enter miniature floats made from wagons, doll carriages, and other toys in the parade for prizes.

After the grand march and awarding of prizes at town hall the boys and girls will take part in an amateur program. Contestants have been asked to register this week at the park.

The party is sponsored by the park district, business and professional men, and the Lions club. Juvenile Officer Fred Settles is general chairman. Other members of the committee are Ald. William J. Lancaster [37th], Fred Bosserman of the park district, Peter Berschuur, William Gilmore, William Childs, who will be master of ceremonies; Henry Friberg, and Marvin Tench.

Friday Night Party.

Children in the vicinity of Sheridan park, Polk and Aberdeen streets, will celebrate Halloween Friday night. More than 600 boys and girls are expected to join in the parade at 7:30 o'clock. Later contests, a "chamber of horrors," and other Halloween features will be held in the fieldhouse. Every one has been asked to come in costume and prizes will be awarded for the funniest, ugliest, and the most grotesque.

Gads Hill community center, 1919 Cullerton avenue, will assist in the Halloween party at Harrison park, 18th and Wood streets, Saturday night. A parade thru the neighboring streets will start at 7 o'clock. On returning to the park the entire parade will pass thru the "chamber of horrors" in the swimming pool dressing rooms, where the paraders will be greeted by the devil, many ghosts, witches, and other traditional "scary" characters. Motion pictures will be shown out of doors on the baseball field and 25 prizes will be awarded for costumes in the parade.

A parade, costume judging, movies, stunts, and community singing have been included in the Friday night program at Douglas park, 14th street and Albany avenue. The party will begin at 7 o'clock in the refectory building. All this week separate parties will be held by the Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Red Cross production unit, and the several gymnasium classes.

Frolic for Adults.

A Halloween party for adults is being planned for Wednesday night at Columbus park refectory, 5700 Jackson boulevard. More than 100 service men will be entertained. Prizes will be awarded for best costumes and there will be Halloween games and contests.

A second party will be held at 7 o'clock Friday night in the boys' gymnasium, Central avenue and Lexington street, for boys and girls. James F. Kelly, physical instructor, is arranging the program.

The OCD is coöperating with plans for a parade and party at 6 o'clock Saturday night in Dvorak park, 1119 Cullerton street. The Boy Scout drum and bugle corps will lead more than 1,500 boys and girls thru the neighborhood streets. Upon returning to the park they will be divided into groups according to communities and separate parties will be given for each of them.

Some in Churches.

One group will be entertained in Dvorak park assembly hall; a second group will gather in the First Bohemian church, 1109 19th street; the third at Bethlehem center, 1853 South Loomis street; the fourth at Howell Neighborhood house, 1831 South Racine avenue, and the fifth at the Halsted Street Institutional church, 1935 South Halsted street.

More than 500 boys and girls are expected to take part in the parade leading from Franklin park, 14th and Kolin streets, at 7:30 o'clock Friday night. Members of the Yarmo Devere American Legion post will lead the parade. They will be followed by the Boy and Girl Scouts and boys and girls in costume.

SICILY VETERAN HEADS COLORED SELFRIDGE UNIT

Chief of 99th to Train New Negro Flyers.

BY ROSCOE SIMMONS.

Selfridge Field, Mich., Oct. 23—It was more silver lining than cloud for Selfridge field when Lt. Col. B. O. Davis Jr. was inducted as executive officer of the 332d fighter group.

Lt. Col. Davis.

All Selfridge put on its best for the occasion, glad that the more pleasant hour had struck for a place harassed by a chain of circumstances that got out of hand.

Talk of Sicily Action.

Visitors who had come in for the event dwelt on the recent exploits of Col. Davis in the Sicilian campaign, but there were those who felt that the war department was anointing him with an authority new to the customs of the army.

But the day was not entirely one for Col. Davis, regarded by many as the model West Pointer. A father stepped into the scene, and that father went back to the Spanish-American war. It was for that conflict that Col. Davis' father, Gen. B. O. Davis Sr., enlisted as a private from Washington, D. C.

Now he was present as a brigadier general on the staff of the inspector general of the army, an official witness to the induction of his only son as an executive officer in one of the great air fields of the country; this beginning a new era for the American Negro soldier.

Star in His Eyes.

At dinner a Negro soldier, waiting on the officers and their party, had fixed his eyes on the star which decorates the expensive shoulders of Gen. Davis. He seemed blind to all else about him. He tipped a cup of coffee, which spilled over two officers.

"Excuse me, please do," he said, a great smile playing a chubby countenance. "But I was just looking. I heard talk of the colored general. I have seen him; now I'm ready for any questions either Hitler or the Japs want to ask me," is the way he put it to comrades.

A dozen officers' hands went up in forgiveness and he went his way rejoicing.

Col. Davis was ordered home from Sicily to undertake the training of American flyers. He had led the 99th squadron in a campaign nothing short of an eye-opener to the command in Africa. Within four months the 99th had proved all talk of unreadiness of the American trained Negro flyers for combat against any foe was but dumb doubt.

Win Fellows' Respect.

The conduct of the 99th in the air won the admiration of their fellow American flyers and the surprised respect of the British.

"They were the gallant boys," said Col. Davis, "alert under fire, brave enough, holding back nothing. Americans thru and thru, and I hated to leave them, but I'll be seeing them soon again, I hope."

Of his own exploits Col. Davis would say nothing, with him it was "we" for even the little he would consent to tell of the conduct of his comrades.

"We landed at Casablanca in April," he said, "and we were busy with the enemy until we reached Sicily. We undertook every mission assigned to us and it is said we failed in none."

Daily Deadly Task.

Engagements took the 99th from Tunis to the Italian boot, and for 11 days over Pantelleria the 99th fighters threw their ships thru the air in ceaseless combat. Dive bombing, the deadliest warfare in the air, became a daily dask. "They didn't miss and they didn't flinch," said Col. Davis.

"Every opportunity was afforded us," he said, "to show what we could do, and we stand on the record." Col. Davis was sent home to ready other colored flyers for air war in both the Atlantic and Pacific.

From the hard engagement over Pantelleria the 99th moved to defensive routine patrol, but soon began to provide escort of protection for the movement against Sicily. It became a major air support unit, and as such participated in the battle of Salerno.

For 13 days Col. Davis and his fighters covered the movements and landings of the troops bound for Sicily. "Those are days we can never forget," he said. "We had 37 pilots, and every pilot was an American soldier.

"We saw all the soldiers engaged with us, the French, the British, and the utterly fearless Gourmerliers, but we had every reason to be proud of the boys in the uniform of the United States," said Col. Davis.

When early in September the allied forces began its movement on Italy the 99th was called on to cover. "It was the highest hour for our fighters," said Col. Davis. They were up in the thickest of the conflict. They knew that they had done well and had won the attention of Gen. Eisenhower's command.

Moved in with 5th.

When the 5th army effected its crossing and moved into Italy the 99th moved in with them. The American command gave every evidence of pride in the skill and faithfulness of its daring colored fighters in the air.

Now Col. Davis is back as chief executive to Col. Robert Selway Jr., commander of fighter units at Selfridge field. He will train the 332d fighter group, which is the heart of men at Selfridge getting ready for air combat.

"Two things," said Col. Davis, "I would like to speak of. First, the morale of our boys both as exhibited in Africa and in Italy; then, the comforting gallantry and kindness of Josephine Baker, a great American girl, who took us to her heart and became our friend, our monitor, and our comrade. Our country will owe much to her, and in Africa she was all the world to us."

The entire base at Selfridge, without race or color distinction, gave Col. Davis a soldier's reception, the warmest yet seen at this field.

No one, not even Col. Davis' soldier-father, seemed happier than base commander Col. William Boyd and Col. Selway.

BERWYN YOUTHS GIVE UP PRANKS TO GUESS BEANS

Merchants Hold Contests at Halloween.

Starting tomorrow and continuing until Saturday night, the South Berwyn Business and Civic association will sponsor a window guessing contest in which children of the suburb will be invited to participate. Winners will be awarded worthwhile prizes.

The contest will serve as a substitute for window soaping as is sometimes carried on by spooks. C. F. Dostal, president of the South Berwyn association, said the coöperation of parents and teachers had been sought to assist in eliminating window soaping.

Calls Pranks Unpatriotic.

"We believe," said Mr. Dostal, "that if the children are made to realize such tricks are harming the war they will take pride in being good American citizens."

Window guessing contests have been popular in South Berwyn during the last three Halloweens. Contests conducted by the merchants vary. Some fill glass jars with beans. Others use paper clips. This year, Mr. Dostal, who is in the camera business, has filled a jar with empty film spools.

Reveal Winners Sunday.

Youngsters will be given an opportunity to peer in the windows and guess all week. When they have made their calculations they may write it out on a slip of paper with their name and deposit it with the merchant. Winners will be announced from the windows next Sunday.

"Don't think the youngsters make wild guesses," said Mr. Dostal. "Last year, a litle girl who considered my window jar from all angles wrote down her verdict that came within just two beans of being the right number."

parade and prizes will be awarded for costumes. The program will be made up of stunts and games. Block captains in the neighborhood are assisting with arrangements.

Two Garfield Parties.

Two parties also are planned at Garfield park, 100 North Central Park boulevard. The adult party is scheduled for 7:30 o'clock Wednesday night and the children's party will take place at 7:30 o'clock Friday night. Members of the recreation staff and Service League club are in charge of the adult party. Costume prizes will be awarded and there will be games including mixers, musicals, square dancing, community singing, and progressive games.

Three hundred children are expected in costume at the Friday night party. They will have a parade, games, and an elaborate "chamber of horrors." Costume prizes will be awarded by a committee composed of Lorraine Trent, Betty Twedt, Harry Lieberman, William LeBrecht, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Wilson, members of the Chicago Fly-Casting club of Garfield park; Mrs. Phillip J. Stoll, president of Garfield Park Service league; D. Wallace MacClay of the OCD; Municipal Court Bailiff Albert J. Horan, and Ald. Joseph S. Gillespie [29].

ELGIN TO HONOR PARKER, HEAD OF SALVATION ARMY

Luncheon Planned by Civic Group.

Commissioner Edward J. Parker, national commander of the Salvation army, who is rtiring from active duty will be honored at a farewell luncheon Wednesday noon in his home town, Elgin. The luncheon will be sponsored by the Elgin Association of Commerce and other civic and fraternal groups in the Masonic temple. At 7:30 p. m. Shopping Center of the Southwestern Villages

La Grange

SERVES AS "HOME TOWN"

FOR A SPECIAL POPULATION

Into the western villages has come a new population . . . newcomers who have joined with old residents to man the western network of defense industries.

These folk come from factory and farm, from teeming cities and quiet hamlets. Hereabouts they have found new homes; here in La Grange they find their new old home town.

Here they find the same familiar products and services, the same dependable brands. Behind counters they find friendliness no less warm than back at home.

Shoppers here are not strangers; they are received as friends. You'll be welcome . . . and you'll know it.

BISHOPCONKLING OPENS RANDALL HOUSE TONIGHT

West Side Center Is a Youth Refuge.

Randall hall, the new Episcopal community center and foster home for dependent Negro boys, at 2103 Washington boulevard, will be opened formally with a reception from 5 to 8 o'clock tonight. Bishop Wallace E. Conkling of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago will speak.

Named for Suffragan Bishop Edwin J. Randall who has been active in Episcopalian city missions work in Chicago for many years, Randall hall has been the product of hand labor by the members of the former St. Andrew's Episcopal Mission church at 1954 Washington boulevard.

Purchase Large Mansion.

The congregation sold its church a year ago and purchased a 21 room mansion which they have converted into a foster home for homeless boys and a recreational, social, and civic center for the neighborhood.

Since June the congregation has spent its spare time remodeling the house, laying new floors, painting, and making curtains for the 72 windows. At the start the hall will house four Negro boys but the congregation hopes to house 15 to 20 homeless boys. The hall was planned by the Rev. Leonard C. Anderson, priest in charge, who will direct the activities at the home and neighborhood center.

The Rev. Anderson spent his childhood in crowded Harlem, New York City, where the street was his playground and the neighborhood gang supervised his recreation, and he has long wanted to establish a home of this type for underprivileged boys.

Boys Want Pool Table.

The boys will live at the hall on a coöperative basis following a worship, work, and study program. The plan is an outgrowth of the coöperative work plan the Rev. Anderson formerly used at St. Thomas church, 3801 South Wabash avenue.

Wed in Oak Park

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Gasey of Oak Park have announced the marriage of their daughter, Rosalyn, to Lt. James T. Redding of the army air corps. The wedding took place in St. Catherine of Siena church, Oak Park, and the couple is at home in Greenville, S. C.

LA GRANGE ART LEAGUE TO SHOW PAINTINGS TODAY.

J. S. Brown's Work to Be Displayed.

Because of the interest of friends and neighbors of the La Grange Art league in the paintings of J. S. Brown, shown last Sunday at the studio, 5 North La Grange road, the exhibit and reception will be repeated this afternoon from 3 to 7 o'clock. There will be music and refreshments.

J. S. Brown.

Mr. Brown, for many years a resident of the village, was the first to sign the Art league's original charter. Financially, as well as in loyalty and enthusiasm, he is credited with being the group's most generous benefactor.

To Show 100 Paintings.

One hundred of Mr. Brown's paintings, mostly landscapes, will be shown at the studio tea. Some of the paintings were made near La Grange. Mr. Brown has been painting as a hobby for years and is said by critics to have developed an individual technique that is consistently subtle and sensitive.

Two hundred guests attended the exhibit last Sunday and all persons from La Grange and neighboring suburbs are invited to today's "repeat performance."

Wife Assists at Tea.

The tea table centerpiece, filled with yellow button chrysanthemums, was arranged by Mrs. J. S. Brown and Mrs. J. G. Lutz. Those who poured coffee and tea were Mrs. Harry Smith, Mrs. J. S. Brown, Mrs. C. E. Glessner, Mrs. Russell Howard, Mrs. J. B. Davison, and Mrs. Walter Minich. Mrs. J. G. Lutz, social chairman, was in charge of refreshments.

Margaret Brown, granddaughter of the artist, presided over the guest book. Arthur Swanson, grandson of Mrs. J. E. Edmonds, Art league president, assisted by Jerry Brown, grandson of the artist, provided music by means of a radio amplifying system of Arthur's own invention.

The league's art classes taught by Mattie Lietz will be resumed Nov. 1. There will be a class for young people Tuesday afternoons and a class for adults Thursday mornings. Mrs. J. E. Edmonds, president of the league, said the evening sketch class would be resumed this fall if enough persons so desire.

CLUB OF BOYS, FORMED YEARS AGO, TO GATHER

Monarchs Will Meet Old Chums Tomorrow.

BY LEWIS WILLIAMS.

Tomorrow they'll be Dick, Hank, and Freddy, not Mr. Pritchard, Mr. Cassriel, and Mr. Green. Once more the members of the Monarch club will revert to the roles of summer vacationing boys, casting aside their usual part as successful business men.

The occasion, a dinner in the Union League club, will mark the 40th anniversary of the forming of the club by a group of 12 to 15 year old boys.

For 40 years, rain or shine, peace or war, transportation difficulties or not, the 14 living members of the original group of 19 have met for an annual dinner. The 10 still living in the Chicago area have kept up a schedule of meeting once a month in each other's homes.

Group Were Playmates.

For a group shaped so informally the Monarch club has enjoyed an exceptional life. Forty years ago the members were just a group of west side boys playing ball on a vacant lot at Van Buren street and Hermitage avenue. A summer crowded with pleasant memories of association was drawing to a close on the day that a sudden squall drove the boys from their playground to the shelter of an awning in front of a grocery store across the street.

There J. Earl Pringle, who is now in the printing business, suggested the formation of a club to insure continued good times for the group. His motion was quickly seconded by Henry E. Cassriel, now in the dental supply business, and the rest of the boys shouted immediate approval. Casting about for a name for the newly formed unit the boys spied a catsup bottle in the store window and named their club after the Monarch brand.

Continues Thru Years.

Thru grade school, high school, and college the group continued its recreation activities. During the World war, in which one of its members was killed, the club launched a philanthropic program which has continued to this day. Then the members were struggling for places in the business world. Now they have all attained places of prominence and are much more able to back a program of charity which is centered in the preparation of Christmas baskets. Cases worthy of consideration by the club are selected by the Deaconess home of the Epiphany Episcopal church at Adams street and Ashland avenue, in the club's old home territory.

The big meeting of the year is the annual anniversary of the club's founding, and tomorrow's, which marks the 40th year of the organization, promises to overshadow the others in hi-jinks. The out of town members, two of whom live on the west coast and two who live in New York City, have all indicated that they will be present as have the widows of two former members.

Richard Pritchard Is President.

Richard Pritchard, Glencoe, who is vice president of the Harris Trust and Savings bank, is president of the Monarch club this year and will be in charge of tomorrow night's dinner. Jay C. Magill, 1666 Farwell street, a real estate firm official, is serving as secretary.

Other members who will be present tomorrow night include Milton Toskey, Riverside, who is in the roofing business; Mr. Cassriel, who lives at 25 East Delaware place; Mr. Frank, who lives at 10 West Elm street; Joe Bayer, Evanston, furniture business man; Fred Green, La Grange, a banker; Dan Jones, Downers Grove, who deals in office supplies; Mr. Pringle, who lives in Oak Park, and Arthur MacLaren, 7554 Yates avenue, an agent for a chocolate company.

Out of town members who will be present are Adolph Radnitzer, vice president of a soft drink concern, and George Dyer, a manufacturer, both of New York City; Cole Cawthorne, Seattle, Wash., a dealer in electrical appliances, and Rudolph Lingenberg, Los Angeles, Cal., a dealer in musical instruments.

Monday, Oct. 25.

Plant vines to hide unsightly objects, to clothe the garage in green, to give an air of quietude that can be obtained in no other way. The bittersweet vine is very hardy, does well in shade, and can be increased by sowing seed this fall, by root cuttings or from soft wood cuttings in spring. It does well on a north porch, to twine up an old tree or clamber over a bush.

Tuesday, Oct. 26.

Some of the minor bulbs are excellent for the rock garden. The grape hyacinth is a good subject for banks and pockets among the rocks. They grow low, only 5 to 6 inches, and their delightfully blue color makes them most effective. They do equally well when grown in masses along the perennial border.

The snowdrop and squill furnish good stock between bulbs. Among the hardy lilies, none is more delightful than the regal lily. It is useful when planted between peonies, or in clumps in the border.

Wednesday, Oct. 27.

Try a few plants of unusual interest in the window, such as a sweet potato placed in a bottle of water. It soon will send out strong growths and altho it does not flower, the foliage is attractive and it is a plant that will repay one for the effort.

Thursday, Oct. 28.

Many indoor gardeners find pleasure in a glass garden or terrarium. A large glass globe, fish tank or other form of glass container is most suitable and the many scenes that can be arranged are dependent only on the imagination of the gardener.

Friday, Oct. 29.

The home gardener delights when he grows an unusual plant to perfection, but some plants are so temperamental they fail to respond. Among these is the beautiful gardenia. It should be syringed every day to remove dust particles and to provide a halo of moisture around it.

Saturday, Oct. 30.

The screw pine [pandanus] rests from October to January during which time it requires less water than when in active growth. Just enough water to keep the soil moist is sufficient. If pots of tulips are growing in darkness, be sure the soil is kept moist or they will stand still, making no growth.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield park conservatory.

KEEP WARY EYE ON OVERHEAD—YOUR ROOFING

Repairs Should Be Made in Next Few Weeks.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Now is the time to be keeping an eye on the overhead, for the roof, and what happens to it, this coming winter is of considerable importance. If repairs are to be made, or a new roof is needed, the weeks before ice and snow arrive are the best to have the work done.

In roof inspection, one of the first things to check is the condition of shingles. If any are loose, they should be nailed tightly and any that are missing should be replaced.

Wood Shingle Repairs.

Sometimes a wood shingle roof which has a tendency to leak can have its life extended by application of a compound of asbestos and asphalt fibers. A good roofer could advise on whether or not this is practical, or whether a new roof is needed.

There are definite advantages in placing a new roof directly on top of the old one. Some added heat resistance and stiffness is afforded, in addition to saving on labor costs and the avoidance of dirt outside and inside the house.

Where there is roll roofing there is need for application of roof coating every four or five years. This will renew the dried out oils which in time can make the roofing brittle. If this type roofing is too badly dried or rotted a coating will not restore it.

Paint the Tin Roof.

A tin roof should be kept well painted to guard against rust. Red lead gives excellent protection. If there are holes they can be closed with plastic roofing cement. Liquid asphalt roofing cement also can be used for a tin roof in place of paint.

The condition of flashing should be most carefully checked. These flashings, which are the metal protection placed at angles and corners where shingles cannot give proper coverage, must be kept free from leaks. They can be kept in good condition by painting with lead or oil paints. Where signs of wear are evident it is advisable to trowel on a coat of asbestos roof putty.

Any roofing material of ordinary weight can be selected for a new roof which is to be laid over an old one such as wood shingles, asphalt slate singles, or asbestos shingles.

New WPB Ruling.

Of interest to home owners is a new ruling by the war production board which has removed the restrictions on the use of asbestos shingles for reroofing of homes where repairs are necessary. This was done so that long fibered asbestos might be obtained for essential war products.

To obtain the long fibers it is necessary to mine many tons of short fibers which are utilized chiefly in asbestos shingles. The same ruling holds good where repairs are needed when it comes to re-siding of homes.

Before the new order roof and siding repairs were permitted, but the extent of the work was limited to the area actually in need of attention.

The new amendment exempts asbestos shingles and siding from the $200 limit and permits a complete reroofing or re-siding job to be done provided some repairs or painting are required.

The Rev. Lars O. Anderson, pastor of Trinity Lutheran church of Evanston, is general chairman of the arrangements committee.

This afternoon's program, at 3:40 o'clock, will open with an organ prelude by Arnold L. Schultz, director of music at the United Lutheran church in Oak Park. The Rev. Gordon Nasby, pastor of the Edison Park Lutheran church, will lead the assembly in singing the national anthem.

The history of the church body dates back to 1843, when a group of Norwegian immigrants settling in Waukesha county, Wis., decided to establish a Lutheran church in their community. The first structure was of rough hewn logs, erected at Muskego, Wis. The Rev. Claus L. Clausen was the first pastor.

Miss Dorben Offers Beautiful Revue in Marine Room

New Dance Duo Added Delight in 'Cafe Ballet'

By Will Davidson.

Freshen up the laurel leaves and fashion of them a wreath for the head of Dorothy Dorben. The gay and wise little girl who is responsible for the Marine room shows in the Edgewater Beach hotel has done it again.

We all thought her famous China Nights revue a year ago was a peak in brilliant staging. It was. We all thought her recent Beach Walk extravaganza introducing Eddie Oliver was a gem of showmanship. It was. Now she has achieved a classic of courageous imagination in creating a beautiful cafe show out of the delicate and somewhat restrictive art form of the ballet.

"Cafe Ballet," as she calls her current revue, is an encouraging thing to watch—beautiful, well drilled, paced to the taste of the cafe crowd. Ballet numbers have been successful in cafes before, of course, but Miss Dorben devotes her entire program of dance groups to this form. Her girls, who don't claim to be finished ballet performers, are delightful as they build the fluid pictures created by the music of Chopin, Shostakovitch, Rachmaninoff, and the modern David Rose.

The two finale numbers are the finest. With Eddie Oliver spotlighted at his piano, the girls, with the assistance of Kay and Glenn, dance to themes from the Rachmaninoff second piano concerto. Black and white gowns trimmed in a musical motif are effective dressing for the routine. The Mazurka from the Shostakovitch 5th symphony is the gayest, and probably the most popular of the dances. Kay and Glenn again appear, interpolating a mazurka from Tschaikowsky's "Aurora's Wedding."

This dance team is something to watch. Under the most difficult conditions imaginable they prepared their dances without rehearsal with the Dorben girls and the Oliver orchestra. Not until the afternoon of the opening were the elements of these numbers put together. That there were little uncertainties for a night or so is no surprise. Kay and Glenn are to be complimented on their work.

The rest of Miss Dorben's show is strong, too. Jack Herbert, the jovial magician is back, and a very excellent m. c. he is for this room. And those Nelson sisters! Wow! These girls do trapeze acrobatics that just can't be done. And how those brief costumes survive the ordeal is a puzzle. Don't miss them.

Eddie Oliver comes thru with a superb show. He has maintained the pace he set when he opened last summer, and has a big band that is beautifully controled, warmly versatile. Ann Judson Jr., who is Mrs. Oliver, is singing better, I think, than she ever has. And the way Eddie plays that piano is something to send you home with a dreamy look in your eye.

Action's the word for the Colony club show, from the vital vocal action of Bee Kalmus' potent singing to the bonecracking antics of the three Sophisticated Ladies. In between there's Cy Reeves, the facile humor man; Gloria Lee and her dancers, and the show stopping Radio Ramblers, imitators of men and things par excellence.

About those new shows: Tiny Hill opens at the Trianon next Sunday, for a month. Tiny's the Sullivan, Ill., boy who has carried his 365 pounds into something of an enviable spot in midwestern music. . . . Dr. Slyter, magician, and De Mar and Denise, dance team, open at the Bismarck Friday. . . . They added George Tapps to the Mayfair room show at the last minute. He opened Friday with Marina and Neil Bondshu's orchestra. . . . The Latin Quarter chose the same night to spring a new show, starring Joan Merrill, who originally had been sought, I understand, as the opening star of the new Riocabana. Dorothy Donegan, Buddy Lester, Herbert Curbelo's famous rhumba band, the tumbling Four Moroccos, Mimi Kellerman, and Dorothy Hild's line complete what promises to be a top flight show. . . . Wednesday was the night Jim Penman, the gabby trickster, opened at the Blackhawk. Carl Ravazza gives way to Del Courtney on Nov. 17.

Boswelling the Bistros:

Old Heidelberg is cashing in on those after theater shows at 11:20 p. m. in the main dining room. Of course, Louie is always on tap in the Rathskeller, too. . . . Not that they ever had him signed, but Nat Brandywine, as of this moment, is out of the running to be the band that gets second billing to Hildegarde when she comes into the Empire room in January. Don't be too surprised if Lew Diamond gets his first long run engagement. Lew has been doing a superb job as relief night man there, and was popular with Hildy during her last engagement. Could be. . . . Griff Williams, incidentally, will capture that last remaining record—for endurance run—on Dec. 9, when he will have surpassed the long standing mark of Veloz and Yolanda.

That tax collector, it seems, isn't a nice man to no.

SINGS AT BLACKSTONE

Marina, emotional and beautiful Russian singer, has opened an engagement in the Mayfair room of the Blackstone hotel. She shares honors with dancing George Tapps and music man Neil Bondshu.

Vaudeville

Oriental theater. Eddy Howard, young radio and stage artist, heads the bill as a triple threat. Eddy composes his own songs and sings them in a tenor voice to the accompaniment of his own band. Coheadlined with Howard is Elizabeth Talbot Martin, mimic of "Meet the People" fame. Also in the show are the Calgary brothers, the Balbanow duo, Roy Bast and the Four Swing Sirs.

Helsing's Vodvil Lounge. The McIntyre Sisters, a singing quartet, make their debut and Ben Perry, song and dance man, returns to star in a new revue. Tom O'Neal serves as master of ceremonies and offers his own comic act. Chet Roble and his piano, Sid Fisher and his New Yorkers, and Verna Rae Hassel, singing pianist, complete the bill.

Chicago theater. After a four week lapse the regular stage show policy is resumed with a "Pan-Americana Revue." Featured are Jack Durant, veteran comedian formerly of the team of Mitchell and Durant; Harry Cool, balladeer, now of NBC and until the dissolution of Dick Jurgen's band the chief crooner of that outfit; Estelle Sloan, specialty dancer, and the Swing Senoritas, harmony quartet. The Chicago theater ballet, an 18 girl line under the direction of Dorothy Hild, will present two precision spectacles on the Pan-American motif. Louis Adrian and the orchestra also will be on the stage.

"In a BLAZE of GLORY"

had in his office a conspicuous safe, but he kept no money in it. He was afraid to leave large money in the store overnight, lest fire or other thieves break in and steal it. But he was more afraid to have it on his person lest footpads break his skull.

The stranger kept strangely close to Julia and looked into the cash drawer when it slid out at the touch of the button marked "No Sale. Change." He actually put his left hand on her arm as her hands lifted the bills and her eyes counted them. His hand was as hot as Kimlin's hand was cold. Her glance fell rebukingly on his uninvited touch, and she said:

"Sorry. I can't break it. Too early in the morning. There's a bank two blocks down the street."

But young Art Fressl had not yet graduated into bank robbery. That was an ambition he was working his way up to, but for the present his practice was a roving hunt for small profits and many of them.

If his quick glance into the cash drawer had not shown him less than $10 there, he would have whipped out the little pistol he had his right hand on in his right pocket, and he would have said with a sudden quenching of the laughter in his eyes:

"It's a stick-up, lady. Grab at the ceiling and don't get noisy."

But now he only smiled and said, as he passed his right hand lightly along Julia's arm:

"How's about coming out this eve and helpin' me spend the twenty?"

She gave him a look of so much amazement that there was no room left in it for indignation. He said hastily:

"Don't get mad, honey. I'm a lonely guy in a strange town and you got a kind face. How's for a quiet supper this eve and a little ride in the moonlight? What say, sweets?"

Memory of Fressl Stays in Julie's Mind

She simply turned to a burly policeman who overtowered Art Fressl. Art Fressl followed her glance over his shoulders. Seeing the brass buttons and the policeman's cap, he laid a dime on the next glass case, picked up two packages of chewing gum and was gone. She did not notice that he sidled away without turning his face to the policeman. He puzzled her in many ways and she could not get him out of her mind. In the late afternoon he was in the store again. He waited till two almost unbearable window-shoppers and shelf-emptyers had made her pile dozens on dozens of stockings on the counter before they decided to buy one pair. Then he met her at the cash register and said, edging close:

"Now how's about changing that twenty?"

"I'm sorry," she said. "Most of the money of the day has gone to the bank. They'll change it for you there."

"What time does the money go to the bank?"

"That's a funny question," she gasped.

"I'm a funny guy," he answered. "I come back for your answer to my question this mornin'. How's about some supper and some moonlight tonight?"

"I eat at home," she said. "And I don't go out with strangers."

"I'm no stranger," he grinned.

"No? When did I ever meet you before?"

"Why, you remember me! Of course you remember me. Why, I'm the guy that buys his choon gum off you every mornin'."

She tried to freeze him, but she was as helpless as a brook to turn to ice when an impertinent spring breeze fondles it. Thru Julia's mind ran a thought escaped from one of Professor Skeat's classics. This young man in front of her was the young god Pan; he had survived the general death of the Grecian gods. Perhaps he was one of those goat-legged satyrs who chased nymphs around the trees.

It was pleasant to be pursued among trees. There had been once a Sunday school boy at a church picnic who suddenly went delightfully mad and chased little Julia Patten all thru a thicket and caught her and kissed her; then was more scared than she was. She slapped him, but not very hard. She called him wicked, wicked, in a soft whisper. But he never tried again—to her long regret.

And now this fugitive from mythology was pursuing Julia among her scruples, inviting her to supper and a moonride.

Every night crowds of Clintonian young men and women went to restaurants, drank cocktails, and ate delicious things between dances. Practically every other girl in town drove her own car during the day and went out at night on a moonlight ride. That Julia herself should own a car was beyond even the dreaming of. Her father was richer than most of the other fathers in town, but she did not know it.

Of evenings he kept her in the house working while he went over his books, moaning and shuddering over paltry losses. But he never went into rhapsodies over big gains. She did not know that he made them.

While Julia worked at dishwashing, or making or mending things, other girls and their young men made the moonlight populous. And now this young stranger, of whom she knew not even the name, asked her to go where all the other girls went—into the moonlight. She had not yet put Art Fressl in his place. She had not even decided just what this place was, when her father suddenly appeared, stared at the loiterer and said:

"Julia."

"Yes, papa."

"When you've finished with this customer, come into the office."

"Yes, papa."

When he was gone, the young man laughed.

"So you're the daughter of the boss."

"Yes."

"He's just come back from the bank, I s'pose. He takes his money there himself. Your father has a safe in his office, of course."

"What's it to you?"

"I sell safes. Maybe if he hasn't got one, I could sell him one—tomorrow."

"You're a funny man."

"You said it, sister. You don't know how funny I am. How's about some fun for yourself tonight?"

"I have to work tonight."

Her father moved back toward them. She handed Fressl two packages of chewing gum. He looked at them in surprise, slipped her a dime, and gave her a look that initiated her into a secret society of two. Already she was linked in a conspiracy against her father.

As Art Fressl left the store she was wondering if she were flirting with him. He was impudent yet interesting. These conversations with him were nothing like any of the idylls of the Greeks, nothing like the love affairs of Horace. But Lalage didn't clerk in a store.

Or did she?

Maybe she did. They must have had stores in a big city like Rome.

The next day Art Fressl was there once more. He gave Julia his name. He talked about safes as if he were a salesman, and said it was important to have a strong place to keep money, for surely her father must have quite a lot of money on hand every night when he closed.

"Papa's out," she said. "You might ask Mr. Kimlin about that." She nodded toward C. J., who was hovering near in a suspicious jealousy. "Want to talk to him about a new safe?"

"Not just yet. I want to talk to you. The safe can wait."

This puzzled Julia, yet charmed her and baffled her. Art Fressl was equally puzzled and baffled by her father's peculiar financial methods. He could not imagine the owner of so big an establishment being such a common, or uncommon, miser. So he continued to cultivate Julia with a courtship that was crude and inconsistent, yet captivating because he was the first persistent suitor she had ever had.

One evening when her father attended a meeting of the chamber of commerce, she actually stole out and went to a cafe with Fressl. He spent little money on her because his petty thieveries had not been fruitful and he was growing desperate. He gave Julia cheap food, but it was different, and it was served by a foreign waiter. Music was going on. People danced. There was laughter, whispering in the booths along the side wall. Women were drinking and smoking. It was wonderful.

It was Professor Skeat who taught Julia the ideal of "live while you live."

Art Fressl asked her to dance. She had hardly ever danced except with some other girl, and she was not very good at it. But Fressl was masterful. He led her everywhere. His arm was very strong around her, yet when he drew her too close and she pushed back, he released her.

"You're a grand little dancer," he lied, when she returned panting and incandescent to the table.

"I'm terrible," she said. "I get no practice."

"Well, I'll learn you," he said. "I'll learn you how to make up for lost time and enjoy yourself."

He broke the rules of grammar, but that rather added to his strange repellent, yet compelling, charm. His illiteracy gave him a certain outlaw picturesqueness. Julia had found that many mollycoddles obeyed too strictly the rules of grammar in life as well as speech. Many brave men broke the rules of both.

Remark May Have Saved Her Father's Life

They danced again and again, but he could not persuade Julia to drink anything except water and coffee. She was not ready for cocktails yet. She must save something for the future. Suddenly she caught a sight of the horrified clock.

"I must go. What if papa finds me out?"

That suited Art's idea. When they drew near and found the house still dark, Julia felt that heaven had intervened to save her. She begged Art to hurry away for fear her father might find him there. He would have kissed her good night, but she thrust him back and unlocked the door. He tried to push his way in. With horror and terror she forbade him to enter, and he said in a sly voice:

"I s'pose you're afraid to let me in because your father keeps his money at home of nights."

"O, no. He doesn't keep any money here. And he never carries any on him."

Unwittingly she may have saved her father's life by that remark, for Fressl was not afraid of murder when it was necessary, and Jabez Patten would have fought to the death for his cash, if for nothing else on earth, even his country, his ideals, his family.

Fressl believed what Julia said about her father's money, and decided that the old fool kept it in the store after all. So he did not force an entrance to the house. If he had not believed her, he might have killed her in his determination to get her father's money; for he was subject to onsets of blind rage when thwarted. Otherwise he was amiable and humorous, or perhaps merely lazy, like Gilbert's Cockney hero:

"When the coster isn't jumping on his mother, he loves to lie a-basking in the sun."

Even when Fressl took Julia in his arms and tried to kiss her good night, and she would have none of him, he did not give her a crack on the jaw as he had done with other reluctant girls. He laughed and released her with what she took for a tribute of homage.

"I like a girl's got some spunk and don't kiss every guy she meets the first time he meets her. I hope you'll give me a chance to prove how nuts I am about you."

This mollified Julia's anger and put him in a new light. She had a real suitor at last. When he backed away, he had a half promise from Julia that they would go out again some time.

The next day—it was a Saturday—he came to the store and, making sure that Jabez was not about, asked for him. When Julia said he was not in, he asked her to let him have a look at the old safe. It would help him when he came to offering a new one and taking the old one in trade. He thought he was being very clever, but Julia was not showing strangers her father's office in his absence—not even such a fascinating stranger as Mr. Fressl. She told him flatly:

"You can't talk to papa about a new safe today because he's gone to Paytonville to visit his brother Caleb. He won't get back till Monday afternoon."

At that Art's face lighted up as if she had turned on a lamp inside it. In the old miser's absence he could rob the store at his leisure. But what he said was:

"Then this is our night to howl."

"To howl?"

"To have fun. We'll go out to a night club I know where the food's grand and the music swell. And we'll have ourselves a little time. You've earned an evening off. Better cop this chance."

She thought, almost aloud: "What was it Horace said? 'Seize the day! Put not the least trust in the morrow.' Carpe diem! Art Fressl said almost the same words, 'Cop the chance.'"

She'd cop the chance and carp the night. Her father would inevitably return on Monday, but the sweet opportunity might never come again. She had never seen a night club except on the screen. Why should she be the only ignoramus in the world?

She let Art Fressl urge her a little more, and he did not fail to press the point. Before he left, she had promised to be waiting for him on her porch after dark. He would bring his car around and they would be on their way.

He called it his car, tho he did not know at the moment just whose car he would make his for the night. His plan was clear. He would park the girl in the night club, return and rob the store, return to the girl and finish the night at the club. If suspicion ever turned his way she would be his perfect alibi. It was so perfect a plan, that even he should have known it wouldn't work. Especially not, since it was to be his farewell to Clinton.

He had not prospered in Clinton. There had been a wave of petty robberies by himself and cleverer rivals; and the merchants were cautious, the police vigilant. Fressl had come to believe that they were watching him with suspicion. He had been questioned more than once. It was time to be moving on.

That night Julia waited in the gloomy little grotto of her front porch for Art Fressl to come, and waited long. She would have preferred a more intelligent, aristocratic, and well bred companion; but one takes what one can get. Even an Art Fressl was better than nobody at all. She had dressed herself in her best—which would have been almost any other girl's worst—and had put on make-up with all the exaggeration of a good girl trying to look bad. She had been practicing dance steps, too, with only herself as tutor and partner. She sat on the porch where the moon could not reach her and wondered if Art would ever come, or if even he had repented of his invitation. The time dragged on and on till it was toward midnight before he rolled to the curb in a beautiful little car that somehow increased her respect for him. The car had charm. He had stolen well. He had a purpose in being late, but in Julia's mood there was an added excitement in the very hour. As she advanced to the steps to greet him, he did not sweep his hat from his head with the gesture of a cavalier. He rather rubbed it off his scalp as if it were a toupee. He did not apologize for his delay, or make any of the pretty speeches that grow in books. He said:

"Haya, hon? You're right on the job. Swell! Let's get goin'."

Only Feeble Lights in Father's Store

The important thing was that he was there and he had a car and Julia was in it and on her way with the moonlit multitudes to a night club. They passed her father's store and it was all dark except for one or two feeble lights.

Art Fressl had scouted the store thoroly outside and in, by day and by night. He knew that old Patten relied on the police department to try his doors and windows and make sure that no one had entered.

Fressl had figured that if he could get in by a back window he could crack the frail old safe in the dark office, which could not be seen from the street. But, unconsciously once more, Julia changed his plans by an idle remark. He said, with a pretense of carelessness:

"Seems like your pap would keep a night watchman in a store as big as that. Some burglar might blow up that old safe with a firecracker."

"He wouldn't get anything for his trouble," she laughed. "Papa doesn't keep anything in it but some invoices and receipts and unpaid bills. He just leaves the safe for a blind. It's been broken into two or three times and the joke was on the burglar."

She giggled a little, tho rather pitifully, at her father's blighted sense of humor. But Art Fressl's hopes died as he conceded that the old man was too smart for him. He resented the hours he had wasted on Julia. And now he had her on his hands for the evening. He was minded to dump her out at the side of the road, but it occurred to him that she might still serve as an alibi for another piece of work he had been planning, the holdup of a drugstore. If he were not lively, he might be too late for that job.

He stepped on the accelerator and raged thru the traffic. When at last they reached the night club, Julia's spirit of adventure was broken. The club was a gaudy, tawdry roadhouse and the company was boozy and maudlin. Girls whom she knew by sight and girls she had known well in school amazed her by their rowdy behavior. Some of them were idiotic or truculent, downright drunk. They laughed insanely or were morose and ugly. They danced the jitterbug riots with shamelessness. At the tables they sprawled in the arms of tipsy men and mumbled and kissed as if they were unobserved.

It was the first time Julia had ever seen mob love or mob depravity and she would have been glad to end her studies there.

hard work and without a formal education—an old fashioned success story. Or it is simply a panorama of life during the last 60 years, a cycle in which men like Sam could grow like sheep sorrel in a grass pasture, not too often found, and yet not alien, sharp to the taste, but somehow clean and tangy. It is not simply either one or both of those things. It is a subtle interpretation of both.

"Journey in the Dark" is a distinguished novel, and not the least of its distinctions is its technique. It uses the flashback scheme of story telling, but it uses it with such deftness that the reader has almost no sense of the mechanics of the change of scene. And it uses that scheme in a distinctly modern sense, for the adult actions of the hero are subcousciously conditioned by his childhood.

In less skilled hands the intricacies of the pattern of the Wyatt influence in Sam Braden's life would be as super-complicated and as false as arabesques on one of those modern Swedish chests. But the plot nests into itself as delicately as those contraptions of our childhood, when out of the center of a large wooden egg there eventually emerged one the size of a small pea, nested in successive eggs of wood, paper thin.

To many readers "Journey in the Dark" will have few overtones. It will be an interesting panorama of American life, peopled with characters who seem as natural as bread and butter. They will read and enjoy "Journey in the Dark," but—and this is where the book differs from other books which are also panoramas of American life, peopled with characters who seem as natural as bread and butter—readers won't forget either the panorama or the characters. Details in that panorama which seemed unimportant when they passed will be etched on readers' memories. Characters, or traits of the hero's character, which weren't especially noticeable when they appeared on the pages will pop up in readers' minds. And that, my friends, is because in this book there is that uncompromising, but often unconscious, honesty and reality which is our greatest midwestern heritage.

The judges who awarded the prize to this distinguished book were Irita Van Doren, Bernard De Voto, and Clifton Fadiman. Note that all three are critics. None is a novelist. A more personally disinterested, but professionally interested, and a more distinguished group of judges could not be chosen.

Richer Life Wrought by Help of God

"GOD WILL HELP YOU," by James Gordon Gilkey. [Macmillan, $1.50.]

Reviewed by Dr. Felix A. Levy.

That there is a widespread interest in religion is evident by the publishers' list of books in this field. Whether the concern is more than academic, or whether people are becoming more religious is still a moot question. The present volume possesses more than a scholarly appeal. It endeavors to show man how religion can and does help in the solution of life's perplexities and how it brings courage and hope in times of personal crises, such as all of us face at the present juncture of world events.

The author, minister of the South Congregational church of Springfield, Mass., presents an honest, straightforward discussion of how God does help man. In simple language that the ordinary person can understand, the writer talks of some of the most profound personal problems and shows how for the man of faith, even of slight faith, trust in God will help in time of difficulty or at any other time, for that matter. He tells us what is meant by God's presence; why and how we can believe in Him and how we can get into communion with Him. Such faith, which will make life richer and more meaningful is not a blind credulity, but reasonable and not illogical or unscientific.

This popular treatise will be read with pleasure by civilians as well as by those in the armed forces who perhaps come to closer grips with the problems with which the book deals. A good gift for the knapsack and a volume that might find place in the soldier's library.

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

A Novel by Rupert Hughes—

(Copyright: 1943: By Rupert Hughes.)

What Has Gone Before

Terry Ives, a tramp, pieces together torn bits of a letter thrown by beautiful Julie Patten from the observation platform of a train traveling thru the desert. The letter, written from a jail and signed Art Fressl, accuses Julie of waiting in his car while he commits a holdup and murder. Julie is returning from a house party at the ranch of Eric Devoe, playboy. Because of her generosity Julie's Hollywood friends, including Donna Avery, a former star, believe her rich. Eric, whose alimony stops when he marries, hopes to marry Julie for her money. Cole Kavanaugh, Eric's attorney and now in the army, believes Julie is playing a part, yet is baffled and against his will falls in love with her. He noted her look of terror after reading the letter, and offers to help her, then asks if there is anything in the letter to prevent her marrying him. Alone in her apartment, she looks back upon her unhappy childhood, her mother's early death, and her father's cruelty.

INSTALMENT III.

JABEZ resented the time Julia spent in school and only the truant officer's threats secured her release from the jail he kept her in at hard labor. And so school became to her, not the penitentiary it was to other children, but a glorious new playground where entertainments were given and the wonders of the world were exhibited. Algebra was a form of magic and the a's, b's, and x's were literature. Geometry was as fascinating as crossword puzzles. Grammar was poetry. Poetry was music spoken. Geography was travel. History was more exciting than fiction. The mere presence of other boys and girls about her made school a picnic, a party. At recess, the girls played games or reveled in delightfully vicious gossip and knew the rapture of tearing to pieces the characters and reputations of other boys and girls, teachers, and parents and people in general.

The only thing Julia hated about school was leaving it and going back to her whining or scolding father. There was no escape from him except when he made trips to Paytonville to confer with his brother Caleb over matters of business. They were two misers and took a sensuous delight in saving tiny percentages, and subtracting the least possible amounts from the daily additions to the mounting totals from which they derived no other pleasure.

Now and then when her father was away from home Julia would go to a moving picture, if she could somehow save the money from what little cash he entrusted to her. Other girls had often invited her to be their guests; but since she could never hope to return the hospitality, she had refused till they quit asking her. For the same reason she never went to parties.

She was too cowed and shabbified to attract the boys, and never learned the subtle arts of luring them on while pretending to evade them.

Her only real companions she found in books, in old magazines and in the syndicated fiction pages of the newspapers her father received because he advertised in them. Love was to her something that belonged in a book or on the screen, almost superhuman.

The one congenial and inspiring friend she had in the world was old Professor Skeat of the high school. He had spent his childhood in just such an ice box of a home as hers. He had been afraid of people because he had no time or chance to know them. He had become a dweller in books as a boy and had never ceased to live there.

He was a sort of male old maid. Julia was his favorite pupil because her life had been so empty and her heart was so hungry. Latin and Greek were no longer taught in the high school, and Julia had no time to study them outside; but Skeat loved to recite their poetry in the original, and Julia found the lines marvelously musical, tho she understood never a word of them until Skeat explained their meaning or quoted famous translations of them.

The dried-up, shy little old bachelor was really a pagan who believed in making life as much of a banquet as possible. If Julia's father had known the heathen gospel Professor Skeat was teaching his child he would have snatched her out of school. But he did not know. He would have looked with as much horror on Professor Skeat's creed as Skeat did on his; for to Skeat the world was a luscious orange on the tree of eternity, and it was everybody's duty to be as happy as one could without marring the happiness of any one else.

Unconsciously while he was filling Julia's head with impractical poetry and shreds of scholarship, he was giving her a refinement of thought, a gracefulness and grace of mood. He was making her, if not a lady, at least a gentlewoman. And the fiction she saw in the movies or read in the papers gave her polite manners.

Julie glanced up and saw a young stranger measuring and weighing her with glinting eyes.

But, best of all, it was Skeat who taught Julia the watchword Vixi! and the ideal of "live while you live, so that on dark days your memories at least may be rich with stored-up sunshine." Julia accepted the ideal, but she had no chance to put it in practice because her father kept her so poor that she actually thought of him and of herself as paupers.

Old Skeat read to Julia some of the Latin and Greek poems about love, but left tne movies to give her sufficient instruction in that emotion. Chiefly he brightened her life with the cheerful optimism of Horace. Even his love affairs were gay and his ideal girl was such as he described when he sang:

"The sweetly laughing Lalage I love,
The sweetly speaking."

Stranger Comes Along at Critical Time

People in those backwater communities often know more of the classics than the swift, smart, flashy dwellers in big cities; and Julia Patten really spent much of her life in ancient Athens and old Rome. Those fabulous loves and ecstasies and romantic griefs were far away, but at least she learned that such raptures had existed, and Skeat promised her that one day she would know them herself.

And so the male old maid cheered up the young old maid and while she clerked in her father's store, measuring ribbons and weighing crackers and cheese or nails and clothespins, and dodging C. J. Kimlin's attentions, she was humming to herself "Dulce ridentem Lalagen amabo, Dulce loquentem." And she was imagining some poetic lover who would make her his Lalage.

Then at a critical time, when she was helplessly rounding into a woman and being helplessly readied for love, marriage, and motherhood, Art Fressl came along.

She had not known how to attract or cultivate the right kind of young man, and the few who had paid her any attention at all, paid her too much, and too crassly. They terrified her by their rough wooing and horrified her by their demands. She escaped from two or three of them only by a violence greater than theirs.

Art Fressl shocked her by his illiteracy, but disarmed her by his gentleness and timidity. His was the gentleness of the pickpocket, the timidity of the sneak-thief. But Julia could not recognize this.

He was the first criminal she had ever met and she could not suspect the hateful truth that when he visited her father's store constantly for little purchases and pretended a most flattering interest in her, it was simply because he was scouting the establishment in order to rob it. He was scouting all the robbable places in Clinton, including a drugstore or two, filling stations, any place where he might steal a little money, or much, at a minimum risk.

It was in the early forenoon and Julia was selling gingham to a housewife who wanted to make aprons out of it. As Julia stretched the goods along the counter to measure off the yards, she glanced up and saw a young stranger measuring and weighing her with glinting eyes in which she saw the intimate, exploratory look that women who have had little experience with men call masterful. Women who have had more experience call it according to its pressure, impudent, insulting, indecent, inviting—according to their own characters.

On this morning Julia's father had been a little harsher and stingier than usual, C. J. Kimlin had been a little more loving than usual, and the woman who was buying gingham for her aprons a little too snobbish, as the poor are apt to be with the poor when the poor things get the chance. When Julia looked up from the gingham her dreary eyes ran suddenly into eyes that said:

"You're a woman and I'm a man that likes a woman that likes a man. What kind of woman are you? Are you up to snuff? Do you play games? Just how pretty are you? Let me look a little closer? Are you free after dark? And just how free are you?"

It was a lot to put into a stare, but the eyes speak the most ancient of sign languages and employ brief codes that convey as much meaning as whole pages in longhand.

When Julia's eyes returned to her gingham, it was as if the young man's gaze reached out and dragged hers back to his. He was handing her bouquets with his eyes. She could not help feeling a little flattered. He was something different from a father who whined and a customer who haggled. She ought to be angry at his impertinence, but she was in a jaded mood where "you ought" inspires "I won't."

She sheared the gingham off at the right length, folded it, wrapped it, went to the cash register, picked out the change, handed it to the woman, and turned to find the young stranger close to her, and close to the cash register. In a low voice, as if they were on a dark porch instead of in a crowded store, he murmured:

"Haya, honey?"

She should have slapped his face with a glare, but there was such laughter in his tone that she smiled a little in spite of herself. He said:

"Wouldja be kind enough to change a $20 bill for a poor starving man?"

He did not offer her a bill, because he did not have one.

"Gladly. If I can," she said, feeling a little twinge of shame at knowing in advance that she had not $20 in the cash register. Her father was as afraid of his own clerks as he was of any other robbers. He would not leave any more in the cash drawers than barely enough to keep business moving. He went about every few hours, gathered up the surplus and put it in a cleverly concealed hiding place till a bank messenger came for it. He

Danilova a Tradition of Sparkling Ballet

IT ISN'T often you can look at tradition in person, but there was Alexandra Danilova across the table, telling the waiter she would take "just a leetle piece" of that plum pie. The handsome soldier at her left was Pvt. Casimir Kokitch, her husband, here on furlough, who had been politely listening to my hopeful suggestion that he improve the visit by making a guest appearance in his original role as the ranch foreman in "Rodeo." It turned out I was the only one who thought this a new idea, and that Pvt. Kokitch had been getting in his practice at his desert army camp where the thermometer is thwarted at 165 for lack of higher numbers, and where he says it would be 135 in the shade if they had any shade.

But Danilova was not unduly impressed. Your muscles work better in hot weather, she said, disposing of desert dancing, and then proceeded to brag about another and more unexpected talent discovered by the army, but not new to the wife. Pvt. Kokitch, it seems, has built a marvelous stage for desert entertainment, a stage so remarkable his commanding officer wrote a letter about it. This, says Danilova, is no more than she expected of a man who fixed up their little house in Jersey with a downright affinity for hammer and nails. She also feels that the desert camp may break down a Kokitch inhibition. Never since her marriage has she been able to take a Florida vacation and loll on the sand in luxurious idleness, and this is not because Pvt. Kokitch has any aversion to luxurious idleness. He hates sand.

Rehearse 10 Hours a Day.

But the thought of Danilova luxuriating in a seascape brought me sharply back to reality where she rehearses all day and dances at night, and already is looking excited about a possible novelty for next season, an Italian comedy still a secret, but something to anticipate if you admired "Les Femmes de Bonne Humeur." The ballet season is brand new, as you know, and the company has many changes due to the declared war of the draft and the undeclared war of raiding bands from rival troupes. It has been hard work, particularly for the prima ballerina, who carries its major load. "We rehearse 10 hours a day," says Danilova, "and then we co-llapse." But she has found a pickup, rare in her life as a dancer, and it isn't, as you might suspect, a nip of vodka. It's an old fashioned. "Is that not," she inquires, "altogether surprising?"

Alexandra Danilova

Danilova is pretty surprising herself. A realist with a technician's knowledge of her own worth, she is honest, with a touch of captivating malice, and as exact in her definitions as in her dancing. She wanted, for instance, to dance in "Etude," but Nijinska said no, it was not for her. Later, when the ballet was in rehearsal, she danced a variation for Nijinska, who admitted that was the way she had wanted it done. But when Pilar Lopez chose her for "The Cuckold's Fair," she was dismayed. The Spanish idiom is foreign to her, and she insists that Frederic Franklin's brilliance in that idiom is what carries her thru. Franklin, in his turn, was afraid of the classicism of "Etude," moaning, "I'll be just like an English pudding," when told that Igor Youskevitch had declined the role. If Franklin has been away from home long enough to agree that English pudding is heavy and indigestible, not to say formidable, his dance criticism is wrong on three counts.

An Irreplaceable Artist.

Sitting there so quietly, with now and then a revealing gesture to illuminate a phrase, Danilova was the ballerina only in the mind that remembered her dancing, and in the tautness typical of the volatile temperament constantly at the peak of its physical and nervous endurance. Small, dark, and effortlessly erect, the tiny silver wreath embroidered on her black dress a chic reminder of her fox cape, she might have been any attractive woman with the supreme good fortune to be perfectly articulated. But this was Alexandra Danilova, the "Shoura" of ballet fame, the last of the Diaghileff ballerinas, the repository of the great tradition which is a revelation to audience and dancer alike. Sorry if that makes her sound like a civic monument, because she is the dancer with the wittiest legs in the world, which sometimes seem to be laughing to music. She also is a unique and irreplaceable artist, to be cherished.

Swan Queen Her Great Role

Nana Gollner

Her special sparkle was so capitalized by Massine's choreography and his delight in dancing with her that it took us a few seasons to understand that there was more than this to Danilova, tho we should have guessed it from "Beau Danube." There, in older days, she and Massine were to Massine and the ingenue Riabouchinska the equivalent of the lovers in experience to the lovers in innocence of Tudor's "Pillar of Fire." The Strauss ballet has changed with its casts, but Danilova's waltz retains the brilliant shift of mood from the shallows to the turbulent depths of emotion. Her role has been described as coarse by choreographic intention. It isn't. It is deeply, imperiously passionate, which is by no means the same thing.

Danilova's great role, to my taste, is the Swan Queen in Tschaikowsky's "Swan Lake," with the magnificent adagio salvaged from what is left of Petipa's design. This is ballet in the grand manner, and of recent seasons we have seen it beautifully danced by the gossamer Markova and the creamy Slavenska, and danced with great promise by Nana Gollner, the Texas girl now returning with Paul Petroff from South American tour to join Ballet Theater. But to me it is first of all Danilova's role. She has for it the aristocracy of bearing, the delicate beauty of person, the serenity of technique, and, at the same time, the quivering radiance that is theatrical excitement communicated across the footlights. Some of the glory has dimmed with passing seasons, but when she dances the role on one of her best nights, she is ballet incarnate—an achievement so rare as to become the one unforgettable thing in an ephemeral world of applause that dies, flowers that wilt, and press clippings that fade and crumble.

Troupe Scored Signal Success in Washington

"La Traviata" with an all-Negro cast will be presented by the National Negro Opera company at the Civic Opera house on Tuesday at 8. The production comes from Washington, D. C., where a performance at the Watergate last August proved so successful that an immediate repetition was required to take care of the overflow. More than 27,000 people are said to have attended the two performances. Lillian Evanti, who will sing the title role, has sung in opera in Italy and has 23 operas in her repertoire. Other leading roles will be sung by Joseph Lipscomb, tenor; Horace Wilson, baritone; William Robinson, baritone; Priscilla Mayo, mezzo-soprano, and Omega King, soprano. David Leer and Beatrice Betts will appear in the ballet and the production will be conducted by Frederick Vajda, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera. This opera will be sung in English in a new translation by Mr. Vajda.

"Music in Our Changing Society" will be discussed at a symposium at Thorne hall on Monday at 8. Cecil Smith, assistant professor of music at the University of Chicago, will act as moderator, and participants in the discussion will be Virgil Thomson, music critic for the New York Herald-Tribune and composer of the Gertrude Stein opera, "Four Saints in Three Acts"; Olga Samaroff-Stokowski, of the Juilliard Graduate School of New York; Lehman Engel, musician 1st class, USNR, former choral conductor and composer of incidental music for Maurice Evans' productions of "Hamlet" and "Macbeth"; and John H. Mueller of the department of Sociology, Indiana university. This will be the first of a series of four such programs of music and discussion.

Artur Rubinstein, pianist, has just completed a week's engagement for Universal Films in Hollywood. He will be seen and heard in a piano sequence in "Three Cheers for the Boys."

'Another Love Story' Is an Involved Comedy

Reviewer Gets All Tangled Up in 3 Triangles

By John Chapman.

NEW YORK [Special]. — When "Another Love story" was presented at the Fulton theater with Roland Young, Margaret Lindsay, and Arthur Margetson in leading roles, the author, Frederick Lonsdale, took quite a pasting from most of the drama scouts. For having penned this drawingroom comedy he was accused, for instance, of being old fashioned and of being ignorant of conditions in the world today. His characters are literate simpletons who toil or spin not and have no notion that a war is going on.

Roland Young.

My own main objection to the comedy was none of these. It was that, in putting forth a trifle about parlor sex, Mr. Lonsdale got himself and me all tangled up in not one, but three, triangles. I was pretty tired by the time I'd got Roland Young straightened out with his two women, and Doris Dalton with her two men, and Philip Ober with his two girls—and so, I think, was Mr. Lonsdale. But now and then I had had quite a lot of fun, and any play which brings the droll and technically expert Mr. Young back to the stage can't be all bad.

The drawing room comedy hasn't changed a bit since the days of Jones, Pinero, and Wilde. The setting is always Lord Soandso's place, and the people in essence and speech are all members of the British aristocracy, even when, as is the case with "Another Love Story," the program says the setting is a palazzo near New York and all of the lords and ladies are American rascals. Comedy with such materials hasn't changed a bit, except that sex-talk has become bolder.

So, if Lonsdale or anybody else sets out to write a drawing room piece, I don't see why he should be scolded for ignoring conditions in the world today. Oscar Wilde wasn't preoccupied with what was happening in his time, either. Noel Coward gets a critics' circle citation for a dish of meatless froth like "Blithe Spirit," and nobody ever thought to ask anything of his play except that it be bright and amusing.

Writing a "sophisticated" comedy requires, above all things, deftness; a deftness something like a juggler's. When Coward, an acknowledged master of this trade, writes a trifle, it is a very slight trifle indeed. In "Blithe Spirit" all he and we had to bother about was Clifton Webb, Webb's current wife and Webb's old wife, now dead. Coward was juggling only three balls. Lonsdale juggles nine, and when he is paying particular attention to one set of three, the eye is diverted from some of the others and they fall. Then they have to be picked up and tossed into the air again.

Roland Young made the best opening night entrance of the season. The curtain of "Another Love Story" had gone up on an unoccupied set—the sitting room of Doris Dalton. In walked a figure of despair, Mr. Young, and he took a chair and gazed unseeingly past the audience until the welcoming handclaps had ended; then he said, as only Mr. Young could intone it, "I wish I were dead."

It turns out he wished he were dead because he had been seduced into an engagement with Fay Baker, a possessive and annoying daughter of his banker boss. He, on the other hand, had seduced, out of what passes for pure love in parlor funnybusiness, his secretary, Jayne Cotter, and wanted very much to marry her.

Another section of the play involves Margaret Lindsay, a highly attractive young woman from the movies who makes her Broadway debut with promising skill. It seems that once her heart was broken when Philip Ober jilted her. Now she finds that Ober, a penniless but attractive and resourceful rascal, is about to marry for her money the daughter of Doris Dalton, and Margaret is going to bust this up in fierce female revenge. She is going to win Ober back and then have the grim fun of jilting him.

Also concerned with the problem of the foolish daughter are, of course, Miss Dalton, as the mother; and Arthur Margetson, Miss Dalton's first husband, as the girl's father. Margetson is a successful, suave artist, and he isn't beyond making a pass at his first wife, who is now married to a fellow whom everybody calls dull and a fool right to his face all thru the play.

I've tried to make the three preceding paragraphs simple, just to give an idea, and I haven't told all, by any means. Nor shall I. But you may agree that there are enough complexities there for more than one three act session in a sitting room. Chief pleasures in Mr. Lonsdale's play are Mr. Young and Mr. Young's predicament; the smooth playing of Mr. Margetson and the general attractiveness of Miss Dalton, Miss Lindsay, Miss Baker, and Miss Cotter. Ober, I thought, was miscast—or miswritten. Perhaps no man could be so coolly unprincipled yet so all-fired fascinatin' to women.

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT

by Fanny Butcher

LOUIS BROMFIELD was here for a few hours on Monday, talking over soil conservation with the city fathers, who are arranging for a big luncheon meeting at the Sherman on Nov. 12. . . . And if you are wondering why the pillars of our society should be interested in soil conservation you have forgotten that 70 per cent of Chicago's wealth comes from the soil—the harvester and oil companies, the railroads, the great mail order houses are being supported by the land. . . . Incidentally, the next issue of the big mail order catalogs will have six pages of conservation data. . . . If midwestern soil goes on dying from exhaustion Chicago will have a severe case of economic anemia. . . . It's hard to get Louis Bromfield talking about books these days because he is so enthusiastically interested in saving his and our country. . . . He fires his listeners, too. . . . But I did get out of him that his next novel is about a small town girl who wanted to show the home town folks.

Bromfield's Lifelike Portraits.

Louis Bromfield's novels always have characters which to some readers seem portraits of real people. . . . The Indian novels, for instance, supplied whisperings and chuckles to many who claimed they recognized almost every one, while you and I just read them and enjoyed them. . . . Which reminds me that Louis told me how the American soldiers in India have, with a sense of humor and their jaunty democracy, broken down in one encounter the white-man-and-brown-man barriers which the British have taken years to build. . . . Indians always when they met a white man bowed very low and said, "Salaam, salaam, salaam," but Louis said when the first detachment of Americans were thus greeted they burst into howls of laughter, waved their hands in democratic greeting, and yelled, "Salami! Salami! Salami!" . . . Now Indians, meeting Americans, also burst into laughter, jauntily wave their hands, and yell, "Salami! Salami! Salami!" . . .

A New Polish Novel.

Another of last week's visitors was Mme. Marian Kister, a charming and beautiful Polish woman who escaped from Warsaw just ahead of the Germans and came with her husband and two daughters to America, bringing with them only the treasures of their minds and 20 years' experience as Poland's leading publishers. . . . This fall they, the Roy Publishers, will bring out in an English translation by Rulka Langer, author of "The Mermaid and the Messerschmitt," a long, inspirational novel by a great Polish novelist, Zofia Kossak, about St. Francis Assisi, called "Blessed Are the Meek." . . . Many who have already read it think it may be as popular as Franz Werfel's "The Song of Bernadette" and Lloyd Douglas' "The Robe." . . . Another great religious novel by a Pole, Henryk Sienkiewicz, first published in 1896, is being reissued by Little, Brown & Co. . . . It is "Quo Vadis . . . And out of Bennett Cerf's hilarious column, Trade Winds, in this week's Saturday Review of Literature, I dig this nugget about it: "Arthur Hornblow has announced a new picture version for the spring. My favorite dialectician called him when he heard the news and asked, 'Who's going to play Quo?'"

An Intimate Story.

The week's newest who's who is Katharine Butler Hathaway, author of "The Little Locksmith," this month's choice of the Book of the Month club, a first book of terrible and beautiful poignancy. It's her own frank telling of what it was like to be no bigger than a gnarled gnome in a world of the straight, and strong, and vigorous. . . . It is at times so revealing of human suffering and so intimate that a reader can scarcely bear it. . . . "Kitty Butler" spared neither herself nor her reader. . . . But it is also full of the joy of sights and sounds, of beauty perceived, and felt, and transmuted into happiness. . . . It is the almost painfully frank record of a childhood spent, for 10 years, strapped to a board, but lived horizontally and happily in the midst of a devoted family . . . of the bitter realization when she became a part of perpendicular life that she was not like other girls. . . . It is a story of tragic unhappiness in the denial of love . . . of a psychic release finally in the purchase of a house of her own, and happy spinsterhood. . . . There her story ends, altho an epilog speaks of her husband. . . . Katharine Butler Hathaway died before she had told her whole tale. . . . It is a record, outspoken, often naive, like the Journal of Marie Bashkirtseff.

An Austenish Novel.

Another first book published this week which is destined for vast popularity is "The Walsh Girls," by Elizabeth Janeway, a novel about two sisters in a small city community. . . . Refreshingly this story is about people and not about cosmic ideas, a sort of Jane Austenish kind of novel, but with enough of the stream of consciousness technique to give it a 1943 tang. . . . Sometimes it is almost maliciously revealing about feminine psychology. . . . Elizabeth Janeway is a sister-in-law of a famous former Chicagoan, Jacques Gordon, who used to be concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

Another former Chicagoan, James T. Farrell, ends the saga of Danny O'Neill in the fourth volume of Danny's fictional life history, "My Days of Anger," out this week. In the first of the four volumes Mr. Farrell did such a thoro job of peeling Danny's family down to the bone that there didn't seem much left to learn about them in the three following. . . . The first book was like a burlesque girl in a G-string. . . . Perhaps readers like best a novel something more on the strip-tease line. . . . But James Farrell was, I think, touched with pure genius when he chose the title for the first volume of the tetralogy, "A World I Never Made." . . . Today a whole generation is living, and dying, in a world they never made.

And still another famous Chicagoan had a book out this week. . . . Ben Hecht's much discussed short story, "Miracle in the Rain," is now in permanent book form. . . . A greater surprise than that story you'll rarely meet, for Mr. Hecht, the erstwhile hardboiled, has turned as sentimental as a valentine, and he does not stop with love coming to two lonely people. . . . There's miracle enough in this tale, but the author clinches the title with a miracle of fact. . . . If you knew and greatly admired the work of the old B. H. [Before Hollywood] realist, you can't help wondering if he hasn't proofread his name to Been Hecht.

2 Pep Books for Women in U.S. Uniforms

"THE WAVES," by Nancy Wilson Ross. [Henry Holt, $2.50.]
"DRESS RIGHT, DRESS," by Margaret Flint. [Dodd, Mead, $2.00.]

Reviewed by Maureen Daly.

Here are two books that should do more good than a series of patriotic pep talks and recruiting posters. They give the plain facts with accurate and complete inside information about the duties, responsibilities and possibilities for young women serving in the auxiliary branches of the army and navy. Both books are written by experienced novelists who know their material and have the ability to put their enthusiasm across.

"The Waves," the first book published about the women accepted for voluntary service with the navy, is serious in implication but written with such humor and understanding that the strenuous training from boot camp to officers' candidate school is made as interesting and satisfying as if the girls were not being prepared for such somber and responsible duties as teaching men to fly blind in Link trainers, getting planes on and off the fields from control towers, rigging parachutes, studying tropical bacteria in laboratories and in other ways taking over the jobs of men. Included in the book is a sample aptitude test for enlistment and a complete explanation of other requirements for joining the WAVES.

"Dress Right, Dress" is a more fictionalized version of women at war told in letter form between a young and inexperienced WAC and an older recruit whose husband is serving overseas. It is more a personal than a factual account of training in khaki; rather an exposé of the women who join the WAC, the reasons for which they join and how they react to the first months of training. Both books give pertinent and accurate information valuable to any woman anxious to serve her country in uniform.

Collection of Tales from Allied Nations

"ONCE UPON A TIME," by Agnes Fisher. [Thomas Nelson, $2.50.]

Readers young and old wanting to escape momentarily from arithmetic and budgets will relax in these folk tales, myths, and legends of the allied nations which the author has gathered from such sources as a Chinese laundryman, a Dutch baker, and a Canadian trapper. Some of the stories, she explains, are common to several countries. Most of them have a theme as old as time; the triumph of good over evil. The language is picturesque.

Great Drama in Narrative of PT Boats

"LONG WERE THE NIGHTS," by Hugh B. Cave. [Dodd, Mead, $3.]

Reviewed by James E. Sloan.

When the long roll of heroes is called after this war, none will be more deserving of a place of honor than the valiants who manned the motor torpedo boats which helped sweep the Japanese out of the Solomon Islands. "Long Were the Nights" is the thrilling story of PT Squadron X, that handful of Davids who night after night for four endless months hurled themselves against an army of Goliaths—and won.

These "expendables" who refused to be expended went into action off Guadalcanal in October, 1942, when the fate of that little island teetered on the brink of disaster. Their mission was explicit. The tiny thunder boats were to patrol the bloody waters of "Sleepless Lagoon," between Guadalcanal and Tulagi, and try to stop the excursions of the "Bougainville Express," a train of Jap warships which nightly landed reënforcements and shelled our haggard marine garrison.

How these eight tiny terriers of the sea derailed the Bougainville Express, sank a minimum of 12 Jap ships, blasted scores of others, and brought the blessings of sleep to the harassed marines is told in a realistic story.

In "Long Were the Nights" all the glamor is stripped from the horrible, crazy, terrifying, benumbing, nerve shattering hell that was the war in the Solomons. However, leavening the chills of the moments when live torpedoes jammed in their tubes and the boats ran a frantic race with death are numerous humorous episodes.

Mr. Cave, whose story was written with the coöperation of the officers of Squadron X, has done a fine job in so graphically re-creating each clash with the Jap warships that you can almost smell the salt spray as the tiny speedsters raced in for the kill. This book is living history that throbs with the thrills, chills, and plain terror of actual combat. The author does for the PT's in the Solomons what William L. White did for the "expendables" of the Philippines. Tragedy and heroism, disaster and amazing victories march with exciting step thru a book that you will find difficult to put aside until you are "relieved" along with these stalwarts of the South Pacific.

Massive Dose of Philosophy in Mars Visit

"OUT OF THE SILENT PLANET," by C. S. Lewis. [Macmillan, $2.]

Reviewed by Will Davidson.

C. S. Lewis probably was well aware when he was writing "Out of the Silent Planet" that his finished book would be placed immediately upon the "escape" shelf by a vast majority of his readers. Any book that takes an English philologist to Mars and back is an immediate candidate for such classification. He won't be too surprised, then, if only a few are stirred to a cleansing self-analysis and to an awareness of fundamental weaknesses in human nature.

The story of "Out of the Silent Planet" is fascinating adventure. Vacationing Prof. Ransom is kidnaped by a materialistic former schoolmate and a brilliant, unmoral scientist, and taken by space ship to the planet Malacandra. There he escapes to the kindly protection of the inhabitants, and his education begins.

He discovers that there are three types of beings on Mars [for that, he learns, is the identity of the planet]: the intellectuals, the poets and fishermen, and the workers. Each is supreme in its field, each respects the other, each has its own language. But all can converse together, for on Malacandra life has gone much farther than on the silent planet, or earth. It has shed the pettiness and selfishness of its earlier stages of development.

No one rules, for when all are equal under the beneficent universal power there is no caste. Each individual has his place, his work.

In the three earthly visitors Lewis has epitomized three basic human types. Ransom is the personification of the good men—those who have normal human weaknesses and fears, normal yearnings for truth, normal ability to find in life and in other men the real, worthwhile things. Devine, the materialist, is selfish. He is willing to destroy his fellowman if it will profit Devine, but he has no innate desire to destroy just for the pleasure of it. Weston, brilliant and on the verge of great truths, is blind with the myopia of the fanatic. His mind has traveled so far along one channel—the purely physical perfection of humanity—that he cannot see that the channel leads only downhill to the ocean of cosmic oblivion. He is the Napoleons and the Hitlers of history; the atheists and the deluded men of great knowledge who have so thoroly conquered the esoteric and the difficult that they have no strength left to achieve the simple.

"Out of the Silent Planet" is a masterpiece, as was Lewis' superbly satirical "The Screwtape Letters." With the fictitious Ransom it is easy to hope that some among its readers will approach it with awareness, and will not rest with a cynical evaluation of the book as merely escapist. For it is a book that continues to deliver its message long after the last page is finished. To each mind it offers entrancing vistas for philosophical study. To each it acts as a catalyst, causing reactions, the effectiveness of which depends upon the nature of the original mental elements.

Italian Mother and Her Efforts to Rule Family

"THE HOUSE OF MRS. CAROLINE," by C. M. Franzero. [Howell, Soskin, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Albert Goldberg.

With the fresh and interesting material at his disposal, much of it apparently autobiographical, the author of "The House of Mrs. Caroline" might have produced an Italian "Forsyte Saga" had he taken the pains to elaborate his work and give it form and scope.

It is the account of a not too interesting but no doubt typical Piedmontese family of the provincial upper class, dominated by a proud and tyrannical matriarch to whom tradition and custom are the breath of life. The fortunes of the clan are traced from the late 19th century to the rise of Mussolini and his Fascists. Tho the author strives to make Mrs. Caroline [the novel loses it atmosphere thru the Anglicization of names] the center of his tale she remains a shadowy, stereotyped figure. She has dubious influence on her son Charles, who eventually blesses a scandalous liaison of long standing with benefit of clergy over her bitter opposition, to become a stuffy pillar of society, and of still less influence over her wayward grandson, Serge, a disillusioned intellectual disowned by his family and finally brought into conflict with the rising tide of fascism.

With his intimate knowledge and understanding of Italian life, the author might have written a social document of genuine value. His apparent intention is to explain the forces that produced fascism, but the early 20th century and the chaotic years that followed the first World war are too lightly sketched, with too much undeveloped detail, to be thoroly convincing.

Life of Tyson Is Inspiration to Scientists

"EDWARD TYSON, M. D., F. R. S., 1650-1708, and the Rise of Human and Comparative Anatomy in England," by M. F. Ashley Montagu. [Memoir XX of the American Philosophical society, Philadelphia, xxix and 488. 1943 [$5.00.]

Reviewed by Wilton M. Krogman.

[Professor of anthropology, University of Chicago.]

Ever so often in the tide of human affairs there lives a man who not only contributes much to the scientific knowledge and advancement of mankind, but is himself an epitome of the era in which he lived. Time and the man meet and greatness is the result. Edward Tyson was such a man.

We remember him as much for what he was as for what he achieved. It is in this sense that I recommend this book most highly to those readers who are scientifically minded, who are historically minded, who are socially minded. In this volume one may learn of 17th century medical science, fighting valiantly and successfully to penetrate the fog of human fear and ignorance. One may learn of the politically great of the time, wielding power and influence more for personal aggrandizement than for human welfare.

One may learn of the humble people, pawns of the great, but objects of concern by the few who dared dream, even then, of social betterment.

And, finally, one may learn of a man—Tyson—who a century and a half before Darwin proclaimed the essential biological oneness of man with all other animals of creation. The life of Edward Tyson is a triumphant stride in the onward march in the dignity and equality of all men.

All these things one may read in this volume, which but for the literary genius of Dr. Montagu might have been just another biography.

I am writing this unreserved recommendation—because I feel the book ranks as a masterpiece of biography. Take time out in this hectic world to read this important medico-sociological document. You'll be repaid with a glow of pride that construction will endure long after current destruction has had its moment.

Our America and Influences That Shaped It

"MAINSTREAM," by Hamilton Basso. [Reynal & Hitchcock, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst.

In the current stream of books about America here is one that gives off both warmth and light. It is a book about Americans and the influences that have shaped them. It tells how Americans think and feel and hope. I don't know where else a reader can learn so much about these things, and with such constant pleasure, as in the 241 pages of Hamilton Basso's fresh, sound and searching essay.

Any book that spans the experience between Cotton Mather and Huey Long, between Andrew Carnegie and Franklin Roosevelt, must deal with complex subject matter, but Mr. Basso has found a disarmingly simple scheme. John Applegate, an average American, after a hard day in the store is sitting in his living room with the radio on, vaguely thinking about the 100 per cent American to whom a senator has been appealing over a nationwide hookup. So Mr. Basso traces the tributaries of myth and sentiment, of belief and faith and hope, which have entered into John Applegate's character.

This scheme would not succeed unless John Applegate were convincing as that abstraction, the average man. But he is convincing. With his indifference to history, his faith in figures, his uncritical conception of success, his loyalty to democracy without any grasp of its moral and spiritual principles, he is as familiar as the reflection in the mirror. Well, John Applegate thinks about America, chiefly in terms of the remembered men it has produced, and then Mr. Basso takes up where he leaves off. In the process familiar things are given new meaning, and there is not a trivial, trite, or dull paragraph anywhere.

With shrewd selection and flexible discourse Mr. Basso manages to survey three centuries in 10 chapters, and to put down a number of bench marks at the same time. Here is America with its thin moral climate, its ingrained materialism, but with its ardor and idealism too. Behind such writing there must be wide reading and long reflection, but the book carries them lightly. As a result, there will not be many more readable books this winter, or more informed. One of John Applegate's familiar deficiencies is his indifference to books, but it will be his loss if he misses this one.

Analysis of Her Own Work Given by Ellen Glasgow

"A CERTAIN MEASURE," by Ellen Glasgow. [Harcourt, Brace, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Elizabeth Green.

Here are 13 essays wearing the guise of "prefaces," but written as a block, not separately, some years after the books themselves. Together they represent the author's attempt to appraise her own work. If such an unusual and ambitious project falls a little short, the fault may be in the very nature of the undertaking.

A few of the topics reached for discussion via one preface or another [with rather slim connections] include: literature as art, the author's literary creed, the prospects for fiction in a new age, the romantic tradition as a blight upon southern literature, the lack of manner and manners in the current crop of authors, and social problems arising out of the Civil war.

Ellen Glasgow can, of course, speak with complete authority upon her own books, but in the other sections, tho the style is that of the competent craftsman, the content is neither new nor especially illuminating.

'Without Love' Opens at Erlanger Tomorrow Night

MissConstance Bennett Stars in Barry Play

By Claudia Cassidy.

Ethel Barrymore, Constance Bennett, and Elissa Landi soon will be coming to town, not quite in that order of precedence. Miss Bennett gets here first, opening at the Erlanger tomorrow night in Philip Barry's "Without Love," a Theater Guild production directed by Arthur Hopkins and designed by Robert Edmond Jones, which is one way of getting a good start in the world. It has three American Theater society weeks in advance of "Oklahoma!", now charging on the town like a spurred bronco, and it represents the star's second stage visit to Chicago. The first was in January, 1940, when she revived Noel Coward's "Easy Virtue" at the Selwyn.

It seems a bit late in the day to tell any one that Constance Bennett is the elder daughter of the once brilliant actor, Richard Bennett, and the sister of Barbara and Joan. The legend is that she was educated privately in New York and Paris, with no thought of a career as an actress, but that Sam Goldwyn saw her at an Equity ball with her father and grabbed her for a role in his film, "Cytherea." So she went in the movies at 15 and has been there, off and on, ever since. Married to Gilbert Roland, now a lieutenant in the air corps, she spent last year in Washington to be near Bolling field. She had no idea then that Washington would be the locale of her next play.

"Tomorrow the World," due at the Selwyn Nov. 7, introduces Miss Landi to playgoing Chicago as the fiancée of a midwestern university professor [Paul McGrath] whose home is invaded and almost wrecked by his Nazi trained nephew, a 12 year old product of Hitlerism, who for two acts is the most hated figure to step on a stage since Katharine Cornell's papa in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." This minute monster is played by Dickie Tyler, once of "Life With Father" and the Maurice Evans "Macbeth." Dickie is an actor, not a type. A confirmed Boy Scout, he claims such ancestors as John Tyler, Thomas Jefferson, and Benjamin Harrison.

Miss Landi's background is straight out of those romantic novels she writes, only it happens to be true. Born in Venice, the daughter of a countess, she scored her first Broadway success in Hemingway's "Farewell to Arms," which catapulted her into pictures. Her most recent film was "Corregidor," with Otto Kruger and Ian Keith.

Miss Barrymore brings "The Corn Is Green" back to town for four weeks at the Studebaker, opening Nov. 8. This is her fourth season in Emlyn Williams' play of the Welsh mining districts, which he wrote for himself and acted in London, taking care to make it a double draw by including a rich role for Sybil Thorndike. This role of the teacher who befriends the young miner has been a source of delight to thousands who remained firmly faithful to Miss Barrymore thru a long succession of inferior plays, and lived to reap their reward. Her supporting cast is almost entirely changed, with Bert Kalmar Jr. new in the part originally played here by Richard Waring, and with Darthy Hinkley replacing Thelma Schnee as the Cockney trollop. Eva Leonard-Boyne, Marcel Dill, and Gwilym Williams are the only holdovers from the troupe that played here two seasons ago.

Altho the Ballet Russe leaves the Civic Opera house after tonight's performance, ballet will not completely wither on the Chicago scene. For one thing, the newly organized Chicago Ballet company will make its bow at the Eighth Street theater Nov. 29 and 30 and Dec. 1, under the supervision of Bronislava Nijinska, with Nicolai Malko as musical director. For another, "The Waltz King," opening at the opera house a week from Monday night, stars Tatiana Riabouchinska in three Strauss ballets choreographed by David Lichine, whose "Graduation Ball" was an engaging venture in the Viennese idiom. His new creations are "The Emperor's Ballet," "Chimes in Vienna," "Polka," and "Little Soldiers." Appearing in them will be Marjory Tallchief, sister of Maria Tallchief of the Ballet Russe. They are Oklahoma girls, part Indian, and Tallchief is the family name.

Back in 1936, if you sat at the College Inn ringside and got ice shavings in your lap, you were watching the birth of one of the most prosperous ventures known to show business, for this was where and when the "Ice Follies" got its start. At that time the show employed 28 people and traveled with two trunks of costumes. When the "Ice Follies of 1944" [eighth edition] opens at the Chicago Arena Nov. 5, it will have a cast of 130 and about 730 costumes, with eight costumers to look after them. The ice show now tours 47 out of the 52 weeks in the year, and the new version has 33 acts, including a circus finale and a novelty with canoes on frozen water. Bess Ehrhardt is out of the cast, and Bobby Maxson is in service, but Shipstad and Johnson will be there, with Betty Atkinson, Frick and Frack, Heinie Brock and other familiars, plus the usual parade of newcomers. The ice show insists it is harder hit by war than any of its rivals. The boys are so healthy they get drafted, and the girls are so pretty they get married.

IN "THE WALTZ KING"

Opera stars in three quarter time—Richard Bonelli and Irra Petina, on leave from the grand opera stage to sing in the Straussian musical, "The Waltz King," which opens at the Civic Opera house Monday evening, Nov. 1.

"Verklarte Nacht."

Arnold Schönberg is reported to be again re-orchestrating his "Verklärte Nacht." This apparently will be the third version, the original having been composed in 1899 as a sextet for strings and later made over for full string orchestra.

Notes of the Theater

What happens at "The Army Play by Play" when the dragnet fails to haul in a beautiful blonde, sultry brunet, or smoldering redhead to kiss Sgt. Irving Engleman at the climax of "Button Your Lip"? Well, thousands, even millions of less fortunate soldiers will say it serves the sergeant right. For the other night the dragnet failed at the Studebaker and on came Corp. Kurt Kasznar as Carmen Miranda. At least he had the turban.

Thanksgiving week plans are announced by "Good Night, Ladies," which will drop its usual Wednesday matinee Nov. 24 to play a special matinee the following day.

Two Chicago actresses have joined two casts of "Kiss and Tell," Eva Parnell going to the Harris as understudy to Katharine Warren, Marian Leeds and Ruth Conley, and Katherine Card, who goes to the west coast to play the cook.

Eugenie Leontovich, who collaborated with Elena Miramova in writing "Dark Eyes," has been working with George S. George on a comedy with music called "Stars, Stripes and Bublichkis," described by an impartial observer as "pretty funny in spots and completely nuts thruout." It's about Michael and Masha who run a coöperative farm in Russia.

Vinton Freedley is talking about a Chicago engagement of "Let's Face It," providing Danny Kaye can be had for his original role.

Jane Elliott and Arlene Friedrich, who played leading roles in "Guest in the House," have been engaged by the Actors company to appear in "Out of This World," Nellise Child's new play which opens at Forester theater Nov. 10. Also in the cast will be Joseph Mell, formerly with the group and recently honorably discharged from the army after service at Guadalcanal. Opening night's performance will start at 7:15, out of charity to morning newspapers.

Here is the price scale for "Oklahoma," which opens at the Erlanger Nov. 15, but already is inundating the theater with mail orders and telephone calls. Evenings — $3.85, $3.30, $2.75, $2.20, $1.65, and $1.10. Matinees—$2.75, $2.20, $1.65, $1.10.

"Victory Belles," Alice Gerstenberg's new play, opens in New York Tuesday night with Mabel Taliaferro, Barbara Bennett, and their respective husbands, Robert Ober and Addison Randall, heading the cast.

The Northwestern University theater announces its 16th subscription season to open in the speech building on the campus Nov. 3 with "Cry Havoc." Subsequent plays are "Beggar on Horseback," Dec. 1; "The Affairs of Anatol," Feb. 2; "Candida," March 1; "The Way of the World," April 26, and "Is Life Worth Living?" May 24. Each play is given three times, on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings.

Brock Pemberton, who came to town for the opening of "Janie," has returned to New York to work on his next production, called "From Pillar to Post." No cast has been chosen, but, like "Janie," it will be staged by Antoinette Perry with settings by John Root. Meanwhile, the Civic theater's comedy is making small Clare Foley the child toast of the town.

Too bad for Elsie Ferguson's comeback, but "Outrageous Fortune" probably closed in Boston last night after an unsuccessful tryout. This was Rose Franken's play with Maria Ouspenskaya, Margalo Gillmore, and Frederic Tozere also in the cast of a Gilbert Miller production.

Fascist Gives Himself Away as Prize Fool

"SEE WHAT I MEAN?" by Lewis Browne. [Random House, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Edward Barry.

Lewis Browne.

This is billed as "a novel based on facts." It is an amusing and frightening story about a pre-Pearl Harbor fascist organization in Los Angeles. It is told in the first person by the gang's press agent, Clem Smullet, a perfect Pal Joey and—like Joey—a master of the art of damning one's self out of one's own mouth. In 244 pages of whining self-justification he succeeds only in proving himself a fool, a shakedown artist, a double crosser, and an all around heel.

The book is amusing partly because of the character and antics of this press agent [respectable press agents will average one blush per page thru the book], partly because the gang with which he works constitutes one of the choicest collection of rascals, cranks and morons ever assembled between the covers of one book. At its best, "See What I Mean?" has a genuine picaresque flavor.

The most spectacular of the book's characters is the crazy führer, John Christian Power, who shaves his head, oils his body, and roars constantly against the Jews. He unquestioningly accepts and passes on to his followers some of the tallest tales ever told. "Once I sold the screwball on the idea that the new pope was secretly a Jew," says Smullet in his own salty way, "and that he'd been elected only because Rabbi Stephen S. Wise had raised a million dollars in Hollywood to grease the c

Then there is the gross and cynical "Doc" Gribbler who will turn his hand to quack medicine, anti-Semiticism, or any other field where the crop of fools seems to be luxuriant and prospects for profit good. A third member of the gang is the bruiser with the mind of a backward child who is always brooding about soldiers and guns and calculating the chances of taking over the country by force.

The book is frightening because it demonstrates convincingly how easily cunning or mad or unscrupulous men can betray the ignorant and the gullible into the most reprehensible and anti-social actions. The recipe for John Christian Power's success is aptly summarized by Smullet in these words: "It made no difference what they [the people] were sore about—unemployment, usury, flaming youth, vivisection—he'd always tell them the Jew was to blame. And that seemed to make them feel swell."

As a novel, "See What I Mean?" is better than average. Several of the characters are shrewdly observed and cleverly projected. The action is fast and entertaining.

One Young Fellow's Life in Small Town

"THE HILLS OF HOME," by Curtis Martin. [Houghton Mifflin, $2.]

John Fellows might be that young man who inadvertently stepped on your foot in the bus this morning. Or he may lie in a shallow grave on Guadalcanal. At least, he came from Sangre de Christo, now a ghost town in the brown plains and blue hills of New Mexico. You meet him as he leaves the dying town for what he is sure is the last time. His last look as the early train pulls out encompasses the years of his youth, and in that look you see with him the people he knew, the experiences that left their impression on his mind. You don't get to know him very well, for he isn't quite sure about himself, but you do get one young fellow's cross section of life in a small town. W. D.

"WILLKIE'S FALLACY," by George B. Gillespie; privately printed.

Reviewed by William Shinnick.

After practicing law for more than half a century in Illinois Mr. Gillespie feels competent to explain to the grassroot people how Wendell Willkie missed a mental boat when he came back to the United States after a 31,000 mile jaunt and announced that what he had seen was all One World.

The author's approach to his task is taken in a lawyerlike manner; he analyzes such factual material as Willkie put into his book on global oneness and asserts the evidence shows conclusively that you can't rub democracy and the Atlantic Charter into the skins of Josef Stalin, the Russian people, or the masses of China.

The charter, he believes, would grant Americans and British nothing not guaranteed by their own constitutions. Contrarywise, it couldn't mean anything to the Russians, who are governed by a party with a membership of only 7½ per cent of the total population, or to the much disorganized Chinese.

"Most ludicrous" of the incidents in the Willkie book, by Mr. Gillespie's reckoning, is a visit to the Kremlin. There the one time Presidential candidate made a wisecrack to the effect that, unless Stalin quit teaching Russians to read, he would lose his job.

"The dictator laughed so heartily that Mr. Willkie seems to have been in fear that he might break a button off his trousers," Mr. Gillespie relates. ". . . It was his own crass simplicity and lack of realism that so amused Uncle Joe."

It is Mr. Gillespie's opinion that if the United States goes into a world super-government at the end of the war we must inevitably acquiesce in British and Russian imperialism and support both kinds; this in opposition to our traditional dislike of world dominion by great powers. The result of world collaboration by the three big countries would be a return to a business system run by "the barons of industry and finance under new names," he holds.

"Willkie's Fallacy" is a slim volume but compact. It is frankly partisan. But it has a leaven of humor and a clear logic and realism much to be commended in these days of vague idealism. And it asks the sapient question: What conversation did Willkie have with his Wall Street pals before he started his trip?

Tricks of Taxidermy Revealed to Amateur

"TAXIDERMY," by Leon L. Pray. [Macmillan, $1.49.]

Almost motion by motion, Leon Pray instructs the amateur how to make his two weeks in the north woods or on grandpa's farm last all year, and for life. Mr. Pray, who is a taxidermist at the Chicago [Field] museum, drew nearly four dozen illustrations for his little book. With consummate clarity, they show what to do and what to do it with. Taxidermy, even to the beginner, no longer is just "stuffing." One builds a light statue of wood, papier mache, string and such upon which the pelt or scalp fits like tights. Borax mothproofing, developed by Mr. Pray himself, eliminates the old arsenic peril. The hobby beckons to every hunter and angler.

Journey in the Dark

BY MARTIN FLAVIN

JOURNEY IN THE DARK, the Portrait of an American, is the latest in a long line of distinguished novels to be awarded one of the major literary prizes in America. Richly dramatic, exceptional in range, it tells the story of Sam Braden, a man who achieved success yet never escaped loneliness, a common man whose strength and weakness are the stuff of humanity everywhere.

The comments of the judges who selected JOURNEY IN THE DARK as the Harper Prize Novel give you some idea of its special excellence.

IRITA VAN DOREN:
"This is a novel of unusual scope and richness, a warm, appealing picture of life in America in the past sixty years. . . Altogether, it is one of the best novels I have read in years."

BERNARD DeVOTO:
"Above all it is alive. It is genuine experience."

Journey in the Dark

CLIFTON FADIMAN:
"Intelligent and conscientious...mirrors a representative cross-section of American life during the last sixty years."

A Cripple Tells of Poignant Groping for Graciousness

"THE LITTLE LOCKSMITH," by Katharine Butler Hathaway. [Coward-McCann. $2.50.]

Reviewed by James Gray.

The confessional booth of literature is the one place that a garrulous generation still shuns. Of autobiographies we have had many, but they are of the formal, decorous sort, concentrating on the objective treatment of places, people, and events. The kind of book in which a writer unpacks heart and mind of all their most intimate possessions is still rare, and rarity makes it noticeable.

Katharine Butler Hathaway wrote such a book, finishing it just before her death a year ago. Theme and style made it unique; a quality of mind which was at once humorous and melancholy added distinction. "The Little Locksmith" belongs with a very small collection of books, like Amiel's Journal, which reveal intimately the steps by which a human being has grown in grace and dignity and faith in the experience of living.

There were particular reasons why the life of this woman was capable of offering some special kind of revelation. It was lived in isolation, caused by sickness and crippling. At the age of five she was "changed from a rushing, laughing child into a bedridden, meditative one." For the 10 years during which character is fixed forever she lay making a slow recovery from disease [presumably tuberculosis of the spine]. When she rose, a young woman who looked still like a child with a dwarfed and malformed body, she had a world to create for herself out of the ruin that disaster to health had left.

During her invalidism she had been enveloped in a special kind of love. But that specialness itself made her vulnerable in her contact with the normal world. Children in the street jeered at her strangeness. Young men, her brother's friends, eyed her uncomfortably and made hasty exits. At best she was treated like a bright, precocious child. And even the yearning love of her mother became oppressive and demeaning.

The person who has seldom been ill must feel his way wonderingly into a world of pain and isolation such as that which Katharine Hathaway described. Her method is so tactful, so innocent of self-pity or bitterness that at last she makes her secret world luminously clear.

The experience missed, like that of love, may be more rich than the experience that is carelessly tasted and cast aside. Katharine Hathaway's philosophy came to be one of tremulous expectancy. Only a daily miracle could save her experience from being dismal, but she learned that the magic of transformation is easy. If a wise and sensitive person is determined to turn barrenness into richness, the willing alone can accomplish it.

Tremulous expectancy is not a mood that is easy to maintain even thru a short book. But the deep sincerity of "The Little Locksmith" keeps its revelations of all the intimacies of human relations with family, with friends, with one's work always moving in their expression of a personal discovery of truth, always beguiling in their graceful embellishment of that truth.

The book is one of the two offerings of the Book of the Month for November.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Charles Collins.

ROMAIN ROLLAND, French novelist, dramatist, biographer of musicians, and philosopher of peace and good will, has been reported dead, no doubt in a Nazi concentration camp. His career is too large and serious a subject for this column, but we shall present glimpses of him by authoritative witnesses. First of all, his view of himself, written in the third person:

"In politics he has always been a republican with advanced socialist sympathies, an internationalist, and as they said in the 18th century, 'a citizen of the world.' He has always fought social injustice. In art, he loves above all Beethoven, Shakespeare, and Goethe. Among the French, it is Stendhal whom he prefers, besides the encyclopaedists of the 18th century, Voltaire, Diderot, Jean-Jacques Rousseau, and the great memoir writers, of whom the most illustrious is Saint-Simon. Rembrandt is the painter who is dearest to his heart. But his chosen country is Italy."

Stefan Zweig, in "The World of Yesterday," had much to write of Rolland, with whom he worked for peace when the shadows of the world wars began to darken over Europe. This portrait, for example:

"Very tall and slim, he walked with a slight stoop, as if the countless hours at his desk had bent his neck. . . . For hours on end he wrote at his small, heaped-up desk; for hours he would read in bed, never allowing his tired body more than four or five hours' sleep, and music was the sole relaxation he permitted himself. He played the piano beautifully, caressing the keys as if he wished to entice the tones, not to force them out. No virtuoso—and I have listened to Max Reger, Busoni, and Bruno Walter in the most intimate setting—ever gave me such a feeling of direct communication with the beloved masters."

"Jean Christophe," Rolland's major work, is unequaled as a three-decker novel of a composer's life. The American edition was published in three volumes; in French it ran to 12 volumes, which appeared between 1904 and 1912. Premonitions of World War I. are numerous in its 1,577 pages.

"For His Return," a collection of poems by Elsie Melchert Fowler, comes from the Alderbrink Press, Chicago, with the distinction of format that is characteristic of Ralph Fletcher Seymour's book-designing talent. Mrs. Fowler has been a frequent contributor to the Line o' Type column of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and also to magazines. The jacket contains an opinion of her work which this column will gladly quote, since it bears the same by-line:

"The poems of Elsie Melchert Fowler have pleased magazine editors, captivated newspaper columnists, and won prizes in important contests—all this so often that her reputation may be considered as well established. It is time, therefore, to see a collection of her graceful, skilful, and sensitive verses in book form. Her work answers the test of the true poet: much of it has the singing mood. For a sample of her quality, try 'In Kensington Gardens,' a war time poem that is among my favorites."

The Boswell club of energetic literati has opened its dinner season with various innovations. Its monthly bulletin has been expanded in form and circulation and now contains, in addition to its 18th century erudition and humor, editorials on burning issues of the time. But the club is hewing to its original line, for this same issue contains a feeling reference to the pleasures of the Boswellian table—"a bowl of hog's pudding, a dish of apple dumplings, a mug of ale, and a drachm of Strega."

This column would like to see a joint meeting of the Boswell club, aged 1 year, and the Chicago Literary society, aged 70, at which each would strive to outdo the other. Tradition and youth in convivial conflict, with two toastmasters, two speakers of the evening, and maybe double martinis in every glass—all this might make a large evening.

Such a meeting would recall the festive occasion of 50 years ago when the Whitechapel club entertained the Clover club of Philadelphia in its gruesome quarters off Newsboys' alley. The Clovers, who came to Chicago in a special train, appeared at the dinner in tails and white tie. The Whitechapelers looked as if they had borrowed their raiment from the adjacent newsboys. At the stroke of midnight the joint was raided by a squad of large, rough, red faced cops, who tossed all the magnificent Clovers into patrol wagons. A few hours later, after the Whitechapelers had drunk their fill, they adjourned to the Harrison street police station and freed their guests.

Pleasant Tale of Boyhood on Indiana Dunes

"DUNE BOY," by Edwin Way Teale. [Dodd, Mead, $3.]

Reviewed by John Frederick Nims.

Edwin Teale is already well known as a naturalist, photographer, and author; his earlier books—among them "Grassroot Jungles," with its terrific face to face photographs of insects—received last spring the John Burroughs award.

In "Dune Boy," a mature and thoughtful book with, unfortunately, a juvenile title, Teale shows the same careful and sympathetic observation in describing his boyhood years at Lone Oak on the edge of the Indiana duneland. This is a fine, simple, and unpretentious account, warm as the sun on the farmhouse roof where Edwin once lay staring at cranes and eagles making for the lake.

It is pleasantly humorous, with its tales of mouse-pelts, the horse drawn glider, and the man with green hair; it is rich with the impressions of boyhood; cameras and katydids and "No Name Cake" at Christmas. The people are living and attractive, especially Gramp with his racy idiom and outlandish humor: "Time for honest folk to be abed and rogues a-joggin'"; "Polite as a basket o' chips."

In spite of these sincere and human qualities, there will be a feeling in some quarters that this is not an "important" book. It is well to recall why: For at least a century and a half the tendency of literature has been toward the subjective. As we investigated the secrets of personality [complexes, drives, fixations, stream-of-consciousness, the subconscious, dreams, etc.] our literature became more subtle and more tenuous.

All this was surely an important advance in human thinking; whole regions of the knowable were opened. But it was not an unmixed blessing; morbid organisms, we found, had more "sensibility" than hale ones. Nazi atrocities have been explained as applied surrealism.

My point: The thoughtful and exquisite achievements of Joyce and Kafka should not be taken as transcendentals; they should not blind us to humbler values of morning, sunlight, and the green and boyhood world of which Edwin Teale is poet and reporter.

'Alter California Town to Resemble Iowa Town

HOLLYWOOD—(AP).—Efforts to duplicate the town of Waterloo, Ia., as it was 28 years ago, in a rural center in southern California for "The Sullivans," story of the five sons of that name lost in a naval disaster in this war, were expensive and elaborate. Tons of dirt had to be emptied on the paved streets; orange and grapefruit and palm trees had to be removed or disguised; street signs had to be changed, and even street lighting fixtures had to be altered.

This Town Called Hollywood

By Philip Scheuer

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. [Special].—The new slogan in Hollywood is "every man his own producer." Even a cursory survey of the field indicates that independents are springing up like so many war gardens; and while the "indies" have always been with us, this time it's different. The difference is that nobody speaks of them collectively as "poverty row" any more. Most of them are little biggies before they start. And they are all well heeled.

That's it, of course—there's money in the air, lots of it, more than there has been in years. The banks are receptive because, according to one observer, returns are even higher—and quicker—than on war industry investments. Too, he went on, new corporations offer new loopholes in the tax situation. Another factor is what might be called The Revolt of the Agents—the flesh peddlers who, chafing under the take-it-or-else ukases of the major studios, persuade their clients to seek a "square deal" by setting up shop for themselves, or in some cases doing it for them.

Then there is the insatiable maw of the projection machines, which eat up film faster than it can be fed to them. The big companies just can't grind it out rapidly enough; and that's where the "indies" come in. If, by a miracle, they should all recognize that their obligations are artistic as well as financial, this decentralization could be the best thing that has happened to the industry in years.

An "indie" can mushroom overnight into the big time. For instance, Seymour Nebezal produced "Hitler's Madman" [originally "The Hangman"] with private capital for $194,000. M. G. M. bought it for lots more, that was only a few months ago. Now Nebenzal announces "The Moon, Their Mistress," from Chekhov's "The Shooting Party," to feature George Sanders, Linda Darnell, and Oscar Homolka. It is budgeted at $560,000—big time stuff.

The deal with the banks was explained to me by an "indie" spokesman in this way:

"First you get your backing—independent capital—for say, $500,000. You go to your bank and tell them what you plan to do and how much you've raised. The bank pats you on the head and you get busy. First, your story. That's a hard nut to crack, but you finally have one. You set yourself up in business, rent offices, prepare your script—everything right up to the actual physical production.

"Then you return to the bank and say, 'I'm starting Monday.' On Monday $500,000 is put to your account in the bank. You can charge all you've already spent against it—office rent, story purchase, etc. The bank doesn't care. You can shoot the whole $500,000 or any part of it; if you need, say $40,000 more, you can have that, too.

"You make your picture and turn it over to the distributors. It is released to the theaters. After two or three months, when it has played in maybe 500 of a potential 10,000 houses, the distributors give the bank a declaration of residual values—what they think the picture will earn. The bank takes the distributors' word for it and is ready to do business with you again—if you show a profit, of course. Simple, isn't it?

"The banks?" he grinned. "They get their 5 or 6 per cent—whatever the cut is."

Hunt Stromberg is one of the producers who has taken advantage of the capital gain system—a system approved, my informant said, by congress. By it an individual may incorporate anew for each production on a pay-as-you-go plan. "Thus," I was told, "instead of paying perhaps a 75 per cent blanket corporation tax, he is assessed only a portion of his income and permitted to put the balance back into the business—building, as it were, for the future." [An optimist.]

In any event, Stromberg dissolved Hunt Stromberg Productions after "Lady of Burlesque" and became just plain Hunt Stromberg. If and when he gets around to "Dishonored Lady" sometime next year, he probably will be something else again. It may be noted, too, that "The North Star" has been trade marked a Crescent production and "Up in Arms" an Avalon production, tho both bear the indubitable Goldwyn stamp. [All right, Sam, you can come out now, we know you.]

Goldwyn's own lot, so long exclusive, has become the headquarters for several independent producers who have rented space there. Among these are Samuel Bronston, five years ago a penniless Russian refugee, who has filmed "Jack London" with Michael O'Shea and Susan Hayward; P. C. A. [Producers Corporation of America] headed by Producer-Director Harry Joe Brown and Sig Schlager, an ex-publicity man and agent, who are currently shooting "Knickerbocker Holiday" with Nelson Eddy and Charles Coburn, and the Brothers Cagney, whose "Johnny Come Lately" already is in the theaters.

Other lots are swarming with other rugged individualists—but that's another story.

Walter Slezak, Now Citizen, Refuses to Play Nazi Roles

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. (AP).—Walter Slezak, huge Viennese actor, now an American citizen, says "positively" in referring to his resolve to play no more Nazi roles.

When he was offered the role of Goering in a forthcoming film concerning Hitler, at twice his usual salary, he turned it down. His idea is that he doesn't want his screen career to end with the end of Nazi roles on the screen.

Slezak can look at the careers of all the men who have played Nazis, without other roles in between, and see that they have been injured so far as getting work is concerned. Henry Victor, who undertook a villainous role, that of a Nazi, in the first of them all, "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," when it took courage to play in such films, has had little else to do but a few scattered Nazi roles since. Victor's first break from the Nazi mold is as a Dutchman in "The Story of Dr. Wassell."

"Amor and Psyche."

Paul Hindemith's Ballet-Overture, "Amor and Psyche," will receive its world premiere by the Philadelphia orchestra under Eugene Ormandy this season.

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!
No inconvenience will she shirk
The woman who doth love her work
With criminals she'll e'en hobnob
So's to turn out a perfect job.

Or so it seems.

The "woman" in the case under discussion is a precocious chit of 11 years. A radio starlet, if you please, who, as the action starts, is fed up with the brand of crime stories in which she appears and which, as written, make her, she insists, a most unnatural youngster.

"Did YOU ever hear a little girl talk like that?" she demands of studio help at large and, indeed, none can reply in the affirmative.

SO—the darling decides she'll write her own scripts. . . . And, in the wee, sma' hours, Joan starts forth in search of local color. . . . She steals into the library to leave a note for her pretty Aunt Pat, engaged to the radio announcer, and encounters a kindly burglar—who believes her to be a sister in crime. . . . The canny babe further convinces him by opening for him the wall safe in her room—which, of course, he doesn't know is hers. . . . He believes her to be a natural of a Jenny Valentine . . . and when she says she has no folks and no home . . . takes her right along with him to the hideout where he lives with a coupla other harmless, good natured pilferers. . . .

Go on from here with the picture. You'll not be wrong if you surmise that a kidnaping story breaks. . . . And so and so and so to a cheery ending.

All light stuff and clean—IF you believe that little girls should be cast in crime stories.

Joan Carroll plays Pat effortlessly and well. Tom Kennedy scores as the big, kind robber who takes "Small Change" under his wing—and goes on a reformation spree. Ruth Warrick and Walter Reed are nice as romantic color. All other players know their way around and the director made a neat, snappy one hour session out of the script.

See you tomorrow.

ROMANTIC

Wackily romantic is this pose of Betty Hutton and Bob Hope currently appearing in "Let's Face It." On second run at McVickers.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

I HAVE found a delightful companion piece to that wicked story of the Englishman's watch, as related by Frank Harris, with which I brightened this column a few weeks ago. It is reported by Paul Tabori, in "A Wreath for Europa" [Ives Washburn], a brilliant chronicle of the Europe that went down in the whirlwind of 1939. The scene this time is Rumania. The uncle of one of Mr. Tabori's Swiss friends—a banker—went to Rumania on business and was entertained at dinner by the president and board of a large Rumanian bank. The food was excellent, the wine superb, the gypsies' music divine. The Swiss banker sat at the right of the bank president; at his other side was the first vice president, a benignly bearded gentleman who spoke the four main European languages.

When the dinner was over, the guest of honor felt for his watch. It was gone. Greatly embarrassed, he told the president what had happened. The president, too, was unhappy. After a moment's reflection, he hurried away and returned in a few minutes with the watch.

"I remembered that you sat next to our vice president," he explained.

The Swiss was shocked. "You mean . . . ?" he stammered.

"Hush!" whispered the president, raising a finger to his lips. "He doesn't know it yet!"

It's Sheer Entertainment.

Tabori admits the story is probably invention, but believes it to be not without a certain spiritual significance. His book is studded with gorgeous and revealing anecdotes that it would be a pleasure to quote. It is about people more than politics, an impressionistic panorama of a lost world that has helped this commentator to a better understanding of pre-war Europe than the more pedantic interpretations of political chicanery by bigger names. Probably it is too romantic, but for sheer entertainment this picture of Europe between wars would be hard to beat.

Louis Zara's New Novel.

Others have told you that Louis Zara's stalwart psycho-historical novel, "Against This Rock" [Creative Age Press], is a good book. It occurred to me that it was a work of considerable scholarship also, for which the well known Chicago author had been obliged to do a lot of reading. I asked him about it, and this is what he said:

"For some 10 years I nursed the thought of a novel on Charles V. There is very little about him in English; the historical literature is in German, Spanish, and Italian. In English there is a two volume biography by Edward Armstrong, written about 40 years ago; a biography by Christopher Hare, and a study of the emperor's declining years, written about 65 years ago by Sterling-Robertson. There is also an excellent essay by D. B. Wyndham Lewis. Best of all is Prof. Karl Brandi's 'Emperor Charles V.,' which was written only four years ago, and has been translated from the German.

"However, a majority of the material is still in German, and it required considerable application to tackle the sources in the original with only a very modest German at my command. The next most useful work to me was a huge folio volume by Foronda, written in Spanish and giving a day by day account of the emperor's whereabouts from his birth to his death. With the aid of a Spanish dictionary I was able to navigate safely.

"Curiously, the best accounts of Charles' mature years were given by the Venetian ambassadors, who reported as shrewdly as the best foreign correspondents of our time; they were, of course, sending secret reports back to their superiors. These dispatches gave more of the dignity and sincerity of the man than any accounts except those of the cardinals who attended the various German diets while Charles was struggling with that incorrigible nation.

"However, I would like to say categorically something that I think you as a writer will understand: The emperor lived for me because for days and weeks and months I tried to live and dream as tho I were he. I was not content just to write down what his decisions were in the most crucial and dramatic events of his life; I tried to enter so completely what must have been his mental states that I could not only understand the situations involved but reach the same decisions and defend his position. I can truthfully say that I lived with Charles thru every stage of his life. Indeed, when I reached the last years, when he was suffering from gout, my imagination was so worked up that I had twinges in my own arms and legs!"

Way of an Honest Novelist.

Being of a frivolous turn of mind, of course, I told Mr. Zara I was glad he had not involved himself too imaginatively in the last days of Charles I. of England, who was beheaded. But seriously, my dears, that is the way an honest novelist works; it is this week's little lesson, freely given, for all those barmy optimists who would like to write, and think they can, because they believe authorship the quick and easy way to fame and fortune.

It was Thiers, the great French historian, I think, who, being complimented on the ease and grace of something he had written, replied: "Ah, yes! The ease cost me many hours of agony and the grace had to be dragged in by the hair of its head."

Pedro and His Sweetheart.

With Portugal in the headlines another story from Tabori is timely, this time a horror story. Wandering thru the Cistercian church of Alcobaca, the correspondent came upon the carved marble sarcophagi of King Pedro I. and his sweetheart, Ines de Castro. They are interred foot to foot, so that on the day of judgment the king's first waking glance may fall on his inamorata. He recalled the legend: Pedro was crown prince and Ines a Spanish lady-in-waiting. But the king's advisors opposed his betrothal to a Spaniard, and Ines was placed in a nunnery. Her lover managed to smuggle some letters to her thru the channel of a little stream—the Fonte des Amores—but in the end Ines was tried for sorcery and executed.

When Pedro became king he took a terrible revenge. He had the body of his sweetheart exhumed, dressed it in royal robes, and seated it on the throne. All who had taken part in her doom were forced to make obeisance to the royal corpse—then ascend the scaffold.

Poe might have done something with that, but he wouldn't have had to do much.

Lazy, Entertaining Story of Animals

Judy Van der Veer has written many books and stories about her ranch and the animals and people she knows so well, but never more delightfully than in this most recent volume. Hers is the quiet art of seeing beauty in everyday life, and translating it in terms that the more harried of us can appreciate.

Manuel Lisa and His Role in U. S. Life

"THOSE WHO GO AGAINST THE CURRENT" by Shirley Seifert. [Lippincott, $3.]

Reviewed by Arthur Frederic Otis.

You may not find the name of Manuel Lisa in your encyclopedia. You will find it in the WPA history of Nebraska, where he is mentioned as the founder of Nebraska. He was a real person, perhaps the greatest in America's final taking over of the vast territory of the Missouri river, altho Lewis and Clark are the only names remembered by the average citizen in this connection.

"Those Who Go Against the Current" is a novel based on the life of Manuel Lisa, and it is a superb novel. In it, Shirley Seifert has done for the Missouri river country what Kenneth Roberts, Van Wyck Mason, and others have done for the pioneer east.

Beginning with the hurricane which overtook Manuel's Spanish parents on the Gulf of Mexico and led to his birth while the hurricane was at its height, the reader is given an early understanding of the Indian influence which reappeared strongly thruout his life. Reared as an aristocrat in Spanish New Orleans, the boy, Manuel, soon showed the talent for trade which took him, at 17, on his first trip up the Mississippi.

Masterfully woven into the early chapters are threads of various patterns which grow as the story develops—his no good younger brother—his fondness for cats, as he earns the right to that first voyage by bringing blue Magdalena aboard to fight rats—Gen. James Wilkinson's traitorous dealings.

Rich in historical significance, this is as much the story of Manuel Lisa, the man, as it is the story of a new world. In its pages you share his tragic disappointment at learning that the infamous brother, Joaquin, has married Manuel's fickle betrothed in New Orleans—and the far greater tragedy resulting from his marrying Polly Chew, whom he rescued from Indian captivity.

His meeting with Meriwether Lewis and William Clark and his aid in outfitting their expedition—his able handling of Wilkinson when that general, involved in the Aaron Burr conspiracy, plotted to deliver the west to a foreign power—his important part in keeping the British from gaining the upper hand among the western Indian tribes during the War of 1812—all these make fascinating reading.

But from the time Mary Hempstead is introduced, the 14 year old daughter of a Revolutionary hero in New London, Conn., you wait for destiny to bring her and Manuel together. This does not happen until near the end of the book's 600 pages, but when it does, Shirley Seifert makes it a moment worth waiting for.

Marshal Henri-Philippe Petain, whose new biography by Francis Martel (Dutton) is reviewed on this page by Paul Engle.

Petain, Prophet of Despair: How He Profited by Defeat

"PETAIN," by Francis Martel. [Dutton, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Paul Engle.

This exceptionally interesting book has one clear purpose: To show that, when Henri-Philippe Petain took over the government of France in June, 1940, and made an armistice with the Germans, it was not chance, but the deliberate culmination of the old general's entire life. The author shows how, at the beginning of the last war, Petain had only the minor position of a colonel who had never fought an armed engagement, of a military man who had never done anything more warlike than instruct in the Ecole de Guerre, who had, even in his teaching, advocated the doctrine of the fixed defense, the static war.

The immense German assault on Verdun demanded a general who could organize a defense which would stop an army superior in tactics and artillery, so the man of negative mind, the man who firmly believed that wars could be won by waging war at a minimum, was placed in command of the army defending the symbolic fort of eastern France. Three hundred and fifty thousand dead poilus built, with their shattered bones, the reputation of Petain.

It was the hero of Verdun who, at a meeting of allied staffs in early 1918, when the Germans had rolled the British and French back toward the channel ports and split them, precisely as Hitler did in 1940, said of Marshal Haig, the British commander—"There is a man who will see his armies defeated in the open field." Petain's attitude of pessimism, of negative war, of placid defense, persisted thruout the '20s and '30s, and found its highest expression in two very popular French creations: the Maginot line, which turned out to be merely a concrete coffin for the French army, and niggardly military budgets, which armed that army with antiquated equipment. Martel then goes on to assert, and to cite facts for his argument, that Petain so despised democratic government, so admired the authoritarian dictatorship across the Rhine, that he never really believed in a war to defeat that dictatorship.

He also believes that Petain's overwhelming egotism, which had suffered thruout his life from always being subordinated to others [to Nivelle, to Foch, etc.], finally found its triumph in Vichy. Martel makes the shrewd observation that it was the essence of Hitler's long campaign of flattery "to persuade the marshal that he could be the victorious leader of a defeated nation." In other words, France's loss of a war was Petain's gain of a life ambition. He cites incidents to prove that Petain really thought that he might procure for France an early, and hence mild, defeat, in preference to prolonging the struggle which would end, if successful, only in the defeat of the reactionary dictatorship he admired and the victory of the popular democracy he distrusted.

Petain's probable connections with the French Fascists [in particular the notorious armed Cagoulards] is suggested, and his dealing with the vicious and corrupt Laval thoroly explained. The end was the no longer pathetic old man's commands to the French forces to fire on American soldiers in North Africa, which prevented the early seizure of Bizerte and necessitated the costly campaign in Tunisia. The book ends with the hope that the allies will not accept the offered hand of the dictator of Vichy when they invade France to throw out the dictator of Berlin.

The book is an admirable exposition of French politics, and to be recommended to all who have wondered about the devious course of that sad country. There are many evidences of the author's violent suspicion of Petain, and his absolute contempt for what he feels is his betrayal of France, but the case he makes is, for me, unarguable.

U. S. Marines Have Situation Well in Hand

"LEATHERNECKS: Our Marines in Fact and Picture," by Rolfe Boswell. [Crowell, $2.50.]

"HE'S IN THE MARINE CORPS NOW," by Josef Israels II. [McBride, $2.50.]

"FIRST TO FIGHT," by Capt. W. P. McCahill. [McKay, $2.50.]

"THE MARINES IN REVIEW," by Norman V. Carlisle. [Dutton, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Walter Simmons.

From the halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli, United States marines will fight their country's battles with fresh pride, for here are four new books about them, all published within a week.

The coincidence is scarcely to be wondered at. Marine gallantry and dash have long inspired the imagination of literary men. The marines provide such rich and gusty material that it is almost impossible to write uninterestingly of them.

The week's output of marine books has a special subsidiary interest, however, because it is also a fascinating study of the authorial mind at work. Here are four men who started at about the same time to accomplish the same objective. How did each author go about his job?

Rolfe Boswell, a New York newspaper man and the father of two previous books, started out to write a thorogoing history of the famous corps, condensed but complete. In a deceptively slim volume he has succeeded well in his purpose. The result is marked with scholarship on every page, and the critical reader searching for boners will find none. Nor has the completeness of the research subdued the color that is the glory of the corps. Every page is quick with excitement. From 1775 to 1943, Boswell points out, the marines have been there first. A marine fired our first shot in the first World war. Marines at Guadalcanal had the first offensive assignment of this war. On Jan. 7, five months later, they had been in continuous action for more than 250 days. Thus today's marines, tougher and better trained, broke the old 223 day record of the 1st division in France 25 years ago.

Here is the best book about the marines that has come off the presses in a long time. It is well illustrated.

Handsome art work and printing give charm to Capt. McCahill's "First to Fight." Tho the text is largely a fond reworking of available publicity material and war communiques, the illustrations by E. Franklin Wittmack are in a class by themselves, and there are useful color plates of marine insignia, medals, and uniforms of the past.

Mr. Israels, too, has largely confined himself to the surface material. But his work assumes a special value when it concentrates on the training course each marine receives. We're able to see how the corps "gets that way."

Hurried writing and too many errors steal some of the punch from Mr. Carlisle's effort. Marines are likely to question the use of 25 mm. guns by Jap snipers on Guadalcanal, as well as the statement that Henderson field was "the last word in airports—runways and all" when it was wrested from the Japs. In one paragraph an officer is spoken of as Maj. Cram; in the next he is unceremoniously demoted to captain.

"Tall Tales They Tell in the Services" has for its authors men from every branch of the services. The Thomas Y. Crowell company, which has announced the book for November publication, selected the tall tales from hundreds of contributions submitted to the Reader's Digest. The book is edited by Sgt. William Davidson, feature writer on Yank magazine.

Warns Against the Centralization of Education

R. A. Millikan Cites Evil of Federal Power

By the Rev. John Evans.

Robert A. Millikan, president of California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, Cal., one of the notable educational philosophers of the present day, has issued a stirring warning against the centralization of the country's educational leadership in the federal goverment.

The senate now is debating a bill which will subsidize secondary education, and this, according to most observers, would achieve government control over what is taught. In his statement, Dr. Millikan said the reason for fighting the present war is very simple: Preservation of free, representative government. He explained that when such a government is founded there lurk two dangers—first, if the country is small, the danger of external aggression; if big and strong like the United States, the rise of internal vice.

"We shall conquer the first foe, for he is now out in the open," Dr. Millikan declared, "but the second is very dangerous, for he has a powerful fifth column."

This fifth column was indicated by the California educator in the words of Congressman Hatton Sumners [D., Tex.], who has pointed to the ever increasing practice of passing local problems to the federal government in Washington.

"For the sake of winning the war, we have had to become very largely, for the time being, a totalitarian state," said Dr. Millikan. "We knew that in war this was inevitable, and soldier pensions and other recompenses are a necessary part of it, but if we retain in peace this otherwise highly centralized totalitarian government, if we do not combat at every opportunity this insidious, this terrible centralizing tendency, and restore, insofar as present conditions make possible, the principle of local self-government, then if history means anything we shall quickly be destroyed by the inner vice of all totalitarian states, and 'our sons will have died in vain.'

"The greatest and most insidious danger lies in my own field, the field of education, which must be kept at all levels practically completely free from the influence of the central government, as it has been free, in the main, in the past. For look at what the control of education by central governments has done in Europe within the last two decades! Precisely as Spinoza 300 years ago said would inevitably happen whenever education got into the hands of the central government, it has substituted for education the indoctrination of whole peoples in the ideologies of the group in power and in the interests of their retention of that power.

"It is that kind of indoctrination for world conquest that has destroyed the souls of great peoples and made two world wars. Your influence, American citizens, can prevent that kind of a catastrophe from happening in the United States. No other educational question is of anything like comparable importance."

Notes of Music and Musicians

By Albert Goldberg

The first soloist of the season appears this week on the Chicago Symphony orchestra's third pair of Thursday-Friday concerts. John Weicher, the orchestra's concertmaster, will mark his 17th appearance as soloist on these programs by playing the Sibelius concerto, a work in which he has not previously been heard. Mr. Defauw will conduct the first Chicago performance of a Dance Suite by Couperin, Strauss. This transcription of clavecin pieces by the French master was made by Strauss some 20 years ago. It is orchestrated for a small ensemble and consists of eight movements, of which four—"Pavanne," "Carillon," "Gavotte" and "Whirling Dance"—will be played by Mr. Defauw. The program opens with Haydn's Symphony in D and ends with the second series of orchestral fragments from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe."

The week at Orchestra hall also includes the opening of the Tuesday afternoon series, at which time Mr. Defauw will conduct Bach's Suite No. 2, in B minor, with flute obbligato by Ernest Liegl, Brahms' Variation on a Theme by Haydn, and Schumann's third or "Rhenish" symphony, in E flat. The Saturday night "Pop" concert also will be conducted by Mr. Defauw, with the program listing Bizet's "Patrie" overture, Beethoven's Seventh symphony, Saint-Saëns "Danse Macabre," Wagner's "Siegfried Idyll," and Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel."

Nathan Milstein, violinist, will be heard in recital on the Sinai Temple Forum series, 4600 South Parkway, Monday at 8:15. His program includes the Vitali Chaconne, Bach's Adagio and Fugue in G minor for unaccompanied violin, Brahms' Sonata in D minor, and Bruch's Concerto in G minor. Albert Hirsch will be at the piano.

Lauritz Melchoir, Wagnerian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, and 14 combined male choruses of Scandinavian extraction will give a concert to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the birth of Edvard Grieg at the Civic Opera house next Sunday, Oct. 31, at 8:15. The chorus of 450 voices will be under the direction of Knute Hansen and will be accompanied by an orchestra composed of 45 Chicago Opera musicians. The program will consist exclusively of Grieg compositions and will include the choruses from "Sigurd Jorsalfar" with Melchior singing the solos, and the piano concerto in A minor, played by Pearl Gran, with Walter Steindel conducting. Mr. Melchior also will sing a group of songs. Proceeds of the concert will be devoted to the Chicago service men's centers.

Naomi Watson, Negro contralto, a native of Quincy, Ill., will give a recital at Kimball Hall this afternoon at 3:30. The program lists old Italian songs by Stradella, Scarlatti and Paisiello, German lieder by Henschel, Strauss, Schubert, Brahms and Schumann, an aria from "Samson and Delilah," and two groups of songs in English. Edgar Nelson will be at the piano.

The Chicago Concert and Opera Guild will present Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" under the direction of Silvio Insana at the Civic theater, next Sunday at 2:15. Leading roles will be taken by Dorthe Paulsen, Joseph Folmer, Lilian Paddor, Frank Lakowski, Giorgio D'Amico, Rena M. Gould, and Jacob Sherakoff.

PRIZE WINNER IS A NOVEL OF DISTINCTION

Middle West Background of New Work

"JOURNEY IN THE DARK," by Martin Flavin. [Harper, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher.

The winner of this year's Harper Novel prize, as coveted a literary award as is bestowed in this country, is a book which is as deeply rooted in our great middle west, as truly in its mood of honesty and straightforward facing of fact as any book which has been written today.

"Journey in the Dark" was written by a man who was brought up in Chicago, went to our public schools and to the University of Chicago and, altho not born in the middle west nor living here now, was molded as child and man into its pattern.

That, I think, is important to remember in reading this memorable novel of middle western life, for the portrait of Sam Braden, the book's hero, could never have been made at the angle from which it is made if any one other than a midwesterner had used the literary camera. Angle is really the wrong word, for this portrait is one of those full-face front views out of which the eyes look straight at you from whatever point you look at it, and seem to follow you wherever you go—eyes that you remember long after you have stopped looking at them.

The hero of "Journey in the Dark," like the hero of John Marquand's distinguished novel, "So Little Time," is a man who has succeeded financially, failed spiritually. By failing I do not mean that these two heroes have become spiritual wrecks or melancholics, or even that they are articulately conscious of not having made of themselves what they wanted to, or even articulately conscious that they have found their ideals unfulfilled. They have both lived thru a period which, whatever any of us wants to call it, has been essentially a period of social revolution. They have both come upon an understanding of their time and themselves thru suffering.

Both novels are as American as the Fourth War Loan, as indigenous to their background as a skyscraper and a tall stalk of corn. Martin Flavin could not conceivably have written "So Little Time." John Marquard could not conceivably have written "Journey in the Dark." And yet these remarkably fine novels have the same quality: they are the result of spontaneous combustion between an intelligent and sensitive observer and his own background. In the ensuing flames the dross of nonessentials is burned out, only the strong ore of reality remains. Mr. Marquand chooses to give that reality a satiric filip. Mr. Flavin's reality is just plain reality, neither sordid nor adorned.

It is important, I think, that two such honest, such different, but such akin novels should have been given us this year—a sign of the times, when we are down to plastic tacks, when our life must be rationed, when our point values must be understood, when we must know what we have to spend spiritually, what we can buy with what we spend, what we have for tomorrow as well as what we had yesterday.

On the face of it, of course, "Journey in the Dark" neither asks nor answers these questions. It is simply the life story of a man who was born in Iowa, desperately poor, became five times a millionaire by

A Chicago Boy Grows Up and Debates Life

"MY DAYS OF ANGER," by James T. Farrell. [Vanguard, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Edith Weigle.

The author of "Studs Lonigan" and "A World I Never Made" writes again of Chicago and of a hot headed young rebel who grew up here. The story is a vivid, realistic account of the sturm und drang period of youth, of the doubting, questioning, experimenting phase thru which most boys pass on the way to maturity.

It is a time of being violently against or vehemently for; it marks the opening up of new worlds of thought and beauty and also of ugliness and disillusionment to the eager, absorbing mind. Danny O'Neill had a passionate desire to learn, to lift himself up in the world. He worked long hours during the day so that he could go to night school and later to the University of Chicago.

There was nothing dull about the classes he attended. He relished the heated debates over ideas and theories and one of the most lively passages in the book is a chapter describing the arguments of his fellow students over Thomas Huxley versus Matthew Arnold. Equally engrossing is the later account of a university group before which Danny arises to expound his ideas about religion.

Danny gives the speech his all and, stepping down at the end, receives several kinds of criticism from professor and students. The atmosphere is supercharged. And the mirth provoking anti-climax occurs when out of this electricity and verbal thunder and lightning a little Miss Gilman goes to the platform and announces coquettishly that the subject of her talk is "A Picnic at the Sand Dunes."

In speaking of this time in Danny's life the author explains "he was learning, but learning only unsettled him, and he didn't know how and why he was learning. He didn't know what he believed any more."

And there were many other episodes concerning politics, the industrial system, sex, and life and death.

Mr. Farrell paints a colorful picture of Chicago in the 1920s. Readers will recognize the near north side bohemia of those days: the Dill Pickle [called the Sour Apple in the story], and the arty men and women who frequented it; the dreary, sordid sections of the south side, and the spacious environs of the university.

Because he feels that to sell your talents and your time to an employer is to become a slave, Danny decides to take the great gamble and try to earn his living by writing. As the book ends he has his first job on a Chicago newspaper and in his mind is his dream of becoming an author.

There is a good deal of strong meat in "My Days of Anger." It seems to this reader that some nasty pictures could have been omitted.

As Prof. Saxon tells Danny, "Frankly, I don't think you'll get anywhere unless you realize that all of humanity doesn't live in the gutter. . . . You write one greasy slab of life after another. The public won't take that. Editors won't buy it."

Sounds reminiscent of the talk aroused by "Studs Lonigan," which, however, the public did "take" and the editors did buy. Danny is not another Studs, but Farrell is still Farrell and his audience will devour every word of his new opus.

Who Will Lead Germany When Peace Returns?

"MEET MR. BLANK, the Leader of Tomorrow's Germany," by R. G. Waldeck. [Putnam's, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Dr. Melchior Palyi.

Who will be the Moses to lead the German people into the Canaan of a peaceful prosperity: The Mr. Blank whom they will, and the allies should trust?

The point Countess Waldeck makes is that the leader of tomorrow's Germany will not be a Socialist, a liberal, a church dignitary, or a refugee. It should be a politically "neutral" burocrat, but he has no "appeal." There is nobody left but a general like Rommel, who has a charming smile [so she says, and she knows something of smiles]. Or preferably a new Talleyrand, and a fat one at that—Hermann Goering, believe it or not. This is said with a lot of entertaining detail about personalities, much of it quite true.

Jane Austen's Sensitivity in a Modern Tale

"THE WALSH GIRLS," by Elizabeth Janeway. [Doubleday Doran, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Kenneth Horan.

The interplay of three different temperaments is the absorbing subject of this first novel. Without self-consciousness, they form a psychological nucleus against the background of a New England has-been town.

William Dean Howells wrote of the small town, but he was more factual than most, and less psychological. Miss Janeway, while her theme is the effect of character on character, resembles Jane Austen more than any other writer, for she is highly observing, and recognizes every thought that lies behind the flick of an eyelash.

Nothing happens in "The Walsh Girls" that is out of the ordinary, but it's like something that has happened in your own family. Each person is familiar to the reader. And all three step out of a background familiar to all of us. The Walsh girls' father was a minister in the small New England town. His elder daughter, Lydia, exactly like him, is a school teacher, while his younger daughter, Helen, pretty, wayward and a little spoiled, went to Germany and married a professor who was killed by the Nazis. She has come back to the old home, and has married George Peterson, the boy next door, who owns a small furniture factory.

It is with Helen and her memories that this long story of one short year is concerned. In her mind remain her father's booming words, and the softer words of her German husband. Before she emerges into the happy woman married to George, these voices of the past take possession of her. There also is the tremulous and insistent voice of Lydia, the typical New Englander, who is always regretting the past, and pushing the future away from her. An unpoetical Emily Dickinson, Lydia will not let herself love the man who loves her, and she embraces her spinsterhood with all the fervor of a anchorite.

The Walsh girls and George, a kindly, blustering husband, struggle thru their imagined difficulties in a New England town that has gone to seed.

All this makes a kind of New England frieze, against which three people struggle for happiness against all their inherited and acquired tendencies. George is the note of hope in all this deluge of psychological despair, a refuge for Helen's unhappiness, a veritable rock of strength and good humor.

The Walsh girls finally reach their separate goals, with Helen's happiness in George and her baby, and with Lydia's discovery of a garage apartment where she can live alone. It is the vapors of the past which have enveloped them all, vapors which nothing but common sense can dispel.

They are the kind of people who should never be allowed to look into old trunks, with their packages of family photogrphs, of ancient wedding dresses, reeking of memories. Mrs. Janeway has described them brilliantly, making a fine etching of all their thoughts and emotions and words. This is her first novel. She is the author of many short stories, and the wife, by the way, of the editor, Eliot Janeway.

Orchids on an Anniversary for Lucky Man Jesse Stuart

By Harry Hansen.

New York.

THE literary merry-go-round was revolving at a great rate the other day when I went to the Hotel Pierre to felicitate Jesse Stuart on his good luck with "Taps for Private Tussie"—the Thomas Jefferson southern award and the choice of the Book of the Month club, which automatically makes his story a best seller on publication. The house of Dutton was doing the honors and paying the bills, and an army of writers, editors, reviewers, and other members of the literary parade was converging on the Pierre, which is a swank hostelry on upper 5th avenue, favored by the names of Hollywood. It was not only a reception for Jesse Stuart; the day was the anniversary of his marriage, and his wife, Naomi Deane, was there, too, wearing orchids. When they decided to get married they learned that it was Oct. 13, so they waited until midnight and then drove over a large part of Greenup county, Kentucky, looking for a minister to marry them in the dawn of Oct. 14. And they live in the valley Stuart has written about so often.

Recalling a Debate.

The affair had brought out many who are rather choosey about their cocktails and friends were greeting one another while literary or political enemies were slipping in and out without the slightest friction. The first man I saw was John Gould Fletcher, the poet, who is staying a month in New York. Mrs. Fletcher also was there; they had visited the MacDowell colony at Peterborough, N. H., during the summer and would return in November to their home near Little Rock, Ark. Mr. Fletcher and I were associated on a program at Miami university a year ago. He recalled with amusement that he once participated in a debate with Jesse Stuart at Indiana university and said he was completely swamped. I can well believe it, for Mr. Fletcher is a quiet spoken, deliberate man, and Mr. Stuart is volatile and energetic, a Kentucky story teller of stature.

Edgar Lee Masters came over and the two men recalled their meetings in Chicago when Harriet Monroe was printing their poems and Mrs. William Vaughn Moody was providing a forum for poets at Le Petit Gourmet and giving them a good meal besides. Then Malcolm Cowley came up to greet Fletcher; he is a poet from the blue Juniata, but in recent years has been a literary critic. Another poet, [illegible] Sullivan, came with Mr. Masters.

A Pair of Opposites.

I am always interested and sometimes amused to see men with the most intense animosities meet at these literary gatherings; they may be critical of one another in print, but a party is never disturbed by personal debates. The Dutton party brought out Isadore Schneider, who has been active in Communist literary affairs, and Ben Stolberg, who has been in the thick of anti-Communist battles. Isadore is now literary editor of Soviet Russia Today and Ben seems to have recovered from the libel suit that Jerome Davis brought against him. Isadore is a poet, too, but also a mild mannered gentleman with many friends; Ben is a close mouthed fellow who plays his cards close to his vest.

The radio was well represented, and I had a chat with Miss Margaret Cuthbert, who has been indispensable to NBC since the days when it had only one station, WEAF; Lewis Titterton of the same organization was also present; at one time he dramatized Jesse Stuart's "Beyond Dark Hills" on the air. Charles Driscoll, who wrote "Kansas Irish," was gathering information for his syndicated column; he succeeded O. O. McIntyre. Ben Lucien Burman told me that having made his report on the Free French in Africa a few seasons ago he is now writing a series of stories about the quaint characters of the Mississippi river for a magazine; Ben wrote "Big River to Cross" and "Steamboat Round the Bend" and a lot of river stories.

It's amazing how literary critics, reviewers, and editors of book reviews rise to the bait when there's a party on; you'll always find a good representation and I can't say that they hover around the bar. J. Donald Adams of the Times was just back from his lecture in Chicago; Albert Hubbell is now with Newsweek. I had a chat with Sterling North and his wife, Gladys; they feel they are lucky because they have found just the place they want in New Jersey—a colonial house near the Revolutionary camping grounds at Morristown, where Washington crossed the Delaware, and 18 acres on which to farm. Many New York writers prefer Connecticut, but New Jersey has much to commend it.

Jesse in the Money.

A literary agent told me that "Taps for Private Tussie" has been sold to the Ladies Home Journal for a one-shot publication and it looks as if Jesse is in the money at last. He has written almost entirely about his Kentucky community. Many of his short stories have appeared in Esquire. When Jesse received a wire from New York that his book had been chosen by the Book of the Month club he was plowing his field, but whether he was using the bull tongue plow that he celebrated in his first book of sonnets I cannot say. At any rate, like Gen. Putnam, he left the plow and team right in the field and rushed to the house to welcome the glad tidings. It is quite likely he will be in the army soon. He has an infant child, but feels he ought to join. I asked his wife whether, like other Kentuckians, he was a good shot. "Not at all," she replied. "He hates to kill anything. He sometimes promises to get a squirrel for dinner and goes out for one, and returns empty handed." But I am sure that, whatever service he joins, Jesse Stuart will be a credit to his country.

A Delay for Bemelmans.

Ludwig Bemelmans' new story, "Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep," had been sent out to all the booksellers and was to appear on Monday, Oct. 25, when the Viking Press received word that the Book of the Month club judges had just placed it on the reserve list. That means that eventually they will distribute it. Of course, the publisher is both embarrassed and pleased. He has to cancel the publication this fall, but when the book is issued later it will not only have the Book of the Month club order of over 300,000 copies, but the added volume of orders that always come to bookstores as a result of such a choice. Prof. George Santayana's "Persons and Places," the first volume of his biography, will be a January Book club selection, paired with E. Arnot Robertson's "The Signpost."

War's Effect on U.S. Family and Social Life

"AMERICAN SOCIETY IN WARTIME," edited by William Fielding Ogburn. [University of Chicago Press, $2.50].

"MORALS IN WARTIME," edited by Victor Robinson, M. D. [Foundation Publishers, $3.]

Reviewed by Tremaine McDowell.

Escapists who evade the responsibilities of 1943 by devoting themselves to speculations concerning the post-war world will not find it necessary to read "American Society in Wartime." Something may be gleaned from it by realists who seek to know the past and the present of America as possible indices to the shape of the future. Something, but not everything, for the shape of our present is still obscure, even to professional sociologists.

The book is made up of lectures delivered in 1942-'43 at the University of Chicago on the Charles R. Walgreen Foundation. Drawing on data from the first World war and from the early months of the present conflict, 11 professors of sociology [nine from the University of Chicago] report on a wide range of topics.

Almost every phase of population change, for example, has been affected by this war, but not as sharply as the ill-informed public has assumed. The family is moving farther away from its older status as an authoritarian institution toward a democratic companionship based on affection, compatibility, and common interests. Social science, the experts tell us, is now doing even more for soldiers than for civilians.

The city of the future, it is asserted, can be remade if advantage is taken of newly won opportunities. In the American town, "war, and only war, creates a type of sacred symbol system which we are supposed to treasure as a democratic people and which strongly influences the whole life of the community and greatly contributes to the lasting unity of the group"—specifically, "the rites for the dead" celebrated on Memorial day.

The 11 lectures are inevitably uneven in tone and in quality. That on the town, quoted above, is evidently written by an anthropologically minded student of religious mythology. The lecture on "The Role of the Citizen" has a pleasant antiquarian flavor, citing James Russell Lowell on the Mexican war, Father Abram Ryan on the Civil war, and Herbert Hoover on problems of the present moment.

A more exact title for "Morals in Wartime" would be "Prostitution in Wartime," as this is the theme of the articles here assembled from a variety of sources by Dr. Victor Robinson, an old hand at semi-scientific editing. Not sufficiently clinical to be valuable to physicians and not sufficiently sensational to sell well, the volume may have difficulty in finding its public. For the average reader, a well organized Walgreen lecture on the subject would be more helpful than this miscellany.

Nine Years' Research Charts Nation's Great Western Trek

"THE WAKE OF THE PRAIRIE SCHOONER," by Irene D. Paden. [Macmillan, $3.]

Reviewed by Kenneth C. Kaufman.

A few years ago Irene D. Paden, with her husband and young son, exploring a spring in northern Kansas, came across a fragment of rock bearing the words, "J. F. Reed 1846." Time rolled back almost a hundred years; for this Reed was one of the Donner party, recently the most publicized of all the westbound caravans. In Nevada he had the misfortune to kill a man, was banished from the train, reached California, and when death and horror overtook the party in the high Sierra, he headed a rescue squad and went back thru 30 foot drifts to save some lives. A man by any standard. Discovering that stone is a typical incident of the Padens' search for the California-Oregon trail.

The great overland route by which America went west was formed of several tributaries from the east, and, once over the Rockies, it divided again into two main branches, one to Oregon along the Snake and Columbia, the other via Great Salt lake and the Humboldt to California. There were also innumerable cutoffs and alternate routes. In Mrs. Paden's own phrase it had more loose ends than a horse's tail in a high wind.

The Padens spent parts of nine years retracing the trail. Her husband, primarily interested in cartography, has prepared a complete set of detailed trail maps, while she herself did an immense amount of reading and note taking in libraries from the Missouri to the coast.

Here again the Americans come out of the woods to the great rendezvous of Independence, yoke their six and eight ox teams or hitch up their kicking, biting, bawling Spanish mules, pop their 20 foot rawhide lashes over bottomless bogs of rain soaked prairie, ford or ferry the bankfull streams, shiver in rains and steam in the sun. They meet the trains from St. Joseph in central Kansas, converge on the Mormon pushcarts and wagons in central Nebraska, and together follow the wanderings of the Platte thru weary miles. They run buffalo, agonize over children lost or killed in stampedes or stolen by Indians, die of cholera, drown in swollen streams, make love, marry, are born, die, and are buried in unmarked graves along or under the trail. They stand night guards in blizzards, throw away precious heirlooms to lighten the wagons, hack their way over thick forested mountains, heave their wagons up impossible cliffs, drink alkali water and burn in the desert, watch their stock die, and stumble on on foot. But most of them get thru and they are carrying America to the Pacific in their rumbling tepees on wheels.

The work is, so far as I have been able to check, almost flawless as regards historical fact. I was annoyed by Mrs. Paden's tendency to pun and wisecrack, giving an effect of flippancy to what should be instinct with the grandeur of the greatest pageant in American history. And I was astonished that she seems to know nothing at all about Indians, apparently taking her information whole from the emigrant accounts.

Meeker-Keith Wedding Is a Simple Affair

By Cousin Eve.

The Cochran-Hemingway wedding at St. Chrysostom's was the large church ceremony last week and Sidney Meeker's marriage to Lt. Frederick Keith in New York, the small one. Sidney is the only daughter of Mrs. Lawrence Meeker and her husband is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edson Keith of Sarasota, Fla. Theirs was a simple ceremony, followed by a reception for relatives and close friends. The Meekers went on from Chicago and the Keiths came up from Florida for the great occasion. Travel is so difficult nowadays, that only the few jaunt forward and back to weddings.

The new Mrs. Frederick Keith is a brilliant girl who finished at Vassar before setting the wedding day. She is pretty, with rosy cheeks and brown curly hair. Her bridal dress of white satin, of the kind that stands alone, was worn originally many years ago by Miss Louise Ackerman when she was married to George W. Meeker. It has served since for the wedding of one of the Forgan girls, slight enough to wear it, who was a granddaughter of Mrs. Meeker.

Freddie Keith was brought up in old Prairie avenue and like his bride is brilliant as well as studious. The Edson Keiths belonged to our local "cave dwellers" and Nettie Keith, small and chic, was the last person one would think of living so many years in Florida. The Honore Palmers, however, have done the same and there is quite a colony there of ex-Chicagoans.

Eleanor Cochran's wedding to Louis Lee Hemingway Friday afternoon had all the dash and romance of a war time ceremony. The ushers, nearly all of them wore navy blue or khaki, had their work cut out for them as the church was quite full. It was a beautiful wedding, yet simple in a way—we all know how deceptive simplicity can be, especially in these times. There were no flowers except the white ones on the altar and the church decorations were trailing delicate vines and candle light. There was a program of organ music, and just before the Lohengrin bridal chorus came rippling over the keys, the organist played a composition by the bridegroom. It was a pastoral plaintive, a little wistful and sad.

Dark rich red was the theme color that day. Mrs. Hemingway wore it, Eleanor Cochran, mother of the bride, wore it with sables and pink orchids, and the bridesmaids wore it. There were seven maids, and their frocks were full skirted velvet, cut square at the neck with bouquets of pink chrysanthemums. They were Nancy Cochran and Mrs. Donald Keefe, the bridegroom's sister, Ann Ryerson, Lee Cudahy, Dudley Winston, Diana Hill, and Shirley Hopkins. One and all they were tall, slim, and pretty, with hair flowing in medieval bobs, charminig features.

Then the bride! There was youth and beauty veiled delightfully in clouds of white tulle, with a mere glimpse of the full skirted supple satin that sheathed her, and the bridal bouquet of white exotics.

A reception followed at the Casino with all the excitement and fanfare of a big party, a line two abreast at the first large wedding of the season. Mrs. Cochran with Mr. Hemingway headed the line standing in the classic Casino lounge with a rococo background of lace draperies and turtle doves.

This club, so beautifully planned years ago, stands the test of time better than any other I know. The bridal buffet set out in the Jade Fountain room, had the same delicate effect, an all over cloth of lace mesh, wax candles in silver sconces and a two story bride cake.

The fashion nowadays at big parties is to be plainly dressed, and if you must be ebullient, let it burst out at the top. Say it with your hat. By and large there were fewer crazy hats than usual that day and the women who looked especially well seemed to be in black. Mrs. Morris Johnston, a perennial beauty, was fresh as a rose in a tailleur. The two sisters, Mrs. Laurance Armour and Mrs. Clive Runnels, were visions of loveliness in black with very small hats. And Mrs. Charles Goodspeed's short black frock, perfectly plain with short sleeves and a little black hat, recalled the old French saying, "You can't go wrong in a black dress." Mrs. Seymour Wheeler's chapeau was a becoming little oddity of many colored feathers. Guests sat grouped at small tables round the ballroom oval and saw the young dance; among them were the gallant ushers, some wearing uniforms, others in mufti. They were Ensign Robert FitzWilliams, Sgt. Henry Faurot III., W. France Anderson Jr., J. Gardner Fabian, and Pvt. David Baldwin.

For women who are politically minded, there is a tremendous luncheon going forward next Thursday at the Hotel La Salle, arranged by the Chicago Woman's Republican club. Mrs. Jacob Baur will preside that day and her own guests, invited to meet Miss Vivian Kellem, will fill two tables. Miss Kellem, it seems, is a sensational speaker, besides being young and beautiful. She was heard recently in Chicago at a dinner given by the Illinois Manufacturers' association. She is an economist and was runner-up in the Republican congres-

Chicago Host to Meeting of Jewish Women

By Irene Steyskal.

The year was 1917. In Chicago, the city of its origin, the National Council of Jewish Women assembled delegates from all parts of the country to discuss, in triennial convention, the problems of war that faced the nation and to chart a course of action for the alleviation of the aftermath of suffering foreseen in that day.

November will find council history repeated. Delegates representing 65,000 members in 215 branches thruout the United States and Canada again will assemble for Chicago's second triennial meeting with war again dominating the scene. The convention opens Sunday Nov. 7, and continues thru Thursday in the Drake hotel.

The spirit of the assembly is epitomized in an announcement from the convention committee that Thomas Mann will address the delegates. The world famous writer, self-exiled from his native Germany, will speak at the evening session on the opening day.

Racial and political persecutions have brought into prominent focus one phase of the council's five point program which will be given special attention at the convention. That is its service to the foreign born. Befriending the newcomer in this land, guiding him toward naturalization, helping to integrate him into the American way of life, and educating him to the responsibilities and privileges of citizenship—this is a major philanthropy so far-reaching in its effect that government immigration agencies have come to regard the council in the light of an unofficial but important and dependable collaborator.

A special session of the convention is to be given to discussion of service to the foreign born, and one of the guest speakers at that meeting will be Earl G. Harrison, commissioner of immigration and naturalization, whose address is scheduled under the title, "Your Government and Our Foreign Born."

Mrs. Maurice L. Goldman of San Francisco is national president of the council and will be in charge of all general sessions. The Canadian division will be represented by its president, Mrs. J. J. Jacobs.

Under war conditions the work of the council's contemporary Jewish affairs committee takes on added significance, and special interest attaches to the Tuesday morning session of the convention at which Mrs. Albert J. May of New York, chairman of that committee, and Mrs. Arthur Brin of Minneapolis, Minn., chairman of a committee on international relations and peace, will report. Action will be taken at the session on resolutions affecting the status of Jewry in the postwar world.

The only social event of the five day meeting will be a war time supper on Wednesday night in observance of the golden anniversary of the council. The supper will be the occasion of a memorial tribute to the founder, the late Mrs. Hannah Greenebaum Solomon, distinguished citizen of Chicago, remembered for her civic leadership and philanthropies.

Mrs. Solomon was one of the women who in 1893 led in the organization of the World's Parliament of Religions, held at the World's Columbian Exposition, and it was her participation in that event which revealed to her the need for a central council of Jewish women and set her to the task of organizing it.

Determined upon strict adherence to war restrictions, the local committees arranging for the anniversary supper have enlisted the aid of Dr. Adelaide Spohn, head of the Elizabeth McCormick foundation war nutrition department and Chicago chairman of the war nutrition program, to prepare a menu made up entirely of nonrationed foods.

Concurrent with the parent organization's meeting the National Council of Jewish Juniors will hold its 13th biennial convention. Never before have the juniors met with the senior organization. Presiding over the junior assembly will be Miss Marian Schuman of Chicago. Miss Schuman is the national president of the Junior council, while Miss Frances Lawrence heads its Chicago section.

Fashions as I See Them

By Judith Cass

A capacity audience turned out to welcome "The Army Play by Play" to the Studebaker theater, and in addition to the army uniforms on stage there were plenty in the seats. Whereas the stage uniforms seldom showed a rank higher than that of sergeant, the lobby bristled with gold stars and silver eagles during the intermissions. Mrs. Loyal Davis, in a bright red wool suit, accompanied her husband, now a full colonel, who is at home after 13 months overseas. Mrs. Wayne King, petite and brunette, in a gray tailored suit and matching beanie trimmed with an upstanding curlique of the same gray, walked hand in hand down the center aisle with Maj. King. Mrs. Robert A. Cavenaugh, in a short black dress and mink jacket, with her hat in hand, supervised the members of the Service club who were selling souvenir programs, and then joined Capt. Cavenaugh in front and center seats. Miss Nancy Davis was one of the pretty young women collecting money for the Army Emergency Relief thru the program sale. She was wearing a dinner gown that consisted of a white lace top and black velvet skirt edged in lace, with a string of pearls as her only jewelry. Miss Sonia Henie, who was the star that appeared on stage in one of the plays, slipped into the theater so quietly that she almost escaped notice. She was wearing a beaded short black dress, a flaring black caracul coat, and an unusual headdress, a sort of black Spanish comb with a miniature black lace mantilla falling from it, and touches of turquoise ribbon adding a flash of color. The most brilliant costume at the theater appeared on stage during that same play, "Button Your Lip." It was the flaming red dressing gown, draped like a Grecian toga, in which Pvt. Eugene Erwin appeared all too briefly en route to his morning shower in the army barracks in which the scene was laid. Next in brilliance was the scarlet low cut short dress which Mrs. Eugene Howard wore under a mink coat and sequinned pancake beret.

Mrs. E. Gardner Counselman.

The recent wedding of Miss Roberta Bosworth to Lt. [j. g.] E. Gardner Counselman was an all-white ceremony in the Highland Park Trinity Episcopal church. The bride's white satin gown was designed on simple lines, and a little half-hat held the heirloom lace veil which a family friend, Mrs. James A. Lytle, had loaned her for the occasion. The bridal bouquet was of white orchids tied with sprays of tiny white chrysanthemums on spray ribbons. The attendants wore white off-the-shoulder gowns of taffeta and carried garlands of ivy with the exception of the matron of honor, Mrs. George Neiley Jr. of New London, Conn., whose bouquet was centered with gardenias. In a pretty little chapel overlooking the ocean at Norfolk, Va., Miss Beverly Roach, daughter of the Edward A. Roaches of Highland Park, was married to Lt. [j. g.] Frederick Kent Blatchford on Oct. 16. The hastily arranged ceremony was a charming one, tho held far from home, and the blonde bride was becomingly gowned in a dress of pale blue wool and a little matching hat trimmed with blue feather flowers. Her bouquet was of pale lavender orchids. Her younger sister, Patsy, as maid of honor, was in paler blue wool, with a flower trimmed brown hat. Warren Shoemaker of the navy, who happened to be in Norfolk, served as best man, and the wedding guests included all of the bridegroom's PT boat squadron members with the exception of one who was lost at Guadalcanal. Three of them were accompanied by their brides. A reception and dinner followed at the Officers' club, and Lt. Blatchford and his bride now are at home in a little Norfolk apartment whose sunporch is right on the ocean. Presiding at a recent meeting of the Woman's Symphony orchestra board, Mrs. Albert Ullrich wore a black crepe gown flashing with jet sequins, a motif that was repeated in her jet sequin skull cap. Another of the board members, Mrs. Hugo Dalmar, was smartly turned out in a brown crepe afternoon dress with an ecru lace vest, against which hung a chain of gold filigree beads.

Book Award Committee to Discuss Task

The award committee, that industrious group responsible for discharging the primary responsibility assumed by the Friends of American Writers toward aspiring authors, will reveal its inner working methods next Wednesday to the entire membership and the presidents and delegates of sustaining clubs. Its members will give the entire program at a tea meeting at 1:30 o'clock in the Cordon at the Fine Arts building.

Mrs. Francis D. Howard. [Underwood & Underwood.]

It is the task of the award committee to read the year's output of work by American writers and select the outstanding book for the substantial money award given by the Friends annually.

Last year's award of $750 went to Kenneth S. Davis for his "In the Forests of the Night." Mrs. Francis D. Howard will review that book for the assembly Wednesday, and Mrs. Charles H. Stressenreuter will tell the whys of its selection by the committee, explaining the points of evaluation upon which a book is judged.

The program also will include a commentary on news in the literary world by Mrs. William Irving [Alice Sheldon] Clock.

Mrs. Thomas F. Carlton will head the hostess committee for the afternoon, and her corps of assistants will include Mrs. Charles W. Anderson, Mrs. Milton G. Gage, and Mrs. Edward M. Miller. Presiding at the tea tables will be Mrs. Stressenreuter and Mrs. George Burnett Van Buren, both former presidents of the organization.

Another group active in the fine arts field, the 1st district of the Illinois Federation of Music Clubs, is gathering this afternoon in the Woman's City club suite in the Fine Arts building for a program meeting designated in compliment to past presidents of all associated groups. As district chairman, Mrs. James Allen Young will preside, but that portion of the meeting focusing upon the guests will be conducted by Mrs. Walter Flandorf, district chairman of the Past Presidents assembly.

Mrs. James Allen Young. [Merrill Chase-Town House Photo.]

Mrs. Merritt M. Ranstead, state chairman of the assembly, will speak.

Music for the afternoon will be provided by members of the Braille Musical club, a group composed entirely of blind musicians and readers. Henrietta Nolan will play violin selections; William Curtis will be heard in a piano group, and Marian Hotch will give a reading. Miss Kate Atwood, the club's new president, will attend as a special guest. The immediate past president of the Braille club is Miss Laura E. Anderson, who is an active member of the district board. Miss Anderson and her Seeing-Eye dog, Ginger, are a familiar duo to clubs thruout the federation.

Prefacing the 3:30 o'clock program, the district managers will have a conference at 2:30 o'clock for the completion of plans for a "federation frolic" to be given Saturday night in the Cordon. The entertainment will be a benefit to raise money for district war service activities, principal of which is the purchase of phonograph recordings to be sent to military outposts in Alaska, the Aleutians, Iceland, and northwest Canada.

Mrs. Richard T. Hillyard will be presiding hostess at tea at the conclusion of today's program.

The Renaissance is meeting in the club rooms of the Art institute tomorrow for a program and tea. Mrs. Joseph F. Goss will present Mrs. Edward L. Middleton in a book review program, and Mrs. Edwin Schulz will dispense tea time hospitality. Mrs. William J. Holm is president of the group.

The Casino was bubbling over with French people Monday night, invited to a party given in their honor by the combined Community and War Fund drives. The party was motivated from Washington by Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, who has distinguished French ancestry, and who owns a very old Norman house in France, the Abbaye de Ste. Marie, near Evreux, now occupied by a German. It was Mrs. Dewey who selected the charming ballroom of the Casino, chose Mrs. W. R. Kirk as chairman of the evening and conceived the idea of the tri-couleur invitations, which are the best and smartest looking things of the sort seen in a long time. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cummings gave a dinner before the party in honor of the speaker, Capt. Pierre Goube, chaplain of the French military mission at Washington, and M. and Madame Henri de Lagenest, a young couple, who may possibly be sent here later on in the consular service.

Mrs. Kirk has never been identified with French affairs in Chicago, or with any of the 14 French societies attending the reception. Therefore she was regarded as having an unbiased viewpoint, as well as ability as a presiding officer. Certainly the audience appreciated her radiant appearance, the dashing frock, a black sheath bound in sparkling gold sequins, the rose red scarf at the throat, the upswept blonde coiffure.

The soiree was conducted in English, more's the pity, altho M. L'Aumonier, Capt. Goube, wound up his address most eloquently in French. Those of us seated in the rear had trouble in understanding the padre's recital of his life as a prisoner of war under the Germans. We would hear the exciting word "Gestapo," then miss the context. My charming neighbor said, "I wish we could understand him, it must be wonderful." But the thing Capt. Goube said at the end which everybody could grasp because he spoke with the utmost feeling, was: "Disunity among you will lose the war. Nothing could please Hitler more."

Among the friends of France seated at various vantage points in the hall, and mingling later round a vast punch bowl in the room adjoining were Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. George Ranney, Dr. and Mrs. Otho Ball, Miss Emily Larned, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cummings, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Winston, Col. and Mrs. Clark Lawrence, Mrs. Orville Taylor, who had a small dinner beforehand at the Casino, Mrs. Miller Dixon, Mrs. David Peck Jr., Mrs. Charles Goodspeed, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster, Mrs. Moise Dreyfus, Mrs. Donald McPherson, Mrs. Walter B. Wolf, and Mrs. Ira N. Morris. Mrs. Norris closed her place, Eagle Rock, at Manchester, Mass., and is in Chicago for a short stay. She is a member of the New York Philharmonic association, and was present at the opening a fortnight since of the Boston Symphony, with Mr. Koussevitsky, its director, conducting. Her trip to Chicago at the moment was to hear the opening concert of the Chicago Symphony and to find how she liked our new conductor, Desire Defauw.

Indeed, Mrs. Morris thinks nothing of traveling to Minneapolis, Duluth, and Cincinnati from New York to hear a good concert and see how she rates the conductor.

It was she who brought the news from Manchester that the John Alden Carpenters, now happily established in their own house at Beverly, may not be home until Thanksgiving. They were living in a country house they liked very much, indeed, when the owners decided not to lease it any more. They would sell but wouldn't rent. So Mr. Carpenter promptly bought the pretty place and gave it to his wife for a birthday present. Now Ellen Carpenter is engaged in making a garden after her own heart, and her days are passed digging, delving, and conferring. Just across the road, at Beverly, Col. and Mrs. George T. Langhorne have been spending the summer in a small house and are remaining on until November.

The Carpenters gave up their town house last spring, a gray stone Gothic at Lake Shore drive and Bellevue place. They were moved in a very de luxe manner, while they sojourned happily at Sarasota, to a beautifully made over apartment at 1550 North State parkway.

During the summer this building was sold and its occupants must now perforce move out, while it is refashioned into the small suites so much in vogue. Among the people who thus find themselves out in the cold world in addition to the Carpenters are Mrs. Mark Cummings and Mrs. George R. Nichols.

Henri Bernstein, the French playwright, has been living in New York for three years. Besides working for "France Forever" he has passed into the circulation of New York society, and you hear of him at cocktail routs and luncheons among the literati. From time to time the Leander McCormicks mention Mr. Bernstein, who they previously knew in Paris and find a good companion. Now Bernstein is coming here to speak at the Foreign Council on "The Future of France" on Thursday at the Sherman House and on Saturday at the Alliance.

Renee and Leander McCormick have given Chicago the go-by this season and have taken an apartment on East 66th street, New York. Both McCormicks have become terrifically literary in the past years, and each has a new book awaiting publication.

Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney celebrated her 80th birthday a couple of years ago, yet her zest for life's good things continues. She dresses smartly, plays excellent bridge, and left earlier than usual for Hot Springs in order to see the Windsors, Wallis and Edward. Quite a group of Lake Forest women had agreed to meet at Hot Springs in October; they were Mrs. William P. Martin, Mrs. Donald McLennan, Mrs. Mark Cummings, Mrs. Bernard J. Rogers, Mrs. McBirney, and Mrs. Allen Haines of New York, all great bridge players.

Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Morton left Monday for Hot Springs and have their usual cottage in the hotel compound.

We are wonderfully fashion conscious at the moment! The least little novel slant on anything creates a stir. At the St. Luke's fashion show there was a bride in pale blue satin and tulle. Wednesday at the 28 Room fashion show for the Opera Guild there was the pink satin bride despite the old ditty:

> "The spirits will sink
> Of the bride who wears pink."

This Opera Guild show, very elaborate and heavily patronized, began three-quarters of an hour late, so that patrons who were going to early dinners that are rife this fall had to miss half the show. They also had to miss the beautifully prepared tea or cocktails and the speech of Mrs. James McMillan, guild president. The Opera Guild, it seems, is bigger and better than ever, in spite of having no opera this year. But we have a navy, and the proceeds of "Non-Priorities of 1944" at Marshall Field & Co. will go toward a music room for convalescents at Great Lakes.

The early dinner that was going forward on the north side was Mrs. Clement's party on Lake Shore drive. Allan Clement had been down in Illinois on a duck shoot and not only were there to be ducks for dinner but he was going to cook them. With a chef's cap on his head, Mr. Clement prepared the entire repast after giving the kitchen staff a holiday. Sometimes, if the guests are very, very good, he allows them to come into the kitchen and watch him at his work. Makes one hungry to think about it.

Mrs. Hutchins, Shopen Exhibit Fine Drawings

By Eleanor Jewett.

One of the most attractive exhibits to be seen this month is that at the Roullier Galleries, Fine Arts building, where Maude Phelps Hutchins has an intriguing group of drawings in the little hall and Kenneth Shopen has a glittering array of landscapes in vivid greens and blues in the large gallery. It is a satisfying show because the two factors are so intensely opposite. Mrs. Hutchins with a deft pencil contributes charming bits of assorted anatomy, including an engaging dash at a portrait head of Mr. Hutchins, and Kenneth Shopen goes blithely along a familiar path and sweeps into view lake, mountains, trees, cottages, boats, and clouds with an irresistible felicity of gesture.

Mr. Shopen is first and foremost concerned with decorative quantities in his water colors. They are gay, colorful, and dashing. A summery mood pervades them all. The landscapes hold together beautifully and the eye ranges over pleasing planes of color and construction in each painting. A neighbor happened to put a huge jar of flowers on the post at the foot of his steps and the artist in Mr. Shopen saw his chance and made out of the jar of flowers a tree and the sky beyond one of the nicest things in the entire show.

Practically all the water colors are landscapes, but that by no means denies them variety. They are as varied as the country we used to pass thru when gasoline and rubber were not as precious as they are today. Each turn of the road gave something new; each wind blew a different cloud thru a different sky and rustled a different leaf on a different tree. Mr. Shopen has [we would say] painted in Vermont, for his mountains with their mists and gray clouds have the feel of Vermont, but also he has painted nearer to home, and several of the landscapes have an Illinois or Wisconsin touch. Whatever state they were painted in matters little, however; the chief thing is that the landscapes are well done, boldly treated, fresh, vivid, and alive—pictures, in short, to live with and gain much pleasure from.

In the first gallery Miss Roullier has hung three delightful little paintings by Salcia Bahnc, who this winter is teaching drawing and color at the Art institute. The color in Miss Bahnc's three paintings is delightful. Two of the pictures are in pastel and the other in oil. The oil is a portrait of her little son, about 9, a simple head of a young boy with a tiny cap perched as far back on his hair as it will ride. There is a feeling of France in the painting, which is not strange, as Salcia Bahnc and her son spent a number of years in Paris, just getting out in time to escape the Nazis. The pastels are imaginative groups of, in each case, a woman and little child, delicious in color and tender in sentiment.

The outstanding event of the coming week is the opening on Wednesday, with the 65th annual reception from 3 to 6 o'clock, of the 54th annual exhibition of American Paintings and Sculpture in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. Recent paintings by Edward Hopper will be a single feature. The exhibition will be open to the public on Thursday.

There is in the school lobby of the Art institute an interesting exhibit of work by members of the Art institute faculty. Edouard Chassaing shows the sculptured head, in plaster, of Ernest Heitkamp. Edgar Rupprecht has an oil painting of a back yard scene with a line full of freshly washed clothes swinging like gaily colored flowers in the dazzling sun. A study of two figures, "The Meeting," is by Andrea Kaufman. Elmer A. Forsberg presents a virile portrait in his half-length figure of a rugged Old Timer.

Kenneth Shopen, whose exhibit at the Roullier gallery is such a success, is represented by a water color, "The Sheriff's House." Edmund Giesbert is showing a Mexican street scene and Charles Willimovski also has gone to Mexico for his material and offers a picturesque harbor scene. Willard Smyth offers a study in abstract design; Boris Anisfeld is represented by a richly colored carnival scene, full of movement and light. Laura Van Pappelendam has a charming view of one of the sides of her home in Keokuk, Ia., with the vine covered garage beside the house. Hubert Ropp, now acting dean of the Art institute school, shows one of the nicest paintings in the show, a portrait of his daughter, whom last we remember as jumping rope when her father enticed her to be his model; but this later portrait shows the little girl has grown up and the rope jumping days are far behind her.

The American Artists Group, 106 7th avenue, New York, has published its annual group of Christmas cards early this year and already the new cards are ready for purchasers. There are a number of attractive cards in the new series. Perhaps the most delightful is the dark blue one with a Christmas tree indicated by a scattering of ornaments and a thin line, and around its base a procession of angels walking in single file, each waving a tiny flag of an allied country. It is by Tina Prentiss, and she is to be warmly congratulated.

Another attractive card is by Ricki Richardson and is of a young Madonna and Child with three angels fluttering about them and a little dove with an olive branch in its beak walking toward the Madonna. The color scheme is green and gold. An effective victory card is of a large white dove planing to earth with two red bands streaming in a V back and up from her beak, which also holds a spray of olive. Dale Nichols has contributed a wintry design of cliffs and snow and two skiers, definitely Decemberish. Alfred Owles had the air force in mind when he drew his stirring group of planes in flight. Christmas on the farm, back home, stirred Gilmer Petroff to draw the heart warming "R. F. D. Brightens the Landscape"; each rural delivery box is crowded with gay packages above a floor of snow.

Few, probably, will enjoy the card by Lionel Reiss which was awarded a first prize of $500. Christ is shown with uplifted hand walking over a world crowded with German atrocities. Misery and horror rub shoulders; concentration camps, refugees, the shooting of hostages and the torture of others make a mosaic against which the figure of Jesus is an anachronism. Not the tidings of Bethlehem but the cry of anguish should be written in the greeting: "My God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" As a Christmas card, the conception fails; as an indictment it stands. And yet, perhaps, a symbol is intended: "I am the light of the world." At all events this first choice sets one to thinking.

The gay little flag waving angels of Tina must not be forgotten, however. They are tops, and so this year's contribution by the American Artists Group is another signal success.

"AUDREY AND NAUGHNY," by Winnifred Pleimling

Winnifred Pleimling contributes one of the most important paintings, a portrait of a young girl and her cat, found in the current South Side Art association exhibit in the Club Women's bureau, Mandel Brothers. Mrs. Pleimling is well known in Chicago art circles for the verve and zest with which she approaches anything paintable. She exhibits at the Art institute, the Findlay galleries, the Chicago galleries, and with various societies. She has done a great deal to promote art in Chicago, working with Chauncey McCormick and the late Charles Peterson.

Pan-Hellenic Society Plans Meeting Here

Delegates of the 21 women's Greek letter fraternities that comprise the National Panhellenic congress will focus attention on war time programs affecting the nation's university and college campus life when they arrive on Saturday at the Medinah club for the organization's 28th biennial meeting. Three officers of each of the member fraternities, which have chapters located on university and college campuses thru out the country, will be in three day session, with conferences confined solely to business and panel discussions. Social functions this year are being eliminated entirely.

Mrs. M. C. Burnaugh, Beta Sigma Omicron of Chicago, is congress chairman; Mrs. George Cunningham, Phi Omega Pi of Berkeley, Cal., secretary, and Miss Amy B. Onken, Pi Beta Phi of Chapin, Ill., treasurer. Miss Christelle Ferguson, Chi Omega of Homer, La., will preside at sessions for editors of the various official fraternity publications, and Mrs. T. N. Alford, Pi Beta Phi of Coronado, Cal., is secretary treasurer of the editors' group.

Chief among the problems to receive attention at conferences of the national presidents and executive secretaries of the member groups will be that of financing and maintenance of fraternity houses.

The annual conference of the international executive board of Alpha Phi, which opened last Tuesday at the Orrington hotel in Evanston, will continue thru Thursday, after which three of Alpha Phi's convening officers will go to the Medinah club for the Panhellenic meeting. These include Mrs. William R. Cobb, international president, who came from Berkeley, Cal., to conduct the 10 day conference; Mrs. George F. Thomson of Greenwich, Conn., editor of Alpha Phi "Quarterly," and Mrs. Alice M. Roedel of Detroit, Mich., secretary treasurer.

War service activities of the 39 chapters of the sorority located thruout the United States and Canada is principal theme of the conference, with district governors as well as board members in attendance. The meeting is taking the place of the usual international convention, canceled for the duration in compliance with war time travel restrictions.

Another of the Panhellenic groups—Kappa Delta—will celebrate Founders' day with a buffet supper at 6 o'clock tonight at the chapter house on the Northwestern university campus in Evanston. National officers in attendance at this event will include Mrs. Herbert E. Mueller of Evanston, membership director; Mrs. Ade Schumacher of Evanston, chairman of the chapter house committee, and Mrs. Elmer T. Ohs of Chicago, Zeta province president.

Mrs. Walter Militzer, national president, is coming from Lincoln, Neb., to represent Kappa Delta at the Panhellenic meeting, as are Miss Pauline Reynolds of Fargo, S. D., national treasurer, and Miss Minnie Mae Prescott of Springfield, Mo., central office manager.

The Catholic Daughters to Meet Today

Chicago assembly of the Catholic Daughters of America will have the state regent, Mrs. Agnes C. Boyle of Centralia, who recently was elected a national director, as a special guest at its 31st anniversary luncheon at 1 o'clock today in the Hotel La Salle. Also among the guests will be Monsignor F. F. Connors of Aurora, chaplain for the state society, and the Rev. James C. Curry, the assembly chaplain.

Mrs. Robert Fox will preside, assisted by a committee of hostesses composed of Miss Sade Phelan, chairman on arrangements, and five court regents, Miss Genevieve Ryan, Mrs. Laura McDaniels, Miss Mabel Burns, Mrs. Irene Bentson, and Mrs. Ann Joyce.

Informal entertainment will be provided by Miss Peggy O'Neil, radio actress; Mrs. Jule Maroney, who will sing, and Mrs. Agnes English, who will give a skit based on her experiences in Turkey, where the English family lived for many years.

The principal work of the organization is the raising of funds in support of various Catholic charities. Chicago assembly, composed of courts in this archdiocese, owns and maintains a camp for girls, Cahokia, near Cedar lake.

Another large organization of Catholic women, the Chicago Archdiocesan group of the Daughters of Isabella, meets this week. Assembling at 8:30 o'clock Wednesday night in the Palmer House, the Isabellans will discuss plans for participation in a Halloween party for service men, to be given by the National Catholic Community Service Thursday night in the U. S. O. center at 131 South Wabash avenue, and for their own joint installation ceremonies, which are set for Friday, Nov. 26.

The meeting will be conducted by Mrs. James McGloon. A war time "snack" will be provided by a hospitality committee headed by Mrs. Agnes Kennedy.

Garden Club to Conduct 6th Judging Study

Flower enthusiasts will be turning their attention this week to the sixth Judging school of the Garden Club of Illinois, to be conducted Tuesday and Wednesday at the Palmer House under the direction of Mrs. J. Wilson McAllister of Kenilworth and her committee. Members of garden clubs from points thruout the state already have enrolled in the school, which is designed primarily for flower show exhibitors and judges. Mrs. McAllister points out, however, that enrollment is open to all who are interested, whether or not they are Garden club members.

Mrs. Raymond Knotts. [Tribune Photo.]

J. B. Wingert, professor of floriculture at the University of Illinois, will be instructor in the morning course on "Judging Horticultural Classes," and Dudley Crafts Watson, extension lecturer of the Art institute, will direct the afternoon study, "Judging Artistic Classes in Flower Shows." Dr. Watson, who has been the color authority for the clinic of good taste at the Art institute for 17 years, plans to illustrate his discussions on laws of color with chalk charts.

Optional examinations are to be held on Wednesday from 10 o'clock that morning until 1 o'clock, and in order to qualify for the "accredited judges'" list, an applicant must pass the examination for three years.

Mrs. Raymond Knotts, president of the state organization, will officially open the school at 10 o'clock on Tuesday. The purpose of the courses, she advises, is to raise the standard of community shows by providing accredited judges, and teaching exhibitors how to grow and display plant material in the best possible manner. The school this year climaxes an unprecedented season of war garden activities.

On Mrs. McAllister's committee are Miss Elizabeth R. Howland of Barrington, Mrs. Knotts of Berwyn, Mrs. Montague Ferry of Winnetka, Mrs. Ralph M. Kroscher and Mrs. L. T. Warren of Elmhurst, Mrs. O. W. Dynes and Mrs. Robert B. Ayres of Hinsdale, Miss Ann Lyons of Crystal Lake, and Mrs. Kenath T. Sponsel of Chicago.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, October 26, 1895.

Dear Julia: It is always a festival occasion when the Thomas concerts open, and this year it seemed particularly pleasant. Mr. Thomas, his health apparently restored by a summer in Europe, gave us a delightful popular program at the Auditorium. The weather was our wonderful October sort. I was sitting with some lovely friends. Everything conspired to make the concert memorable.

Mrs. T. B. Blackstone. [Moffett photo.]

Our seats for the Friday concerts are in Row K, and I really like them better than a box. [This isn't just "sour grapes." I don't care for a box, which often is drafty.] But it is enjoyable occasionally to sit with some opulent friend in the horseshoe circle, so I was delighted to accept the invitation of Mrs. T. B. Blackstone, who is religious in her attendance. Luncheon in the Blackstone home, 252 Michigan avenue, preceded the concert, and I enjoyed this, too. Others lunching with her were Madame Mary Bigot and Miss Edith Healy, daughters of the painter, G. P. A. Healy; Miss Virginia Dunham and Mrs. William Blair, who lives one block north of Mrs. Blackstone on Michigan avenue.

The Blackstone household is a quiet one, as they have no children. They keep their servants for years and it gives one a feeling of permanence in a transitory world to have the door always opened by George, her Negro butler, and to step into her smart carriage with William, her coachman, in maroon livery, on the box. They keep a groom, too, and I always feel so fashionable, driving in a carriage with two men on the box. I must tell you that one of the ladies at luncheon today told of a French maid from New York who was engaged by a wealthy Chicagoan and who was met at the station by the carriage, but with only the coachman on the box. The French maid was affronted by this. She had never been employed by a family, she said, where a carriage left the stable with only one man. Snobbery isn't confined to the upper realms of social life. Plenty of it below stairs! What would the Frenchwoman think of our simple menage, with one man on the box at all times?

It was a large and fashionable audience that greeted Mr. Thomas at this opening concert. Friends who have been separated during the summer greeted each other in the foyer and the boxes. As I looked about I felt proud to be a part of the throng representing the most intelligent and sympathetic in our city, those who can be counted on to support everything that contributes to culture and education. Mr. Thomas and his orchestra have done much to stimulate interest in good music in Chicago.

Mrs. Blackstone's box is next that of Marshall Field's, and Mr. Field's sister, Mrs. Henry H. Dibblee, was occupying that today. Mrs. George M. Pullman was near by, with a group of friends. Mrs. John J. Glessner, in her box, was listening with her usual rapt attention. I had time, in the intermission, for a little chat with my sweet young friend, Mrs. Ernest A. Hamill, who was using the box of her mother, Mrs. Henry Corwith, and had some Galena friends with her. The Corwiths came from Galena to Chicago and are always most loyal to their early home.

Among attractions of the week are the Stoddard lectures at Central Music Hall, which we never miss. Mr. Stoddard is to speak this week on Naples. Will always gets a ticket for our grandson Esmond, who adores travel pictures.

The Art institute opened its annual exhibit of pictures by American artists this week. It was a society event, as well as a great day for the artists. I thought it an unusually fine exhibit, with the paintings showing originality and a tendency to picture American scenes. One by Barnard of Boston was an example of this, "River Weeders," Connecticut farmers raking "eelgrass" from tidal streams. The artist has proved that not all paintable scenes are in Europe. With love,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

A Whittier Manuscript

Joseph T. Ryerson of Chicago writes us that he has in his collection the original manuscript of "The Burning of Chicago," mentioned in this column two weeks ago. Mr. Ryerson's collection is famous and it is pleasant to know that this important item is a part of it.

Mrs. Tom Thumb in Chicago

H. J. Mellum, Kenosha, Wis., writes us that 60 years ago General and Mrs. Tom Thumb were appearing in Central Music Hall. With his father, who was an assistant to George B. Carpenter, builder of the Music Hall, our correspondent went to the "green room" near the stage. His father pushed him out on the stage, bidding him accept the invitation, which had just been given, to kiss Mrs. Thumb.

"I knew what would happen if I did not obey," writes Mr. Mellum," for my father was Norwegian, accustomed to obedience from his children, so I took the line of least resistance. I don't remember just what followed, but he told me I had done a good job of kissing. I wanted to tell you this, because you have reminded me of so many characters I have met in Chicago in my lifetime."

New Winter Blouses Pep Up Costumes

By Rea Seeger.

This year of fashion marks the peak of importance of all blouses used for top contrast, not only with two piece suits of skirt and jacket but for all extra skirts, short or long. Blouses combine with long skirts to make dress parade outfits of great distinction. They team with short skirts to make party costumes, with separate skirts of tweed or trick woolens to make individualized day time outfits resembling dresses. Never before have blouse collections been so varied in color, style, and assortment!

The most interesting day time numbers are the new winter blouses of soft wool jersey. You'll find them with sleeves of long, short, or medium lengths. Sleeves are simply cut and fitted, or gathered shirtwaist style into narrow turn back cuffs. Some are three-quarter length shirred affairs to wear above or below the elbow. New dress parade blouses are of jersey, since there are innumerable models trimmed with velvet and decorative ribbons. Blouses this year are anything but the utilitarian sounding shirtwaists of former years; they are models equal to any occasion. Many of them are intricately designed, and all are smart, flattering affairs with prices to please every shopper.

The arrivals feature a new fabric, a combination of aralac and rayon. Aralac, the fabulous fabric made of milk, plus the featherweight mixture of rayon, achieves a warmth comparable to wool. Blouses made of this aralac-rayon combine are ideal winter suit accessories, especially the colorfully printed creations.

There are some made of the effective French print patterns, modernistic designs from the brush of a famous French painter. Black and dark colored backgrounds are imprinted with fanciful designs, such as feathers, figures, and amusing small designs of hats and canes and so on. These are the blouses for dark suit contrast.

Jacket blouses in gleaming satins are the kind to be worn either inside or outside the skirt band. Most of them are long of sleeve, the sleeves invariably finished with a smart turn back cuff to match turn back or convertible collars. Large covered buttons of the satin complete the simple details. These are the satin beauties to wear with velveteen or velvet suits or skirts.

Dozens of snow white lingerie blouses still are available, altho the all-silk affairs are rarely found. But the rayon crepes and silklike rayon textures are outstanding for their long wearing qualities and the smooth original finish that is retained after weeks of tubbing. Many new models are featured. New side closings, new outlines to the front closing, new trim accents, such as fagoted braid or effective open meshed lace are featured. A few models are trimmed with Irish crochet lace. Tailored blouses with demure bows at the throat, the old fashioned but always smoothly smart tucked bosom, and hemstitched plaits down the front sections are some of the classics.

For eye appeal try the taffeta and satin blouses made of gay colors in stripes, plaids, checks, and dots. Such a blouse makes any dark simple suit or skirt. The striped satins are definitely French in unusual color combines and in silhouette. Coquettish bows, bias bands, diagonal cut-in contrasts of clever insets, shirred sleeves and flattering necklines provide the necessary dressup flavor for any costume.

Sketched are seven new blouses picked from a newly unpacked collection of winter models. All are indicative of the assortment; all are new originals for suit and extra skirt duty. They have interesting price marks and will be found in a Chicago store. For further information, call Superior 0200.

Unrationed Kidneys Pay Off in Flavor

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1943: By The Chicago Tribune.]

The careful homemaker plans her menus with a point chart in front of her and does her marketing after consulting that chart, especially the one for meats and fats.

She saves herself time, points, and money by planning ahead, and she saves the meat dealer time. Sometimes it may be necessary for her to change her plans somewhat when she gets to market, but if she shops frequently enough she'll have an idea of the kinds of meat she can expect to find in her shop. If she knows how many points per pound she's required to pay, her dealer will bless her for taking a minimum of his time.

Sometimes a busy meat dealer will forget to take note of changes in point value. One recently asked me for 8 points for a pound of bacon, and another wanted 8 points for Swiss cheese, altho October charts show that each of these commodities has a 6 point value. In neither case was the dealer trying to cheat. He was just a little careless in keeping abreast of the changes. A woman who follows the ration charts will be able to avoid overpayment and help the dealer to correct such occasional mistakes.

Some meats have been removed from the ration lists. Choicest among them are kidneys. Kidneys aren't a very popular meat, altho they are one of the finest from a nutritional standpoint. They are rich in iron and in the important B vitamins. Properly cooked, they have a pleasant, distinctive flavor. Certainly they're worth cultivating a taste for. Persons who like kidneys at all usually become extremely fond of them. Now is the time to cast aside foolish little prejudices in meat eating and acquire a more versatile appreciation.

One of the nicest ways to encounter kidneys for the first time is in a veal chop. Braised veal kidney chops are a real delicacy and include only a small, tantalizing section of the kidney.

Beef kidney is less tender than veal, pork, or lamb kidneys, all of which may be cooked by broiling. Beef kidney requires braising—long, slow cooking with moist heat.

To broil kidneys from young animals, split them so that they may be threaded on a skewer. Marinate for an hour with French dressing, if you like, or just brush them well with bacon fat or oil. Skewer with bacon or slices of cooked onion, and broil about 5 minutes on each side. Or, broil the split kidneys by themselves and serve on toast.

Kidney stews have long been favored by epicures, but their appeal has been esoteric. They deserve to be appreciated by a larger fan following.

Beef Kidney Stew.

[Serves four.]

1 beef kidney
Flour, drippings
2 large onions
1 bay leaf
3 sprigs parsley
Salt, pepper, water
2 stalks celery, sliced
4 potatoes, cut in halves

Wash kidney, remove outer membrane, split and remove fat and heavy veins. Slice thinly. Bring to the boiling point in three changes of water. Drain and dredge with flour. Brown sliced onions lightly in fat, add kidney slices, and brown. Add bay leaf, parsley, salt, pepper, and water to cover. Cover pot and simmer gently for 25 minutes. Add celery and potato halves. Continue simmering until vegetables are tender, about half an hour longer. Add more salt and pepper, if necessary. If the stock has not cooked down to a rich gravy, thicken it with a flour and water paste. Additional seasonings may be used. Some cooks would add a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and a tablespoon of lemon juice to this recipe at the end of the cooking period.

Creole kidney stew is a more highly seasoned variation. To make it, brown a sliced green pepper with the onion [one onion should be sufficient] and use tomatoes or tomato juice in place of water.

Steak and kidney pie is another epicurean dish, a favorite with the English. Round steak usually is combined with kidneys for a pie, but a war time adaptation uses diced, left over pot roast instead of 13 point round.

Steak and Kidney Pie.

Prepare pie pastry for a double crust. Bake the pie in one casserole or in four individual dishes. Wash a beef kidney, cut it into half inch pieces, and simmer for 15 minutes. Discard water, then dredge meat with flour and brown in a small amount of hot fat. Add 1 cup diced cooked pot roast and ¼ cup minced onion, if desired. Pour 1⅓ cups meat stock or bouillon over meats, cover and simmer gently for 30 minutes longer. Thicken liquid with a flour and water paste. Line casserole with pastry, pour in meat and gravy, top with a pricked crust, and bake at 425 degrees for half an hour. Serve in the casserole.

As a fat saving measure the pie may be baked with only a top crust.

Fashions

Bobbing for apples and playing Halloween games is much more fun for the youngsters if they are dressed in costumes. A Chicago store has one of the most fascinating costume collections for children of all ages and a vast array of masks which beggar description. All are reasonably priced.

The clown mask at top with the enormous ears is created of white linen. It is beautifully marked with red and blue paint and definitely designed for laughter.

An ugly duckling is anything but with his bright yellow pants set off with a fetching blue tail feather to match the blue of the jacket. Wide lapels of bright print material add more color. A vivid blue bill and yellow face and hood complete the costume.

Girls' military costumes are bright and pretty affairs created in patriotic colors. The red skirt on the second figure has a band of blue at the hemline which matches the sleeveless jacket. A white blouse has red and gold braid trimming with tiny gold buttons parading down the front. Wide red cuffs are bound with blue striped material. A high white cap is visored in blue and accented with red braid and a pompon.

Miss Argentina is a colorful little piece in a costume of brilliant color. The bright red sateen skirt has a floral border in contrast to the black bolero which is trimmed with red and yellow braid. The red hat, with a minute black crown, has black and white braid around the edge of the brim.

Small boys can have fun but they don't have to act like Satan just because they are dressed in his attire. The bright red flannel suit, fastened down the back, has a leering skeleton and smartly costumed demon printed across the front. The red mask has fierce looking horns and an evil set of whiskers.

Most appealing is the leopard suit which all children love to wear. This tawny kitten has a delightful masked face with an alert expression and pert ears. The outfit is created of soft flannel material and fastens down the back.

CAN VITAMINS CHANGE GRAY HAIR?

According to Good Housekeeping tests with Calcium Pantothenate on gray hair:

Age—did not seem to affect results. The earliest response occurred in a 50 year old; the latest in a 23 year old.

Color—began to appear near the roots of the hair. The color may not appear all over the head at the same time. Symmetrical areas, perhaps on the temples or the back of the head, may show traces of color first, after which the color will spread to other parts of the head.

Time—varied from 1 month to 6 months.

Results—88% of those tested had positive evidence of a return of some hair color.

● Now thousands use GRAYVITA, which contains 10 mgm. of Calcium Pantothenate (the tested amount) PLUS 450 U.S.P. units of B_1. Try GRAYVITA. 30 day supply, $1.50, 100 days, $4.00. Phone, write

This Home-Mixed Cough Relief Is Truly Surprising

So Easy. No Cooking. Big Saving.

You may not know it, but in your own kitchen, you can easily prepare a really surprising relief for coughs due to colds. It's old-fashioned—your mother probably used it—but for real results, it can't be beaten.

First, make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. This is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for prompt action in throat and bronchial irritations.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. Thus you make a full pint of really splendid cough syrup, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and children love its pleasant taste.

And for quick relief, it's a wonder. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, eases the soreness, makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep. Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded.

THE TRIBUNE TRAVELERS' GUIDE

Visitors Enjoy Bucolic Charm of Missouri

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, MO.

Chicagoans are answering Excelsior Springs' call to "Come Into the Country" in goodly numbers this bright blue October weather. The John L. Trojans, the Gordon A. Roots, and the Lynn A. Watts spent the biggest share of last Saturday afternoon clustered 'round an old spring wagon wherein sat Mammy, Pappy, and the kids from way back in the country . . . they listened and learned . . . and all last evening they were busy trying out on us their newly acquired hillbilly vocabularies.

In tune with the simple life, The Elms featured "country fun night" this last week, with Chicagoans taking the cake in many a game. John J. O'Connors and Mrs. Carl A. Johnson, cheered on by Mrs. O'Connors and Mr. Johnson, fought for and won the last seat in "musical chairs"—a game rather like the old "going to Jerusalem" where one sits every time the music stops and there's always one less chair than person. In this version, originally from a Hollywood night spot, there are two persons to every chair which results in unrationed hilarity. There also was a showing of ladies' frivolous fall hats with men assembling and modeling the same. Louis Van Engers was a fetching and fashionable model wearing a cocky creation put together by Philip Erickson. Mrs. Erickson and Mrs. Van Engers were two of the judges.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Livingstone arrived recently on the night train from Chicago. Mrs. George Arthur Kelly of Chicago and her mother, Mrs. Blanche Forsyth of Detroit, Mich., are here holding a happy reunion with each other, and the George Howards are being welcomed back by their special Elms waiter, Newt, who has taken care of them on every visit for the last 15 autumns.

Last night was "Vicki Jones night" at The Elms, for small Vicki, daughter of the Harry Joneses of Chicago, was 6 years old. Dozens of guests sent birthday gifts, and the children paraded around the dining room with a flower trimmed cake.

The Ervin J. Goebels were seen in The Elms hotel shortly after their arrival from Chicago this week wearing identical brown suits, both tailored in the exact same style. Mrs. Goebel, tall and statuesque with amazing violet eyes, wears much of that same color.

St. Petersburg Hotels Ready for Civilians

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—[Special].—Three months after the army air forces relinquished St. Petersburg's principal hotels and restaurants, this city is now ready to accommodate civilian guests, with only six out of 150 hostelries still occupied by the military.

Still housing men in uniform, and not open to the public this winter are the Vinoy Park, the Soreno, Don Ce-Sar, Colonial, Concord, and Richelieu.

Among the better known hotels already receiving civilian guests are the Dennis, Suwannee, Bainbridge, Detroit, Royal Palm, Magnolia, Ballard, Seville, Tides, Wilmer, Sherman, and Beverly.

The Pennsylvania, Phell, and Princess Martha, large downtown hostelries, are scheduled to open about Nov. 1, and the Huntington about Dec. 1.

Most hotels which formerly operated dining rooms, restaurants or grills are reopening them.

Daytona Beach Expects Normal Winter Season

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. [Special].—Most of the housing accommodations for visitors in this winter resort are open for civilian use. Whereas the WACs at one time used most of the city's hotels and apartment houses, all except a few have been returned to civilian use. The army built its own big cantonment here for the 2d WAC training center and moved out of the hotels and apartments. As a consequence the city experienced a summer vacation resort season far beyond expectations. The normal range of winter visitors is expected this season as the city is easily reached by bus and rail lines.

Visitors Learn to Love Desert Out in Arizona

TUCSON, ARIZ.

The Old Pueblo, in the land of sunshine and bright weather, is a city to which you never say good-by. For to say good-by is to die a little, and here we cling tenaciously to life.

There are many reasons for this. There is, for example, the rough wooden cross atop a pile of stones out beyond Sasabe. Clumsily graven into the wood is a name, now illegible, and the legend "Una Victima del Desierto." The last resting place of some Mexican desert pedestrian reminds us that the desert is immense, not always friendly, and that, after all, men are not so tough. After looking at that, your metabolism picks up a little.

And then people have a tendency to sink down roots here. In contrast to the stubborn caliche that passes for soil on the desert, the social soil is fertile. Newcomers arrive, of course, in search of desert recreation, but most everybody seems to be coming home, even when they live in Chicago 11 months of the year and here only one.

Many midwesterners who originally came for a visit found themselves acquiring interests here: cattle, mining, or more prosaic ones.

Take the Charles Bruenings, for example. Mr. Bruening is a manufacturer in Chicago, but the cowpokes out Cortaro way know him by his cattle, branded with the Bar CB. Last year he went chain-store and leased the Lazy K Bar as well.

Mr. Bruening has an eye for good horses, as well as for the walking T-bones. Two of the caballos wandered across the mountain and into the Picture Rocks ranch corral last Sunday. Zed Francis, who rules the roost at Picture Rocks, would like to have applied the finders-keepers formula, but the brands were duly conspicuous. Besides, Bruening's watchful wrangler, Luke by name, hove into sight just then.

The rest of the Bruening tribe, all of them respected westerners by now, are out here for the winter—Mrs. Bruening, Buzzie, Barbara, and Chuck. The head of the family attended his affairs in Chicago thru last week, coming out over the weekend to keep his branding irons in the fire.

Lest the case of the Bar CB cattle convey the impression that only people of property stay regularly enamored of the southwest, the story of the Marvin Frosts needs to be recounted. Mr. and Mrs. Frost, of Lake Forest, are spending their fourth winter here. Marvin Jr., recently married, is graduating from the university this year.

Mr. Frost has just bought a piece of farm property near the desert sanatorium, currently being converted into the Tucson Medical center. One of his neighbors is Chuck Abbott, famed "cowboy photographer," who also has turned to the soil. But Mr. Frost is less interested in farming than he is in cultivating his hobby of rattlesnake study. He has built snake enclosures, where he beds down his pets, and this week he triumphantly announced the addition of nine baby rattlers to his colony.

At the guest ranches they keep coming, too. Miss Jean Romine of Chicago has recently returned to the Wildhorse ranch for her third winter. Miss Marion Austin, also of Chicago, has taken a house in Tucson for the winter.

Dr. and Mrs. William Myers of Coal Valley arrived at Rancho de Los Lomas in the Tucson mountains a fortnight ago. They rode horseback out to inspect the celebrated "Old Tucson" movie set the other evening by moonlight, and report that a leisurely equestrian life, with temperate evenings, is superior to life in Illinois, even at this time of the year.

Paul H. Raymer of Chicago came out a fortnight ago and stopped at El Conquistador, and altho he left for home this week, he became an Old Pueblo convert and is expected back before the winter gets too far advanced. His hobby is 35 millimeter photography, especially in color, which abounds this year in El Conquistador's spacious gardens.

Chicagoans have again reported in numbers to the University of Arizona and to Tucson area private schools. Among recent sorority pledges at the university are listed Patricia Holt, daughter of Mrs. Robert Holt of Elgin; Betty Passmore, daughter of the Dempster S. Passmores; Phyllis Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Johnson of Oak Park; Norma Weber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norton H. Weber of Winnetka; Alice Utley, daughter of the Nelson Utleys; Gail Frew, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard M. Frew; Gertrude Kraft, daughter of Mrs. Gertrude L. Kraft of Evanston; Shirley Streicker, daughter of the Samuel Streickers, and Joanne Bundy, daughter of the Homer Bundys of Oak Park.

And at the Russell Ranch school is Robert Stuart Douglas, son of Col. and Mrs. James H. Douglas Jr., of Lake Forest.

Mrs. Hugh McKenna of Chicago recently left La Fonda after having accompanied her daughter, Yvonne, to Tucson, where the latter enrolled in the university.

Mrs. Robert T. Heil, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard A. Glenn of Oak Park, is scheduled to leave town early in the week to visit her parents. Her husband, an army gunnery officer who was stationed in the Tucson area thruout the summer, has been transferred.

Life in downtown Tucson these days is much like downtown life every place else. At guest ranches out on the desert the war is as far away as the Volturno river. But in town the military is present, on Saturday nights fairly well covering the city and crowding its amusement facilities. Gayety there is, too, with dances and functions aplenty.

Eugene Brannan of Oak Park is at the Pepper Tree inn.

TO BE WED IN DECEMBER

Miss Ann Abell's engagement to Charles F. Schaefer, son of George J. Schaefer Sr. of Evanston, has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Roy Abell of Evanston. Miss Abell was graduated from the Frances Shimer Junior college, and her fiance is a graduate of Kenyon college in Ohio. The wedding is planned for December.

Housekeeping Aids Save Both Time and Labor

By Edith Weigle.

Helps for the busy home manager are doubly appreciated, these war days when most women are carrying on so many outside activities. When short cuts to housekeeping are efficient as well as easy on the budget they merit attention. Here are several such labor savers.

First, for some years women have been using a cleaner for upholsteries and fabrics that has come in powder form, and that you make into a foam by mixing with warm water. It's then applied to the material with a sponge and wiped off again with a damp cloth. Recently the manufacturer has put out this cleaner already mixed, so the housewife doesn't have anything to do but apply it to the article.

It's as efficient for rugs as it is for upholsteries and lamp shades. The point to bear in mind is never to soak the fabric with it.

Then, there's another product, made by another firm, that is good to use when you have a lot of silver to clean and it all must be done at once. You put some of this liquid in an aluminum pan, add very hot water and then immerse the pieces to be cleaned in the solution. Or if you don't have an aluminum pan, place an aluminum lid or other article in the receptacle you do use and proceed as before, being careful to see that the silver touches the aluminum while in the hot solution.

It should remain in the bath for at least 5 minutes. Then remove, rinse in clear, hot water, and polish lightly with a dry flannel cloth. A bottle of this silver cleaner is priced under 50 cents.

A new Venetian blind duster is another time saver. It's made to slip between the slats, being shaped like three fingers each one of which is covered in lamb's wool. These fingers can be turned while in use to provide clean sections. Also, of course, they are removable for washing. The new idea in this duster is the turning of each separate finger.

Then there's a cleaner for the tapes, too, that is easy to use. And it can be applied to other materials as well.

And finally, you might like to try a white, creamy liquid polish for your furniture and woodwork. Apply it on a damp cloth, then wipe off the excess and polish with a clean, dry cloth.

Synthetics are used to make a new "soapless suds" in powder form. Only one teaspoon is needed per gallon of water. Excellent for dishes and glassware and can be used for lingerie and hosiery, as well, and for windows, woodwork and walls. The 5 ounce box [enough for 48 washings] costs only 29 cents. Larger sizes are 59 and 98 cents. This powder will make suds even in cool water. It is odorless and is 100 per cent neutral.

Margaret Hart Is Bride of John McLean Bahner

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Lee Hart of Evanston have announced the marriage of their daughter, Margaret Allen, to John McLean Bahner of the army, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack E. Bahner of Cleveland, O. The vows were read in St. John's Episcopal church in Lafayette, Ind. Miss Sue Lindbloom of Evanston was the bride's only attendant and Bob Brodd of Purdue university was best man. The former Miss Hart was graduated last June from Purdue, where the bridegroom now is completing a course in engineering. They are at home in West Lafayette.

Household Forum

by Louise Bargelt

[Have you some household help that lightens labor or conserves on materials? Is there some comfort you could enjoy? We'll be glad to pass on your ideas to our readers. Address Louise Bargelt, The Chicago Tribune.]

Mrs. Tom B., Chicago: I find it a help when using embroidery thread directly from skein to unwind it onto a spring clothespin. The end of the thread can be pinched in its jaws and then wound round and round clothespin. This saves a lot of "tangling."

Mrs. B. M. H., Grand Rapids, Mich.: My husband made some shallow notches in the middle of some of my dress hangers. These are a convenience for garments with shoulder straps as they dont' slide off this way.

Ruth G., Rochester, N. Y.: Now that winter is coming on why can't some chemist concoct an anti-sneeze liquid, to inhale like smelling salts? This shouldn't be so hard to do since anti-sneeze solutions can now be sprayed into a room to kill streptococcus germs and it would be a comfort to sneezers and to those around them.

• • •

Mrs. Vera A., Chicago: I press chiffon or net between tissue paper to give a newer, fresher look.

• • •

Mrs. Elizabeth Look, Mosinee, Wis.: If you have a faded fiber rug, give it two coats of good enamel paint. It is easily cleaned and wears well. I've one that I've been using nearly six years and it is still good.

• • •

Mrs. John Ritzenthaler, Hoopeston, Ill.: I have always had trouble with my chrome chairs of my breakfast set because of black marks they made on my linoleum. I put a strip of adhesive tape on the bottom of them and now there are no more black marks on floor. Floor stuys clean longer and saves extra work when I scrub it.

• • •

Mrs. Pat D., Chicago: For years I've used just plain vinegar when I wanted to get rid of paint spatters from window glass nad screens. I warm vinegar first; it does the work more quickly than if cold.

Lady of the House

The harvest moon has come and gone and the hunter's moon is down. Autumn is a month old and the remnants of vegetable gardens have been made into last-of-all pickles, vegetable mix for salads and casseroles, soup mix, chowchow, and what not; so let's enjoy what may be left of "blue October weather."

Sue Wyatt-Semple, Kentucky homemaker, club woman, and author, takes a bit of time to—

Brighten Corners with Bouquets.

To those flower minded frost need never bring Dismay; for when fair weather friends droop darkly,
Let your imagination soar and sing:
A will to walk, and shears to snip with sharply—
Bright beauty can be had but for the cutting
These Indian summer days, when idly nutting!

Ramble along some little near-by road and bring back bits of autumn glory—or at least the memory of it. Little silver poplars—the upper side of the leaves turned golden and ruffled by a gentle wind—look like the big round gold and silver harvest cakes mother used to make, golden leaves on silvery frosting. Roadsides that are a kaleidoscope of vibrant color . . . great masses of burnished oak and painted maple against blue hills and a blue sky . . . a turn in the road leading straight into a huge canvas of autumn landscape, as if walking out of a harried, dusty yesterday into a glorious, promising tomorrow.

Along the homeward way a little white salt box house beside a shimmering Little River leading on to the village of Little Hope—which looked much more like a lot of peace and quiet and rest to us.

October.

I like the warm, sweet, acrid smell of smoke from autumn bonfires.

The rustle of dead leaves, the tiny spark, the sudden burst of flame, the dense white cloud of pungent smoke that lifts and vanishes and leaves long blue-white spirals floating upward to the blue October sky, like perfumed incense from the altar fires of Summer's fulfilled promises. —Beth Baillie.

Autumn.

On every leaf is written autumn's story,
Every tree a promise of her glory
Except the pine, which knows no gayer mood,
But ever stands in somber solitude.

Bare fields stretch out toward the warming sun,
Bespeaking that summer's work is done,
And tumbleweeds begin their rowdy game
As autumn bursts into brilliant flame!
—Carmen Carter.

Late Flower Show.

The glass box, gorgeously illuminant, stood nested among bigger and more imposing neighbors. The color was that of Mary's robe in the church window.

Once the glass box held rare jewels mined from the depths of the earth; crystalized corundum, iridescent opals, scintillating diamonds. Even the box was blown from the molten sands of the earth. Now it holds wild flowers from the deep marshy places.

The earth gives both beauty and destruction from the same source. Man is the traitor. Neither war nor distorted civilization can shatter the memorable light of the glass box!
—Ora Todd King.

Grandmother's Clock.

My grandmother's clock of quaint carved design
Is lovely as she, so charming and fine,
With face always cheery, and gay little song,
And hands that are busy the whole day long.

Both patiently teach small lessons to me
To use every minute so there will be Long hours of joy . . . thus the clock on the wall
Is much like grandmother, wisdom and all.
—Ida Meyer.

Florence Mitchell, who writes from Barrows-in-Furness, England, says the lady of the house there meets so many unusual things, but with a "victory air." She feels that behind all the vast production is womanhood. "So, to the lady of the house here [England] and there [United States] I say, 'May you always realize the value of a good appearance and a smile, when he returns from work, whatever the work may be in the national service.'"

And with a spray of seaweed "for luck from our shore," she sends—

At Close of Day.

When you come home at close of day,
The tangled skein of life is straightened out;
And when I hear your steps draw near,
You never know the joy that runs about.
When you came home with hands too soiled
For company or children's touch,
How can you know my heart's aglow?
To see you enter in can mean so much.

Thru the Looking Glass

Neatly combining prettiness and practicality, the "slanting-height" coiffure is the answer for the woman who is tired of the pompadour style but knows that the severe flat top effect will be too trying for her. The upswept, wave-softened sides give a lift to the facial contour, and the smooth line above the brow fashionably lacks frou-frou. The hair styles also are easy to manage.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, but not value. The column in this page contains offers to buy and sell. Include a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

The history of cities is one of the interesting sidelines which comes to the attention of collectors of postal markings. When the city is one of those which had its start as a frontier town it usually has added postal interest since the first mails often were carried by private express companies.

As an example there is Denver, Colo., which had its inception in the mining camp town of Auraria. At this time the region east of the Rocky mountains between the Kansas and Nebraska line and the Arkansas river was a part of Kansas Territory, the part of Colorado north of the first mentioned line was a part of Nebraska Territory. When the postoffice was established in Auraria it carried the abbreviation, Kan. Ter., or K. T. By June, 1859, a second settlement was made at the confluence of the South Platte river and Cherry creek under the name of Denver, and a little later a third group of houses and stores took the name of Highland.

In June, 1859, the two settlements contained only a half dozen frame structures altogether, but 10 months later the three towns contained upward of three thousand persons. About the first of April, 1860, a meeting was held in Auraria to discuss village matters and it was voted to change the name from Auraria to Denver City [West Division]. A letter of April 5, 1860, records that on the previous day the towns of Auraria and Denver had voted to unite under the name of Denver City.

The union of the two towns was ratified by a celebration on the bridge a few nights later and the account of that event in the mining rivalry of Juneautown and Kilbourncamp is in pleasant contrast to the town before they united to form the town of Milwaukee, Wis. Terr., for in this case, at the least provocation, one or the other burned or tore down a section of the connecting bridge.

Both Auraria and Denver City were postoffice names while the region was in Kansas Territory and under the Colorado regime the city was first known as Denver City and later as Denver. During the Kansas period the Pony Express and other private carriers took the mail to the region and fine copies of letters showing the postal markings of these companies are most desirable collectors' items.

MUST THE MARRIED WOMAN LIVE IN DOUBT?

The so-called "modern wife" often distrusts the half-knowledge gathered during her adolescence. But, instead of entering wifehood fully equipped with the intimate facts she needs, she resorts to over-strong solutions of acids for the douche which can actually burn, scar and even desensitize delicate tissue.

Today such risks are needless. Science has given womankind a safe—yet amazingly powerful liquid for the douche, Zonite. So powerful is Zonite, it kills instantly all germs and bacteria with which it comes in contact. Deodorizes—by actually destroying odors, leaving no telltale odor of its own. Protects personal daintiness! Yet! Zonite is non-caustic, non-poisonous, safe for delicate tissues. Over 20,000,000 bottles already bought. For modern hygienic protection you may never have known before, get Zonite at your druggist today.

According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1943: By Ely Culbertson.]

Experts, who are quick to double the opponents at the one or two level, are extremely chary when it comes to doubling much higher contracts. They realize that when a good opponent deliberately offers a "sacrifice" at the five, six, or seven level, he is not being altruistic, but that he may have sound reason to feel that the penalty he will pay will represent an actual saving. In the following hand a player refused to double a sacrifice seven bid of the opponents, wisely preferring to go out for a grand slam on his own account.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 spade	2 hearts	3 clubs	Pass
3 spades	4 hearts	4 no trump	Pass
5 no trump	7 hearts	7 no trump	Pass
Pass	Pass

Several of the above bids are worthy of notice.

Over North's one spade bid, East might have jumped all the way to four hearts, but felt that his best chance to buy the contract was to go slowly and keep on overbidding every adverse call. South had the values for a jump bid in clubs over East's two hearts, but [logically enough] preferred to let the bidding develop normally and to get natural rather than forced responses from his partner. The three club bid was a force in itself and there would be plenty of time, South reasoned, to show the tremendous power of his hand. This is a point worth noting. If East had not overcalled, South, of course, would have responded with a jump takeout in clubs, but with an intervening bid, it is often wise to save all the rounds of bidding possible.

North's rebid in spades was normal, as was East's four heart rebid. Now South started to reveal his true strength, and at the same time began an investigation of key cards by using the Culbertson four-five no trump convention. This was a perfect spot for its use because North, holding the kings of the only suits bid by the partnership, plus the spade ace, was able to raise to five no trump. East, now assured that the opponents were going to a slam and, equally assured from their bidding that this slam would be cold, attempted to coax a double by jumping all the way to seven hearts. He intended to make that bid, anyway, if the opponents stopped at a small slam, hence it was just as well to bid it immediately and perhaps stave off a grand slam.

South, however, was not to be sidetracked. He had definitely located the ace-king of spades and the king of clubs in his partner's hand, hence he could count six club tricks, two diamonds, one heart, and at least three spades, a total of 12 top tricks. The 13th trick appeared an overwhelming probability. It could come from the spade jack or the diamond queen; or, if both of these cards were lacking in North's hand, the announced length of North's spade suit and the squeeze possibilities inherent in any situation where 12 top tricks are available, made the grand slam almost a certainty.

Obviously, there was nothing to the play, indeed, declarer could spread the hand for no fewer than 16 tricks. East's seven heart bid, even tho vulnerable, could not have been defeated more than five tricks, 1,400 points, which would have been bad compensation indeed for the 2,220 points accruing to South's grand slam in no trump.

Rural Mexico a Country of Bright Colors

By Ruth Dickinson.

GUADALAJARA, MEXICO.

The first thing to greet our eye when we registered in the hotel at Guadalajara was a huge sign: "Guadalajara has the climate that California boasts about." Maybe it's true. The climate is delightful, clear crisp mornings and warm sunshiny mid-days. It is a clean city and a city of interesting shops, and shoes. What a delight—shoes that fit and no rationing coupon!

Lovely ranches with fine horses and cattle are in the surrounding country. It is the country of the rancheros and the caballeros.

Next to the cathedral with its famous Murillo's Assumption, the most interesting building to us was the orphanage with its frescoes by Jose Clemente Orozco. The orphanage is spotlessly clean and must be sympathetically and capably managed, the children played so normally and happily. There are 25 beautiful patios and gardens within the orphanage. We asked where the money came from for its maintenance and were told that every bit came from the National Lottery of Mexico.

Tlaquepaque, about four miles from Guadalajara, is a most interesting place to spend a full day watching the Tonala Indians making pottery of exquisite designs from the black clay. Each piece is individually formed and decorated by hand before baking, hence no two pieces are alike. The Indians work with dog hair brushes and carry their pattern in their heads. Of course, we bought a dinner set of gray pottery with a yellow design at El Arte Tonalteca and have been assured it will be delivered to our front door in the United States with every piece intact. The glassware, too, is individually wrought and the wonder is that it can be sold so cheaply.

In Mexico, however, there is no small change. We are told that the Indians are hoarding all the silver. One can't buy small things for there is no change. The peso—corresponding to our dollar bill—is torn in half for 50 centavos and in four pieces for 25 centavos and the Chamber of Commerce of Guadalajara has issued scrip as legal tender.

To see the real life of a country one has to get away from cities, which, after all, are all more or less alike when a certain point of civilization has been reached. So, early Sunday morning we left Guadalajara by bus for Patzcuaro. Riding a bus anywhere is likely to be a bit of an adventure, but particularly so in Mexico when the right of way goes to whoever can blow his horn the loudest, and we had right of way the entire trip. There doesn't seem to be any speed law either.

Our comfort was a sweet little madonna the driver carried in a small niche or shrine of flowers over the rear vision mirror and a baby's crocheted bootee hanging from it. We knew he was a kindly man and we soon began to have an admiration for his ability to drive within a fraction of an inch of an object, animal or person and never touch a thing. Down a mountain side we would swoop, practically almost scraping the many pack trains of burros on the highway. These little animals are certainly the beasts of burden of Mexico and carry household goods, sacks of any thing and everything, and sheaves of corn. Sometimes they are just enormous walking haystacks with only their tails discernable. We went around curves banking to leeward like a sailboat. But, in spite of it all, our seats were comfortable and it is the one way to see Mexico when you haven't your own car.

Sunday is market day and all along the road were peasants and burros carrying their wares to market. The little villages are only about 10 miles apart and around each village plaza are the colorful stands. Luscious fruit from the nearby tropics, beautiful native lacquer ware, gay serapes, sombreros, sandals, baskets, horrible and deadly looking colored candy and cakes and strolling musicians in their tight fitting charro trousers and jacket and wide straw sombrero abound.

I longed to have the bus stop, but we fairly galloped thru the narrow streets. Many of the peasant women going to market carried huge trays of beautiful flowers or a jar of water balancing on their heads and would scamper off to the side of the road without spilling a flower or a drop of water. The little children's market day costume seemed to be a sort of shirt mid-rift and that was all. As the sun climbed higher in the sky and the day was further advanced along would come a couple of happy "borrachos," leaning on one another and singing away.

Toward noon we were in the mountains with tall pines and live oaks and little lakes gleaming below us like some bright jewel. We were in Michoacan, the land of the lakes, the same meaning as our Michigan. We were in Tarascan country, where the woman still wears a heavy woven skirt of red, black, lavender or checkered, depending upon what village she comes from. It is long, with a contrasting band around the bottom and knife plaited, which, I understand, she does each morning as she wraps the skirt around her. Low on her hips the skirt is held in place with a different color, softly woven sash.

She wears many strands of "Christmas tree" beads and long silver earrings. But the loveliest part of her whole costume is the ever-present reboza. It, too, is woven and is usually of dark blue or purple. It wraps around her head, around her shoulders and around her waist. Invariably two brown legs protrude from the back and that is all one sees of the baby. The reboza is most graceful and so are the Tarascan women. They are always barefooted and run at a dog trot over the cobble stones with the baby in the reboza and a tray of food or flowers balancing on their heads.

Women in War Work - - - - By Kate Massee

Capt. Margaret R. Stewart.

As the war progresses more and more women are needed in uniform. Heads of the various services point out that there are tasks in the army, navy, coast guard, and marine corps which only women are especially qualified to do.

Maj. Gen. H. S. Aurand, commanding general of the army 6th service command, stated recently that, in his opinion, every woman under 45 years of age, with no children under 14, should be engaged in war industry or wear a service uniform.

This department receives numerous letters and telephone calls requesting the location of recruiting offices in Chicago. Following are the addresses of headquarters of the different organizations in the Chicago area.

WAC [women's army corps]—175 West Jackson boulevard, room 913-A. Telephone, Wabash 6792. Chief recruiting officer, Capt. Margaret R. Stewart.

WAVES [women's reserve of the United States naval reserve]—Room 300, Board of Trade building. Telephone, Wabash 2910. Officer in charge of recruiting, Lt. [j. g.] Margaret Harding Cecil.

SPARS [women's reserve of the United States coast guard]—53 West Jackson boulevard. Telephone, Harrison 0442. Chief recruiting officer, Lt. [j. g.] Mary Daly.

Women's reserve of the United States marine corps—Room 1170, Board of Trade building. Telephone Wabash 2910. Lt. Katherine B. Persons, recruiting officer.

An announcement of interest in connection with the all-states WAC recruiting drive is the one Capt. Stewart, senior WAC recruiting officer in Illinois, made last week. In a statement at that time Capt. Stewart said that enlistees in the women's army corps now may apply directly for assignment to the army air corps. Women in that branch of the service will be known as air WACs.

Women assigned to the air corps will serve in 86 different jobs announced by the army air forces, including administration, parachute rigging, librarian, bombsight mechanic, Link trainer instructor, telegraph operator, mechanical draftsman, electrical draftsman, cartographer, cryptanalyst, blueprinter, photo interpreter, finger printer, and motor electrician. Air WACs also will work in parachute lofts and air field control towers.

Air WACs, like all other members of the women's army corps and of the regular army, may be assigned to foreign duty at any time. Neither regular WACs nor air WACs will be sent into combat, however.

The same privileges held by other WACs will be extended to the air force WACs, Capt. Stewart stated. All WAC officers, in whatever branch of the army, now come up thru the ranks, and all members are entitled to apply for admission to officer candidate schools.

The intensive recruiting of air WACs will continue until Dec. 7 as a part of the total campaign under the direction, in Illinois, of Gov. Dwight H. Green.

The American women's voluntary services, Chicago metropolitan unit, is seeking many volunteers to staff WAC recruiting booths to be set up thruout the loop area. Women interested in signing up with the AWVS to assist in the campaign may call headquarters, Andover 3380, or apply in person at AWVS offices, 160 North La Salle street.

[This department reports on women's war activities and answers questions regarding such activities.]

Nervous Child Needs Special Type of Care

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1943: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

"I have a little girl who is getting completely out of hand. She is only 2 years old, but already she goes into rages if she can't get her way. She is full of mischief and nervous. I believe the fact that I have to work to support her is the reason she has gotten out of control in the last six months. She screams at all hours of the night when she wakes up, frightened apparently, and I have to take her into my bed for the rest of the night. It's gotten to be so that I put her in my bed from the start, as she wakes up once each night if put in her own crib.

"Sometimes she will say she won't do a certain thing I don't want her to do, but the next minute she is doing it. I realize she is only a baby and scolding or even spanking does no good. I also have a son of 6 months, but my daughter is not jealous of him."

After reading this letter, it seems to me that some points might be worth thinking about:

First—It is possible that the trouble with this small daughter could be traced to the kind of care that she receives in the day time while her mother is away. Lack of understanding then would be apt to make her unhappy, confused, and uneven and difficult in her behavior.

Second—Part of the trouble may be that she has so little of her mother's time during the week that she tries to absorb her attention when she is at home. She would try then in every possible way, agreeable and disagreeable, to make her mother notice her.

Third—Another reason for the screaming, disobedience, and nervousness may be that whoever minds her during the time that her mother is away may have made some serious mistake in managing her.

Fourth—Whoever watches over her while her mother is away, may scold or punish her so that she is rather generally fearful. Also, at this age, and even when much older, children develop sudden fears, some of which result in bad dreams or "night terrors." It is not always possible for us to trace the cause of these fears of young children.

Another point is that it is not at all unusual for babies and children who have become overtired or have been unduly excited during the day, to wake up at night crying. Whoever minds this little girl should see that she has a good rest period in the day time, also plenty of outdoors play. When she wakes up at night she should be spoken to gently. Even her sleep will be favorably affected by her happier day time.

Some of the behavior of the small daughter may be due to the coming of the new baby brother, even tho she may not be jealous. The newcomer in the family often causes difficulty which doesn't show itself in the direct form of jealousy.

This small daughter needs special understanding, patience, real interest, and a warm close companionship from her mother when she is at home.
